David 'Obscene, Disgusting'

Shoppers are startled, mothers are shocked and it seems that the giant nude statue will have to go.

The 17-foot, six-inch plaster reproduction of Michelangelo's David was installed in suburban Pointe-Claire shopping centre near Montreal two weeks ago.

Local housewives condemned it as "obscene," "disgusting" and "morally bad" for their children.

The majority thought David would look fine in a museum. But they found the statue a shocker in a place where the week's grocery list is uppermost in the minds of most passers-by.

The statue is among three reproductions purchased in Italy by R. C. Gibson, general manager of Simpson's Ltd. He donated David to the shopping centre.

Sales tax, transportation, customs duty and installation brought the cost of the reproductions to more than $10,000.

"It now seems public opinion will force us to find a new home for the statue," George Thompson, Simpson's Montreal sales promotion manager, said sadly Friday.

7,000 IN HALIFAX

Big Response For Pearson

By IAN MacDONALD
Ottawa Bureau Staff Writer

HALIFAX—Prime Minister Pearson Friday night carried a total war-on-poverty pledge to 7,000 cheering Nova Scotians at the Atlantic provinces' biggest political rally.

They applauded and roared as Pearson outlined his party's achievements and its plan for the future.

They burst into rounds of applause as he upheld his government's slashing of the unemployment rate, and its policies for higher education to meet job problems of the future.

And they clapped even louder as he asked for a majority government after Nov. 8 to put all the plans into full effect.

It was his greatest response of the campaign, and he responded to it from the moment he was led by a piper into the darkened Halifax arena with Mrs. Pearson.

He was preceded by Don Messer and his Islanders — the TV favorites who provided a toe-tapping introduction — but Pearson held the audience on his own.

He stuck to politics, but he took a few slaps at the opposition.

Pearson said the Liberal party had genuine unity, and that he wasn't surrounded by colleagues "prepared to take command when the skipper goes down with the ship."

He asked the audience if they wanted to abandon progress in return for "wasted years that ended in sordid collapse in bitterness and disunity in 1963."

"We want a majority to keep this success going," Pearson added.

He raised a laugh when he referred to a year-old statement by Tory spokesman Dalton Camp that in making a god of its leader the Tories had "made sheep of ourselves."

Opposition Leader Diefenbaker opened his campaign in Halifax four weeks ago and drew a crowd of about 2,000.

Officials at the rink, police, and Halifax newsmen agreed that the attendance of just over 7,000 was the greatest at any political rally in the Atlantic provinces.

Weather Big Question Mark Monday

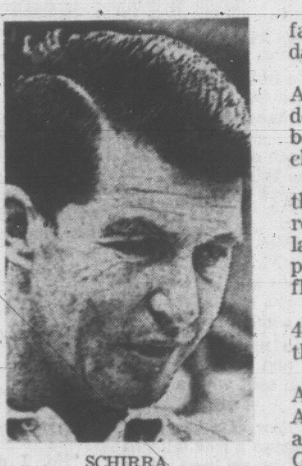
SPACE PILOTS SET FOR HOOK-UP TRY

CAPE KENNEDY, Fla. (AP)—Passing every test with ease, the Gemini 6 pilots racked up still more flight rehearsals today for Monday's date with a target in space. Only the weather posed a question mark.

Weathermen now say they fear "sluggish cloud formations" over the launch area Monday, but so far they are not expected to be serious enough to bar the launching of the Gemini 6 and the target Agena.

Command pilot Walter Schirra and pilot Thomas Stafford already have logged more than 125 hours in the various simulators in the last six months—well over the 100 hours of practice flight most Gemini crews have taken into space.

But in their brief one or two-day flight, Schirra and Stafford have by far the most difficult flying job to date.



SCHIRRA
. . . command pilot

They will hunt down the target Agena rocket, match its orbit and dock with it—the first time this has been done. It is a precise and taxing chore.

U.S. Space Agency spokesmen said the crew already has more than 50 rendezvous runs in the Gemini simulator, including some in which they pretended they had lost some of their flight capability.

Already, 10,000 men, 18 ships and 40 aircraft are deployed to support the launch operation Monday.

Fuel was loaded Friday into the Atlas rocket that will launch the Agena target rocket into space at 11 a.m. EDT (8 a.m. PDT) Monday. The Gemini 6 will follow into space aboard a Titan 2 rocket at 12:41 p.m.

Klansman Freed In Killing

PARIS (AP)—Dr. Martin Luther King announced today he is cutting short a European trip to return home Monday to organize marches in protest against the acquittal of a Ku Klux Klansman in the death of a white civil rights worker.

Collie Leroy Wilkins Jr., 21, was freed in Hayneville, Ala., Friday after being acquitted of the slaying of Mrs. Viola Liuzzo.

Dr. King called the jury verdict "one of the most dastardly crimes against justice that the South has performed to date."

In a statement, Dr. King said the acquittal of Wilkins "threatens all of the progress that we have made up to this point in the South, for if murder can go unpunished who will dare to use public accommodation or attempt to register to vote when death may well be the price of these rights.

SERIOUS CHALLENGE

"It is also a serious challenge to the non-violent movement. We have been patient. We have waited for the morning of justice to emerge. Now we have no alternative but to organize a massive direct action movement to make murder of persons in the pursuit of their constitutional rights a federal crime, tried in the federal judicial seat.

"We will organize marches on courthouses, including Lowndes County, and possibly institute economic sanctions against communities which perpetuate such mockery of justice. It is either this militant non-violent solution or risk the beginning of vigilante justice from Negroes in the South."

Alabama's Attorney-General Richmond Flowers said in Hayneville two other Ku Klux Klansmen will be tried on murder charges despite Wilkins' acquittal.

The five-day trial was Wilkins' second for the murder of the 39-year-old Detroit housewife. The first ended in a mistrial with a deadlocked jury.

A jury of 12 white men, which included four men challenged by Flowers for prejudice, reported the acquittal verdict after deliberating about one hour and 45 minutes. The defendant, a Fairfield, Ala., mechanic, smiled broadly.

The verdict was greeted with applause by a crowded courtroom in the century-old Lowndes County courthouse, built with slave labor.

The spectators included the other two Klansmen who Flowers said will be tried—Eugene Thomas, 42, and William Orville Eaton, 41, both of Bessemer, Ala.

Liberals Mix Signals On Arson, Says Dief

By JOYCE FAIRBAIRN
Ottawa Bureau Staff Writer

PORT HOPE, Ont.—Opposition Leader John Diefenbaker suggested Friday night that the prime minister should check his sources before he says that charges of wrongdoing in high places are "only insinuations."

Diefenbaker faced his audience armed with the Toronto Globe and Mail's front page of Friday morning.

In the northwest corner there was a report of a Pearson statement saying there was "no connection" between the fraudulent bankruptcies and arsons which hold the spotlight in Quebec police investigations, Diefenbaker said.

"Then in the northeast corner of that same page there was a report of Quebec's Justice Minister Claude Wagner—that outstanding man—telling Washington that the arson and bankruptcy cases are connected," he said.

"Mr. Pearson should talk to Mr. Wagner the next time and get the information straight," said Diefenbaker. He said that the prime minister had stated at the start of the campaign that he didn't intend to discuss these issues.

"Well he did it yesterday and didn't do a very good job of it," he said.

WON'T TELL HIM

Diefenbaker added that the prime minister's comments prompted him to think of the advertisement—"Even your best friends won't tell you."

Canada's reputation abroad has been "besmirched" because of a government that hasn't acted, the Tory leader said. "They have gone over my record with triple microscopes, but never can they say I didn't regard honesty as essential."

Canadian voters had one question to ask themselves on election day, he said.

"Just ask whether you condone a racketeer (Lucien Rivard) being helped by those in high authority—that's the issue that comes home to every mother in the country."

"Are you going to lay the welcome mat open to those who are

Rhodesian Veterans Protest U.K. Stand

SALISBURY (Reuters)—Some 1,200 Rhodesian ex-servicemen have sent the Queen and the British, Rhodesian and Canadian prime ministers a letter protesting Britain's attitude on Rhodesian independence, it was learned today.

C. R. Kirby, a Second World War veteran, said they also threatened to return their medals to the British government and make a bonfire of their British passports.

Meanwhile, Prime Minister Ian Smith and his cabinet had an informal meeting today in preparation for the arrival here Monday of British Prime Minister Wilson, in a bid to break the deadlock on the independence issue.

Friday night, Rhodesia sent a veiled warning to its Negro-ruled northern neighbor, Zambia, to refrain from making trouble if Rhodesia seized independence.

DIEFENBAKER REMAINS BEST-LIKED LEADER

Prairies Still Reject Liberals

By PETER REGENSTREIF

REGINA—The government is running up against a solid wall of rejection as it tries to pick up the odd Prairie seat to balance its representation in central Canada.

Aside from traditional strength, the Liberals command virtually no fresh support in Manitoba and Saskatchewan. The electorate here will have almost nothing to do with them.

And it persists in its antipathy toward the government in spite of its expectation that the Liberals will still be in office after election day.

A Regina waiter who is voting NDP shrugged: "If I made a bet, I'd bet the same one gets in and its too bad."

Just outside Saskatoon, a farmer's wife was defiant: "Maybe the Liberals will win again. But the farmers have to have something here. That's why we vote Conservative. We don't care who wins."

The Liberals receive no praise for anything — the wheat sales, the pension plan, the flag or the general prosperity. Instead, they are denounced as "caring only for themselves"—a nice way of calling them, as many respondents do, "a bunch of crooks"—and for "doing nothing."

This adamant rejection of Pearson and his government is astonishing in its intensity. The Liberals have gotten themselves into a terrible bind here and it is going to take more than an election campaign or two to get out of it.

For, on top of all this, throughout the two provinces, besides being seen as the party of the east, the Liberals are

SAFE HAVEN FOUND IN VICTORIA

Haunts Trail of Adventure

By JIM HUME

LOOKING YOUNGER than his 82 years, R. T. S. "Peter" Durston stands before a few of the many priceless pieces of art collected in his world travels.

When a man is 18 and looking for adventure he's just likely to find it in all kinds of exotic places.

R. T. S. "Peter" Durston was hardly shaving when he decided that life in England was a little too stale for his tastes.

That was in 1901 when he falsified his age, joined the Imperial Yeomanry and found himself in South Africa for the 1902 peace celebrations called to mark the end of the Boer War.

It was also the year that marked the commencement of several globe-circling tours that would take him to a sugar plantation in British Guiana, rubber plantations in Malaya, trips to China, Australia, Hawaii, India and Canada.

Overlooks Sea

He's retired now at 82. Content to potter in his beautiful garden overlooking the sea at 2420 Queenswood, contemplate hundreds of object d'art gathered in his travels or, when the mood takes him, boldly stroke canvas to produce paintings which place him high in the ranks of amateur artists.

Before he found his safe haven in Victoria the quietly spoken gentleman had found himself in Los Angeles when the great earthquake toppled San Francisco.

In Honolulu when the Japanese bombers came out of the morning sunrise to shatter the United States' Pacific fleet.

Cruiser Sank

And in Penang, Malaya, during the First World War when the German cruiser Emden sailed calmly into harbor, sank a Russian cruiser and equally calmly headed back out to sea.

"I was in San Francisco a couple of days before the earthquake," he recalled this week sitting in his den overlooking tailored lawns and a flood tide.

"I just decided to go to Los Angeles for a few days. A good job I did because when I went back to 'Frisco a couple of days after the earthquake the hotel I had been staying in had its entire front wall lying in the street."

Pro-British

Though strongly pro-British Mr. Durston recalls with some admiration the Emden incident.

"They put on a false funnel, you know, to make her look like a British cruiser. She just sailed proudly into the harbor, torpedoed this Russian cruiser and sailed out again. It was all over before anyone realized what was going on.

"She was caught later and sunk by the Australian cruiser Sidney off the Cocos Islands."

As for Pearl Harbor, Mr. Durston recalls the roar of the aircraft but says like everyone else he and his wife thought they were U.S. planes returning from a dawn patrol.

Columns of Smoke

"It wasn't until we saw the huge columns of smoke billowing up from the airbase that we realized something was wrong. We were on the other side of the island, you see, and so, in a way, quite remote from what was happening."

Why would a man who spent 19 years in Hawaii after retiring from business suddenly up-stakes and come to Victoria?

"It's simple, really," answered Mr. Durston. "I had a great desire to live under the British flag again and I was tired of the tropics. I wanted to end my days in a country where you have four seasons.

"I came to Victoria in 1952—I had passed through here several times and always liked it—looked at two houses, both on Queenswood, and chose this one.

"I won't give up this place."

When Mrs. Durston died last year Mr. Durston was left without a living relative in the world, but the thought does not sadden him.

"I have many very fine friends and do not feel alone," he said with a quiet smile.

On the floor of a basement room stretches a now tattered but once magnificent tiger skin.

"I don't hold with killing animals myself," he said. "But my brother shot this one in India shortly before he was killed by a water buffalo."

Jungle Revenge

"He'd just shot the tiger when he heard of this splendid buffalo specimen. He wounded it with his first shot and then unwisely followed it into the bush. It charged and killed him on the spot. I suppose you could say it was the revenge of the jungle.

"I keep saying I'll get rid of the rug, but I keep it."

This year Mr. Durston made a pilgrimage to South Africa to meet old friends from his Malaya rubber planting days and pick up his adventure trail where it all started more than 60 years ago.

In Rhodesia he found everything calm and apparently happy on the surface.

People Happy

"The people there seem very happy and prosperous," he said. "I admit I know little about the administrative setup there but I don't see, as a visitor, any signs of discord between the whites and the natives."

Would the man, who has watched the sunrise on Mount Everest and seen it set in tropic glory in Hawaii change anything if he had it all to do over again?

He puffed on his pipe.

No Regrets

"No, I don't think so. It has been a wonderful life. The best years were in Malaya, but I have no regrets. No I wouldn't change anything."

Next year Mr. Durston may travel again.

"My friends want me to visit them again in Africa, but travel isn't what it used to be. Passports and visas were unknown when I started out. Now you need a passport to cross some rivers in Africa.

"If I do go it will be just for a visit. This is my home now and I'm too old to pull up my roots again."

Outside the housekeeper raked leaves from the driveway, a fierce boxer dog prowled the grounds, seagulls wheeled overhead and the tide slapped the rocks just below the lawn.

It wasn't hard to figure out why a man who has seen so much across the years could feel at peace.

Labor Minister MacEachen hammered away at the employment situation.

He said the Pearson government had created twice as many jobs in six months as the Tories had in the Diefenbaker years.

STUDENTS HECKLE

Pearson was heckled slightly by a group of university students close to the stage who had a placard stating "scandal," and who chanted a few times about being deprived of their vote.

Pearson went right into the country's prosperity and talked of the years of "boom and bust."

He said the Liberal governbent had brought about integration of the services in the interest of efficiency.

Pearson said the navy was having its interest looked after in re-equipping, and in its future.

He referred to reduced unemployment in the Maritimes and the rest of Canada under the Liberal administration.

He diplomatically approached the offshore mineral rights question.

He said Ottawa was not trying to infringe on provincial rights.

He said referral of the question of jurisdiction to the Supreme Court of Canada would settle the issue.

Pearson said if the court decided the rights were provincial, they would be without legal question, which is not the current situation.

But he said if they declared the federal responsibility, the federal government would be prepared to negotiate with the provinces on the matter, recognizing the provincial interest and "perhaps provincial control of offshore development."

MORE MONEY

Pearson stated the Liberals had provided more money for Atlantic province development than the Tories and in more easily attainable form.

The prime minister stated that while Canada's over-all prosperity is booming, there are pockets that are behind the average.

He said the government's plan for a war-in-poverty "requires a marshalling of all the forces of government department and agencies. It requires action of a kind that has to be worked out co-operatively between the federal government and the provinces."

A heckler who called out several times about old-age pension appeared to deflect Pearson from a prepared text.

He turned to old-age pension, and said his government had a proposal that would provide pension of $100 a month or more for those who needed them.

Pearson spoke of the many facets of social welfare and his party's policies, and was applauded several times.

Death Ends Record

WHITE ROCK (CP)—A fatality-free record of 2½ years was broken with the death of a motorcycle passenger here today. John Peter Taylor, 17, of Surrey, died after the motorcycle hit a metal railing.

NO INQUEST INTO DEATH

Coroner Edmond Jorre de St. Jorre says an inquest will not be held into the death of John James, 81, who fell to his death from the window of a rest home Thursday evening.

Mr. St. Jorre said he has held an inquiry into the mishap and is satisfied there was no negligence by the staff at the rest home.

Kenny Death Inquest Slated

An inquest will be held early next week into the death of David Kenny, 1927 Quamichan.

The 48-year-old man died in a smash-up involving four cars on Government Street early Friday morning.

Coroner Edmond Jorre de St. Jorre said he has the results of an autopsy performed on Mr. Kenny's body. He said the exact time of the inquest will be set Monday.

PAINTED DOLLS DANGEROUS, ARMY RULES

COLUMBUS, Ga. (AP) — Army demolition experts continued a roundup of hand-made Vietnamese dolls today after reports the beautiful attired gifts from overseas might be rigged with explosives.

The dolls—mailed to families and relatives of American servicemen in Viet Nam—began to pour into Fort Benning, Ga., Friday after reports that some of the 15-inch gifts might conceal explosives planted by the Viet Cong to injure U.S. Soldiers.

Lieut. W. M. Grimm, commanding officer of the 89th Ordinance Detachment, said his men collected more than 50 dolls Friday and have a backlog of about 75 calls to pick up others. So far, they have found no explosives.

going to destroy the souls of your fellow Canadians?"

A vote for a Liberal candidate is a vote for approval of all the "tinkering and monkey business that has gone on for two and one-half years under the table," Diefenbaker said.

POLITICAL HUG

Earlier in the day the granddaddy of Ontario Conservatism, Leslie Frost, gave Diefenbaker a political bear hug and urged the province to vote for "a pretty good fellow."

The former strongman premier, who turned the reins over to John Robarts, made one of his rare political speeches.

"You know where my sympathies lie," smiled the white-haired veteran.

"John's a fighter and he doesn't bury things under the rug," Frost said. "You know where he stands. I think he's a pretty good fellow."

Diefenbaker, obviously pleased with the boost from his older Tory compatriot, lashed out at Pearson's statements that a $25 per month increased in the old age pension would cost Canada $850 million.

ABSOLUTELY UNTRUE

"I dont think I can make it clearer than by saying it is absolutely untrue," he said.

Diefenbaker said that the pension increase, if it were given to those of 69 years and over, would cost only $350 million.

Mr. Diefenbaker's schedule takes him into the five Eastern Canada provincial capitals next week.

The activity begins in Toronto, where he'll take a day off Sunday, with a Monday luncheon and an evening rally at a high school.

OVERNIGHT TRAIN

He takes an overnight train to Montreal, whistle-stopping Tuesday to Quebec City for an evening rally.

The Diefenbaker party flies to Fredericton Wednesday. Later, he visits the dockyard at Saint John and speaks at an evening rally at the Lord Beaverbrook rink.

The Conservative leader is to fly to Summerside, P.E.I., arriving shortly after midnight. He'll tour Prince County and address rallies.

Medicare Plan Just 'Blackmail'

The proposed medicare scheme by the Liberal government "is nothing short of a form of blackmail," a former Progressive Conservative MP said Friday.

Eldon Woolliams told a Campbell River audience the question of medicare has not been before Parliament by way of resolution or bill, but worked out at federal-provincial conferences.

The MP for Bow River in the last Parliament said the Liberals told provincial premiers the plan will be compulsory, but the provinces could opt out.

"You either take our scheme or leave it, but if you don't take it you will pay for it anyhow," he said. "It's what we term the castor oil treatment."

Mr. Woolliams said he is apposed to "socialization" of doctors and favored a medicare plan to cover just the needy.

The controversial movie Mr. Pearson, commissioned but never shown by the CBC, will be shown twice next week at the University of Victoria.

First showing is at 12:30 noon Monday in Room 168, Elliott Building, Gordon Head campus, and the second at 7:30 p.m. Wednesday, Room 106, Paul Building, Lansdowne Campus. The public is invited.

Other university meetings next week include NDP Leader T. C. Douglas at 2 p.m. Thursday in the Student Union Building, along with the four Vancouver Island candidates.

The following week, on Nov. 3, Immigration Minister Jack Nicholson will speak at 12:30 noon in Room 167, Elliott Building.

Victoria Progressive Conservative candidate Rev. Clifford Waite ran into strong heckling when talking to students at the University of Victoria Friday.

Some students branded Conservative leader John Diefenbaker's election attacks on scandals as McCarthyism.

"I feel it's Mr. Diefenbaker's responsibility to bring these charges before the public," said Mr. Waite.

He also urged Canadians to work harder for increased industrial production and said action is needed for pensioners living in "elegant poverty on one meal a day—and tea, bread or toast at other eating times."

Bill Macadam, Conservative candidate for Comox-Alberni, may have the most solid election platform of all.

His campaign posters urge people to "Macadamize" north Vancouver Island.

He's a descendant of the family that invented the macadamizing process for road surfaces.

WEATHER SYNOPSIS

Under mainly clear skies overnight temperatures dropped to freezing at many interior points and fog formed in low lying coastal areas. Cloud and some rain continued on the extreme north coast. A ridge of high pressure extending over Idaho into B.C. is responsible for the pleasant fall weather over most of the province. However, Pacific storms continue to thrust against the ridge from the west and some cloud is forecast to spread to the lower mainland on Sunday.

'CAN'T DO PROPER JOB WITHOUT A MAJORITY'

By ROGER STONEBANKS

The major campaign issue in the forthcoming election, "purely and simply," is the need for majority government, says the Liberal candidate in Victoria.

"We made certain promises in 1963 and two years later we have a very impressive record of achievement," says David Groos, seeking re-election to the House of Commons.

"We have a great deal of our platform to put into effect—the health plan, Canada assistance plan and plans for federal assistance to education.

"And I don't think we can do this job properly unless the government has a majority and is not in danger of falling each and every day.

"The country needs a majority government. I'd like to see a Liberal majority but any majority would be good.

"I think we are in the best position to get that majority now and that is one of the reasons why the election was called at this time."

Mr. Groos, 47, said he is a candidate because the immediate job is only half done and

To acquaint voters with the men they will be voting for Nov. 8, in the national election, the Times is carrying a series of interviews and personal notes on the candidates in Victoria and the Esquimalt-Saanich ridings. One candidate will be covered each day, appearing in alphabetical order starting with Victoria riding.

GROOS

"naturally I want to see it through."

The retired navy captain was born of English parents in Milwaukee and came to Victoria before he was two years old.

★ ★ ★

He is married and lives at 1003 Newport with his wife Phyllis and children Lora, Madeleine, Brian and Hilary.

I asked Mr. Groos why a Victoria voter should consider casting a ballot for him and the Liberals.

"For three reasons," he replied.

"First, in voting for a Liberal candidate you will be helping put a member from Victoria into the government thereby helping provide majority government. It is important the government should have in it a member from Victoria.

★ ★ ★

"Second, I hope people will vote for me because I have tried to do a job for Victoria and Victorians while I've been in Ottawa.

"I don't win every time I take up a case of a constituent in Ottawa but I have tried and I have achieved a satisfactory result in a goodly proportion of these.

"On the basis of my service to the community and local knowledge I hope that people will vote for me.

"The third reason is my experience as an MP. Only experience can show how best to tackle the various types of problems."

the party of the professionals, the businessman, the local establishment—the "haves."

Their strength is pronounced in these sectors as the line of 1963 is heard again and again: while Pearson is by no means a hero, he is the best of the lot; Diefenbaker is unacceptable as a prime minister; and the NDP is not really in the running.

Among the rest of the population, it is just the opposite. The Conservatives and the NDP are solidly entrenched with the New Democrats operating at a distinct disadvantage since the advent of Diefenbaker who, it is clear, is leaving a marvellous legacy of genuine popular support for his party.

Diefenbaker and his party, particularly in rural sectors, have now taken over the role of protest which so characterized the success of the old CCF in federal politics here. But it is not purely Diefenbakerism which is keeping voters anti-Liberal.

Now, really for the first time, they are using the word "Conservative" when answering the question: Who are you going to vote for on November 8?

Of course, New Democrats cannot stomach even the idea of crossing over to the Liberals, especially in Saskatchewan where the medicare controversy and the 1964 provincial campaign have left behind a terrible bitterness.

This support for the Conservatives in rural areas and for the NDP everywhere has a class-consciousness to it that underlines what the Liberals are confronting here.

Two examples among many:

A Saskatoon clerk: "I would never vote Liberal if they were the last party on earth. The CCF will do more for the working people. The Liberals are never for the working people. And I believe in the common people. Not everyone can be rich but everyone should have a place in society."

●

A Winnipeg South-Centre school teacher who is still undecided, tending Conservative again: "No. I couldn't vote Liberal with all the skullduggery. And I think they represent the moneyed classes a little bit more than I would like—E. P. Taylor, etcetera, etcetera."

The leadership question only reinforces such patterns. While Diefenbaker is now running behind his party, he is still by far the best-liked leader for the post of prime minister.

He is followed in public preference, and not too far back, by Douglas, whose popularity is well above that of the party he leads.

The revitalization of the NDP in both provinces is partially accounted for by this phenomenon.

Thompson, too, is well ahead of his party.

Bringing up the rear is the prime minister. Pearson's personal standing with the electorate in Manitoba and Saskatchewan has never been lower.

Finally—and this is the real pay-off for the long haul—the dominance of the Conservatives is threatening to become so established that youngsters are coming to accept the situation as commonplace.

A 20-year-old railway clerk in Saskatoon remarked: "I'm so disgusted with this country's political leaders that I feel like going into politics myself in ten years."

"For which side?" I asked.

"Conservative," he replied.

"Why?"

"Well, you know. Liberals in the East; Conservatives in the West," was his rejoinder.

What does this mean in terms of seats?

In Manitoba, the NDP holds its two traditional working-class ridings of Winnipeg North and North-Centre; The Liberals, their French-Canadian stronghold of St. Boniface and upper-middle and upper status Winnipeg South; the Conservatives, the rest of the provincial allotment of 14.

The NDP two are safe and do not figure to be added to.

If there are any Conservative losses, these are Provencher and Gordon Churchill's Winnipeg South-Centre, with the Liberals the potential gainers. Each is a particular case.

In Provencher, if Social Credit fails to nominate a candidate, Liberal Gordon Barkman could gain enough to overcome Werner Jorgenson's 1963 margin of 1,378.

In Winnipeg South-Centre, the slight Conservative loss to the NDP, which is running third, may be enough to lift the Liberals into first place as Conservative Churchill had only 1,243 votes over them last time.

●

On the other hand, the Liberals are in serious danger of losing Winnipeg South to the Conservatives who have television personality Bud Sherman in the field.

Margaret Konantz is once again beautifully organized but she has a tiny edge of just over 2,000 to fall back on and she is suffering a slight leakage of support back to the Conservatives.

As a 26-year-old 1963 Liberal now defecting to the Tories in River Heights put it: "I'm voting against the Liberal party. I think they need to be shaken up a little. I don't think the government is entirely hamstrung by not having a majority."

The Liberals should consider themselves fortunate if they hold on.

In Saskatchewan, the Conservatives won all 17 constituencies in 1963. In contrast to Manitoba there is no provincial administration to sustain them here.

If they are being threatened, it is largely by the NDP which is on the way back as Diefenbaker's popularity wanes. This is to be expected. Diefenbaker's earlier successes came largely at the expense of the old CCF.

Regina, Rosetown-Biggar and Yorkton are now all constituencies in which such a contest is taking place. But, in 1963, the New Democrats finished third by a whopping margin in Regina and while they are in the second slot in the other two, they have large pluralities to overcome as well.

And then there's Assiniboia, probably the lone Liberal hope in the province. NDP-Renegade Hazen Argue does not appear to be gaining any strength as his Liberal supporters still wonder about him.

Last time, traditional NDP supporters—and some members of the NDP constituency executive—voted for Conservative Lawrence Watson to be certain that Aruge was defeated.

They accomplished their purpose but dropped their party to third place in the process. This concerted action will probably not happen again.

But don't be surprised if the Conservatives maintain their hold on every one of Saskatchewan's seats. And notice: it's now Conservatives—not necessarily Diefenbaker!

CTV 'Mistaken' In Rejecting Ad'

TORONTO (CP)—Dr. Andrew Stewart, chairman of the Board of Broadcast Governors, said Friday he has told the CTV Television Network it was mistaken in rejecting a political advertisement placed by the New Democratic Party.

However, he said this was a "purely personal opinion" and conceded the network has the legal right to reject commercials not acceptable to it.

Dr. Stewart's views were made known in a statement given by him at Ottawa to the NDP—which made a public issue of the rejection Thursday—and released here by Eamon Park, the party's national president.

Mr. Park simultaneously renewed the NDP's charge that the refusal of CTV and some individual TV stations to carry the election advertisement resulted from "pressure from the advertising business."

INDICATES DISGUST

The 60-second commercial, one of a series in connection with the NDP's consumer-protection appeal, depicted a housewife and an announcer indicating disgust at failure of a household product to live up to its TV advertising. CTV said the NDP ad was misleading.

Dr. Stewart said at the request of CTV and two individual stations he monitored the commercial and found it acceptable. An NDP radio commercial monitored at the same time seemed to be unacceptable.

What happened to this commercial was not stated. Dr. Stewart said he told the network of his views Thursday, before the NDP raised an outcry but apparently after CTV had decided to ban the ad.

"I expressed the personal opinion that they would be making a mistake in withdrawing it," he said. "This was a purely personal opinion which should not influence the decision of the network."

Mr. Park said that, in view of Dr. Stewart's statement, the NDP would reopen with CTV the question of running the controversial commercial.

Creditistes 'Awakened' Parliament

ST. FELICIEN, Que. (CP) — The Creditiste party succeeded in "waking up" the last Parliament with a handful of men and looks forward to 35 to 50 seats in the Nov. 8 election, Creditiste Leader Real Caouette said Friday night.

"The old parties will run neck and neck," he told a rally of some 850 persons in this Lake St. John community of 10,000. "They will have to recognize our existence. They will both be asking us for permission to form the next government."

He reiterated his previous stand that the party wanting the support of le Ralliement des Creditistes will have to state its intention to increase family allowances and old age pensions, and to provide basic income tax exemption of $2,500 for single and $5,000 for married persons.

Mr. Caouette also repeated earlier charges that the Liberal party is financed by the underworld and that the Liberals plan to send Canadian troops to Viet Nam if they form the next government, a statement that has been denied by Prime Minister Pearson.

Rattler Strikes

VANCOUVER (CP) — Mrs. Virginia Perrin, 21, was treated with anti-venom in hospital after being bitten by a two-week-old rattlesnake that escaped from a cage in a pet shop where she works.

PC Party Not Liked In Quebec—Lesage

QUEBEC (CP) — Premier Jean Lesage has officially thrown his support behind the federal Liberal party.

The head of Quebe's Liberal government said Friday at a special session of the Quebec legislature "Mr. Pearson's party in Ottawa" is "the best government and the best alternative that exists."

However, the premier said, despite his feeling on the subject, he is "not participating in the election campaign."

The provincial Liberal federation agreed last September that the organization would not provide support for the federal Liberal election campaign, although individual members were free to do so.

Earlier in the day, during second reading of a bill to amend the Quebec navigational transport law, Mr. Lesage called the Conservative party "one of the parties which is most detested in the Province of Quebec."

Douglas Escapes Hecklers

PORT COQUITLAM, B.C. (CP) — T. C. Douglas, New Democratic Party leader, emerged unscathed Friday night from his first all-party political rally of the current federal election campaign.

However, some of his opponents in his home riding of Burnaby-Coquitlam did not fare so well.

Liberal candidate Richard Hayes was heckled almost continually by many of the estimated 400 persons who half-filled a school auditorium in this rural community about 25 miles east of Vancouver.

James Kennedy, the Social Credit candidate, had the crowd in stitches throughout the early part of his speech as he joked and replied to sporadic heckling.

However, the hecklers perked up when he started to tell of Social Credit accomplishments in British Columbia and Alberta and shortcomings of the former CCF government in Saskatchewan under Mr. Douglas.

Michael Allen, the Progressive Conservative candidate, was not interrupted during his speech and was applauded politely when he finished.

Mr. Douglas drew thunderous applause as he spoke of NDP plans for medicare, free university education and welfare programs.

He was not heckled.

Officer on Trial

VANCOUVER (CP)—Norman David Scott, 39, a city policeman, Friday was committed to stand trial on a charge of criminal negligence in the death of 63-year-old Mrs. Elizabeth O'Brien. The woman died in hospital two days after being struck by a private car.

Former Klan Chaplain Fingers 'Nighthawk'

WOODLE

WASHINGTON (AP) — House of Representatives investigators hope two recanting Klansmen will spark a chain reaction, inspiring more Ku Klux Klansmen to doff their sheets and secrecy.

After plodding for three days through the murk of financial records and fifth - amendment pleadings, the hearings by the House committee on un-American activities struck some fire Friday.

In rapid succession on the witness stand:

1. Klansman Joseph G. DuBois of Goldsboro, N.C., resigned from the Klan on the spot, saying he put God and country over the KKK oath, and turned over his records.

2. A former Klan chaplain, Roy Woodle, dramatically pointed out a Klan "nighthawk" among the spectators and said the man had made a threat on his life.

Afterward, committee Chairman Edwin E. Willis (Dem.—La.) told reporters to expect "many other revelations."

Woodle, 41, a sometime bricklayer as well as preacher around Lexington, N.C., drew national attention a few weeks ago when he was pictured first speaking at Klan rallies and then, disillusioned, denouncing the Klan.

CALLER MAKES THREATS

Woodle said he was threatened by a telephone caller. The caller said "he had the authority to do away with me."

Woodle identified the caller as Boyd Hamby, a courtroom spectator.

The committee said Hamby was grand nighthawk of the North Carolina realm with authority over cross burnings and other things.

Called to the stand, Hamby refused to say whether he ever saw the preacher before, made the phone call or burned a cross in Woodle's yard.

Anti-Draft Activities Mount In U.S.

NEW YORK (AP)—Mounting resistance to the anti-draft movement is spreading across the United States, seemingly growing cheek by jowl with the American build-up in Viet Nam.

U.S. Attorney Edward V. Hanrahan of Chicago says he has recommended that the justice department spearhead an investigation of anti-draft activities.

Michigan's Governor George Romney said in Tokyo he believes Americans who tore up their draft cards are "reprehensible and should be punished according to the law." He said the anti-Viet Nam demonstrations were "unfortunate."

In Baltimore, a federal judge took note of the draft dissenters and sentenced a professed conscientious objector to three years in prison.

A federal court in Concord, N.H., is expected to act early next week on a request to send David J. Miller to New York to face a charge of destroying his draft card.

Miller, 22, of Syracuse, N.Y., the first person charged under the law, publicly burned what he said was his draft card at a rally in New York protesting U.S. involvement in Viet Nam

HELD IN JAIL

In Iowa City, Iowa, Stephen Smith, 20, of Marion, Iowa, was held in jail in default of $500 bond on the same charge. Smith, a sophomore at the University of Iowa, is charged with destroying his draft card before an estimated 100 persons Wednesday.

Roger Lette, 19, of Fremont, Calif., said he planned to burn his draft card at a San Jose State College rally called by the students for a Democratic Society. The society, based in Chicago, has sponsored some of the anti-draft activity.

Before a crowd at the rally he thumbed through papers from his pocket looking for his draft card. Men said to be FBI agents held a motion picture camera. Then, out of the crowd stepped Ann Morris, 23, a drama major at San Jose.

"Think what you are doing," she said. "If you must do this, if you have reasons and are sincere — go ahead. But not here, do it in private."

She put her arm around him and Lette said: "I do not choose to do it. I did not come here to be an object of ridicule, but you have made me one."

Lette and Miss Morris had not met before and went separate ways afterwards.

World-Famed Theologian, Tillich, Dies

CHICAGO (AP)—Paul Johannes Tillich, one of the most renowned voices of contemporary theology, died in hospital Friday. He was 79.

Tillich's three-volume Systematic Theology, completed just two years ago, has been described as a major work of the 20th century. In all, Tillich wrote 15 books in English—a language he learned at age 47.

Tillich left Germany in 1933 shortly, after he was dismissed as professor of philosophy at the University of Frankfort-Am-Main. An outspoken critic of Nazism, he later said:

"I had the great honor and luck to be the first non-Jewish professor dismissed from a German university."

Tillich, son of a Lutheran minister and a member of the Evangelical and Reformed Church, was an exponent of ecumenism.

'Tories Sink To New Low'

ASSINIBOIA, Sask. (CP)—Opposition Leader Diefenbaker is making "unfounded accusations and absurd and shockingly irresponsible statements that are hurting Canada's reputation abroad," Trade Minister Sharp said Friday.

Mr. Sharp told 450 people at a Liberal party rally in this town 110 miles southwest of Regina that Mr. Diefenbaker and the Conservatives haven't been able to find an issue in the election campaign.

He said that as a result the Conservatives are sinking to new lows on the hustings.

The Charges Denounced

MR. PEARSON HAS ANswered with candor and justifiable indignation the charges that have become a major part of the election campaign of Mr. Diefenbaker and Mr. Douglas.

With the calculated employment of rumor, innuendo and association, it has been alleged that the Liberal government allowed underworld interests to influence its actions. Mr. Diefenbaker has gone to the absurd length of claiming that a vote for the Liberals is equivalent to a vote for crime. He has made his plank of "integrity in government"—with the implication that only he can provide it—a camouflage for his lack of workable policies.

In denouncing his accusers Mr. Pearson made it clear that underworld attempts at bribery had failed, that those who had been involved had been "severed" from the government. He also made it clear that witch-hunts would not be permitted, that there would be no persecution of persons against whom there was only suspicion.

"Nothing was revealed, that should have been dealt with, that was not dealt with," Mr. Pearson says. "The rest is insinuation and misrepresentation."

No one can question Mr. Pearson's sincerity in refuting the charges regarding organized crime. No one can deny the rightness of his policy of refusing to let innocent persons suffer from rumor or suspicion. Neither Mr. Diefenbaker nor Mr. Douglas has improved his standing in the public view through sweeping accusations and veiled references. Their charges have not carried conviction, and repetition has exposed the shallowness and contrived righteousness of such accusations.

What Mr. Pearson can be accused of is slowness to realize the effect on public opinion of the charges which led, for instance, to the Dorion report. He was reluctant to sacrifice colleagues smeared by the scandal in order to strengthen his own political position. But there was evidence of bad judgment by some of his ministers. Mr. Pearson will be well advised to ensure in choosing his next cabinet that he cannot again be placed in a position that invites the attacks and exaggerations of his opponents.

JEFF

BRITISH COLUMBIA TOMORROW embarks on a campaign to find foster homes for the hundreds of children — from new-born babies to teenagers—in this province who lack those necessary ingredients for the formation of a balanced human being: parents and a home.

The news columns and other publicity will reveal the numbers of youngsters affected—they are large and growing larger. But even these compelling statistics must not obscure the real problem—the terrible toll in individual human development which neglect and lack of a permanent home environment can cause.

Adoption homes are of course the best answer to most of the problem. They provide the security and permanence of normal home life which the growing child requires. But there are never enough adoption homes to meet today's increasing needs. Foster homes are therefore used—when conscientious parents respond to the cry of the homeless and take them in on an expenses-paid basis.

Normally this should be a temporary relationship, while an adoption home is found. But all too often the years go by, the child may have to be moved from home to home with all the wrenchings and insecurity that this can cause no matter how kindly the treatment.

Even the invaluable foster home system cannot now cope with the many children needing shelter. Little boys have been sent to Brannen Lake detention because there was no foster home available to give them security and pull them back from the brink of delinquency.

There is a serious social problem in the making that can be met only by the humanitarian action of married couples who open their doors and their hearts to those who need them.

The current campaign — JEFF: Joint Effort For Fostering — is an attempt to bring the situation to public notice. It is not an appeal for money, it is an appeal for human kindness. It should not fall on unheeding ears.

Credit In Hopes of Cash

THE IMPORTANCE ATTACHED by the federal government to increasing exports of Canadian capital goods was demonstrated last Tuesday at a meeting of the Canadian Export Association when Trade Minister Mitchell Sharp revealed new policy measures.

Most of the measures apply in the vital field of medium-term credit guarantees by the government on goods sold abroad and they reflect to a wide degree the thinking of the export association. Most basic of the changes was that effective Nov. 1: the federal government will provide unconditional 100 per cent guarantees on credit arranged through chartered banks for capital goods sold abroad.

Mr. Sharp also announced a number of technical revisions in trade department policy which will widen the field of goods eligible for credit guarantees. Highly important is a change whereby Canadian manufacturers can obtain guarantees for foreign projects to which they contribute materials but which are not solely Canadian. This gives Canadian firms the freedom to take on foreign sub-contracting jobs which were formerly closed to them.

The general feeling of the meeting, according to reports, was that changes announced by Mr. Sharp will put Canada at the head of the line in providing reasonable credit terms for foreign customers buying capital goods—a factor which is of the greatest importance in the export trade.

It was also observed that Mr. Sharp had given Canadian exporters a challenge by saying, in effect: You have the credit you asked for. Now let's see if you can get out and sell.

Saanich Looks Ahead

SAANICH HAS GIVEN ITS ratepayers an outline of the $2.7 million capital projects program on which they will be asked to vote in December, and has drawn attention to the desirability of buying land now to guarantee open spaces in the future.

Approximately two-fifths of the money would be spent to acquire property, including the McRae Estate, a third is earmarked for McKenzie Avenue and one-ninth for two outdoor heated swimming pools.

Repaid over 20 years, the expenditure would increase the tax rate about two mills and add $10 a year to the taxes on property now paying $250.

The amount involved is substantial. It is doubtful, however, if the projects can ever be carried out for less in future and the prospect of losing public use of available open property is a matter which must concern every resident of Saanich.

The municipality appears to have done an excellent job in preparing the program—a list of undertakings and land acquisitions which will add materially to the amenities of the district.

It is a development plan that should win the full support of the people who will pay the bill.

FROM WASHINGTON

By WALTER LIPPMANN

Tributaries to the Flow of Progress

THE achievements of the 89th Congress are at once an end and a beginning. The Congress has written into law what is in substance a series of promissory notes that the hopes of progressives in this century will begin to be realized. The legislative harvest is only a beginning in that the big promissory notes about education, medicare, civil rights and poverty have now to be paid off, and not merely in terms of money, which will be available, but in terms of administrative planning and enforcement.

Lippmann

The whole legislative result could not have been achieved but for an unusual conjuncture of circumstances. The first is that an authentic progressive, Lyndon Johnson, was also the most experienced and effective legislative leader of this century. This legislative leader suddenly acquired the enormous power of the Presidency and increased it by an overwhelming electoral victory.

For the first time the man in the White House was the man, more than any other, who knew how to work the legislative machine and how to make use of all the President's powers. The dazzling record of the 89th Congress is above all the record of a great legislative leader who had suddenly become President of the United States.

The murder of President Kennedy shocked multitudes in this country and in Congress into a feeling of remorse that the young President had been so stubbornly and shabbily opposed and frustrated. President Johnson came to the office riding a wave of repentance and desire to atone.

After an impressive period as Mr. Kennedy's successor, Lyndon Johnson found himself facing a Republican Party possessed by a wild and crazy impulse to commit political suicide.

The behavior of the Republican leaders in 1964 was in the light of history incredible. Out of their weakness and folly came the election of a Congress in which the coalition of old-guard Republicans and aging Southern Democrats was demolished and overrun by a strong Johnson majority in both houses of Congress.

But in itself all this is still not enough to account for the achievements of the 89th Congress. A closer look at the difficult legislation, notably medicare and education, shows that the Johnson legislation is very different from the old proposals of the Democratic Party and that the Johnson administration has played a masterly part in making these old projects politically workable.

Roosevelt and Medicare

Responsible talk about medicare began in the administration of Franklin Roosevelt, though he did not adopt it as a proposal. This was first done by President Truman in 1945. However, the Truman medicare proposal was radically different from that which has been enacted under President Johnson. The essential difference is that in 1945 the proposal was to make health insurance compulsory for the whole population. In the 1950s, this proposal was whittled down to the aged, and as a result the legislation became feasible.

The same is true of federal aid to education. The need for it has been on the legislative table since President Roosevelt's advisory commission reported in 1938 on the unequal expenditures for public education between the richer and the poorer states. But federal aid was hopelessly blocked in the 1950s and in John Kennedy's time by the deadlock about aid to the parochial as well as to the public schools. One of the notable accomplishments of the Johnson administration has been that it has found a way around the tangled issue.

But the combination of all these things is still by no means the whole explanation. In the field of civil rights, where there had been so little progress, there appeared about 10 years ago a combination of Negro protest and of a white change of conscience which has at last made possible the legal abolition of the remnants of chattel slavery.

Enveloping and sustaining everything, there have been more than four years of sustained expansion of the economy. The country which did not believe it was possible has had a demonstration that by the use of modern economic doctrine, which originated with Keynes, it is possible to manage prosperity.

Prosperity Can Be Managed

It takes wise and skillful men to do this. But it can be done. We cannot, to be sure, as yet be absolutely certain that it can be done continually and indefinitely, and a certain conservative skepticism is still very much in order. What we do know is that the American economy has been expanding for 55 months and that nothing like such sustained prosperity has ever been enjoyed before.

The success of the great experiment in the management of the economy has revolutionized our domestic political life. Because of it, what President Johnson calls the Great Society—more prosaically, continuing progressive reform—has ceased to incite a class struggle between the haves and the have-nots.

If indeed the great experiment finally proves itself completely, we have possession of the key to continuing material progress—provided, of course, the whole edifice is not destroyed by external war.

MRS. NOGGINS

By BRUCE HUTCHISON

No Facts or Prejudice

DESPITE misleading reports in the newspapers and the Gallup Poll, the Conservative party's secret electoral strategy has succeeded according to plan. I have this from the best possible authority, my neighbor, Mrs. Alfred Noggins, who is managing the opposition campaign in our local constituency. "Our plan," she said, "was clear, honest and above board from the start. We wanted to make sure that neither Mike nor Dief got enough votes to inflict the appallin' evil of majority gover'mint on a defenceless nation.

Hutchison

"Unforchunately Dief's loyal supporters couldn't unload 'im themselves in a convention so they left the job to the electors in the true spirit of democracy. But the Liberals, 'avin' no scruples, threatened to ruin everything by gettin' themselves into new trouble every day till we almost feared that Dief might do as well as last time and then 'ed 'ang on to 'is leadership forever.

"Well, we phoned Wally McCutcheon who runs the party without the risk of runnin' fer office and he told us not to worry. There's no danger, says 'e, of a Conservative victory as would save Dief and you can always count on the Liberals to co-operate in assurin' another stalemate at Ottawa by systematically spoilin' their own image. Unstable gover'mint, the grand objective of all patriots, is in the bag, says McCutcheon.

"Still, I'm not quite sure. There's always the chance that Dief might really get goin' and let McCutcheon down. The Conservative campaign offers the people the one thing they're prayin' and pantin' fer, a return to the original Diefenbaker gover'mint and the old 'appy, carefree days when the treasury was always empty, the cabinet explodin' merrily at reg'lar intervals and there was some good, clean fun in politics. Like Dief says, the people are yearnin' to get back to normalcy.

"Besides, says Dief, the Pearson gover'mint is rotten and corrupt all through and all I need is some evidence to prove it. But Dief isn't relyin' on mere scandal, you understand. No, sir, 'e 'as a strong, positive policy of 'is own.

"Without reservation or compromise 'e stands four-square against killin' people and puttin' 'em in the lime pits of Quebec, even French Canajians. At any risk to 'is popularity 'e's sincerely opposed to murder. That takes courage and a clear grasp of vital issues.

"The voters are a bit confused just the same by all the promises of 'igher gover'mint spendin' and lower taxes because they don't appreciate the wonders of modern economics. Some old-fashioned folks get frightened, not realizin' that the new expendichures will stimulate the economy, like Walter Gordon says. If we could only 'ave an election every year the present depression would soon pass.

Bankers' Invention

"All the talk of inflation is invented by the big bankers to grind down the poor but Pearson's brain trust isn't fooled. The prime minister can count on the boys in the back room to think up a new way of spendin' in every speech they write fer 'im and if 'e happens to read the text before delivery 'e's dumb with admiration. And when Dief sees the reports of 'is own press conferences 'e's amazed, wonderin' who could 'ave thought up such accurate blueprints fer bankruptcy.

"Nobody 'as added up the cost of the promises. There's no time fer minor details when the real business of the nation is bein' decided. At the start Gordon tried to keep count of Dief's pledges and 'is own but the addin' machines broke down under the strain.

"So, with a 'ollow larf, Gordon ordered 'is experts to write a new budget of tax increases, but secretly of course, down in a sound-proof vault where the public couldn't see 'em till the polls close. 'Tis no matter. So long as the people in the provinces can 'and on the bill to Ottawa somebody else will pay it, foreigners, I guess, or Santa Claus. Christmas 'as come early this year. So, readin' Mike's speeches and Dief's, Tommy Douglas is suin' 'em both for plagarism. They've broken the copyright on the socialist revolution.

"At last the reporters tracked down Bob Thompson, 'idin' in Premier Manning's attic, and asked about the chances of the Social Credit party. Which Social Credit party do you mean? says Thompson. There's so many I've lost count.

Minority Rule

"Oh, no, says Premier Bennett, Social Credit isn't a party, it rejects partisanship with contempt and if the British Columbia gover'mint 'as the richest and slickest machine in Canada that's a pure coincidence. Politics can 'ave no place in the public affairs of a free country, says Bennett, and the only 'ope is to let a minority of non-political Social Crediters control the next Parliament and save the nation from chaos.

"Anyways," said Mrs. Noggins, " 'tis a great democratic debate on fundamental problems, though you might not think so because the politicians never mention 'em. Yes, and you can trust the sovereign people to make a wise decision because nobody 'as prejudiced their minds by publishin' any facts. Without information to cloud and warp their judgment they'll certainly bring in the right verdict. Guilty, I presume."

To the Editor

Rebuttal to Quebec

We hear a lot these days from Quebec that by virtue of being one of the two founding nations, French Canadians residing in other provinces should have separate schools for their children. Other rights are claimed, such as bilingualism in federal as well as provincial civil services, etc. They fail to mention where the Canadian Indians rate as a founding nation but in any event why should the so-called founding nations have any special rights in Canada?

Equally deserving, are those people, the Ukrainians, Germans, Italians, Irish, and others who pioneered and developed the country while Quebecers largely stayed in one province. Moreover, it was mainly due to the enterprise of the English-speaking, including Americans, that Quebec has reached its present stage of development.

It is also pointed out by Quebec with great magnanimity, that the English-speaking minority has been granted their own separate schools in that province. Why not? The right was won on the Plains of Abraham, but more than that they pay for it in hard earnings. It is a well-known fact that the revenues of the province come largely by far from English-speaking controlled industries and individuals.—"Canada First."

Protest and Contest

By TONY EMERY

IT DOESN'T seem to be possible to pick up a paper or turn on the radio these days without hearing the word "protest." Usually this has to do with an individual or group of individuals reacting to the official policy of some nation or other that has embarked on a course of conduct that does not commend itself to the individual or group. Recently, however, I have been interested to note that voices have begun to be raised in protest against the protestants: we begin to be told that to protest by way of marches, sitdowns, demonstrations, is not only undignified and uncalled-for, but also downright disloyal, because it is "playing the Communists' game for them."

Emery

To say that I find this kind of criticism difficult to accept is to put it mildly. I don't happen to be zealous enough to take any active part in these ructions, but I have every sympathy with those who do, and I really cannot see what is so reprehensible in taking overt action against the policies of the state you happen to be living in, if it does something to which you heartily disapprove.

It is all very well to say loftily that in a democracy everything should be done in an orderly and constitutional manner. What courses of action lie open to the voter between elections? And what of the voter who voted against the candidate who was elected? Must he grin and bear it in loyal silence until he next gets the opportunity to try to get the rascals out by constitutional means?

Example In the U.S.

Much play was made by the Democratic candidate in the last American presidential election with the jingoistic plans allegedly being hatched by the Republican candidate. There must have been a good many American voters who voted against Goldwater because they believed that, if elected, he would lead the United States into a heavy military involvement in Viet Nam. What are they supposed to do now? Murmur "Well I be blowed. . ." and wait for the the next Presidential tourney? What of the draftee who has never had a vote?

I am old enough to have lived through a lengthy period of turbulence in international relations—I suppose nobody will object to this as a description of the world since the Treaty of Versailles?—and I have a fair working knowledge, from the sidelines, of the effect of disapproval expressed in a polite and gentlemanly manner, where the actions of a government are concerned. I believe I could summarize it in one word. Nil.

And In Britain

Let us assume that all protests against the British government since, say, 1776 had been "forwarded through the usual channels" and all changes postponed until they could be brought about by "constitutional means," how would that have met the grievances of the American Colonists, the farmers of the Transvaal and the Orange Free State, the inhabitants of Ireland, the people of India, the unfranchised adult female, the settlers in Israel, to name a few whose protests come readily to mind?

If you were studying the machinery of protest, with a copy of Crane Brinton's "Anatomy of Revolution" in hand, you might be forgiven for coming to the conclusion that the way to make a protest stick is to enlist the support of the intelligentsia on the one hand and the masses on the other, and not to have any scruples about the use of force. That is, by and large, the lesson of 1642 and 1776 and 1789 and 1917. I do not see that much was achieved by good manners in those years.

However, before I am accused of preaching the overthrow of governments by violence (which would render my occasional visits south of the border liable to some interruption) let me make it clear that I am opposed to violence myself. I am just trying to point out that it is illogical for states who resort easily —even sometimes enthusiastically—to violence, to object when internal protests against their policies take a violent turn.

Problem of Violence

The difficulty lies in keeping violence out of the non-violent demonstration, and this is sometimes the fault of the demonstrators, but more frequently, as I believe, the fault of the forces of law and order.

In any case, while I am not crazy about the appearance of the demonstrators, and I cannot abide the folk singing that goes with the modern protests, I am less shocked by these manifestations than I was—and am—by the actions of the white-collars and brass-hats in Suez, Viet Nam, and the Dominican Republic.

Nature Rambles

By FREEMAN KING

AS ONE drives around the countryside there are many broad-leaved trees that may seem strange to us. These are not natives, but have been introduced.

Perhaps the introduction was by our early settlers, whose farms or holdings are now cut up into building lots. You can often see one of the beeches with its sharp-pointed leaves of dark or reddish-green.

There are several places where the sweet chestnut can be found, with its catkin-like flowers in early spring, and the nut in its prickly burr opening up in the fall.

The horse chestnut, which has been introduced to most countries of the world for its ornamental value, came from northern Greece and does not really belong to the chestnut family, but to the Aesculus group.

The white elm which has now taken to the bush lands, with its rugged furrowed bark, puts on a brilliant display of tiny red flowers before the leaves appear in the spring.

There are many ashes growing in and around Victoria, especially on Finlayson Street. They all have long compound leaves composed of leaflets in pairs which are lance shaped. The fruit of the ash is generally oblong and often stays on the tree after the leaves have fallen.

The mountain ash or rowan trees are not of the local family. Most of these we see with their scarlet or bright orange berries have been introduced from other parts, though we do have one that is a native of the coastal forest.

Rhodesian Crisis Climax Moves Closer; Tide of Battle Turning to U.S. in Viet Nam

By PETER MURRAY
Times Wire News Editor

The Rhodesia crisis advanced steadily this week toward a climax.

Prime Minister Harold Wilson of Britain is flying to Salisbury in a last ditch effort to persuade Rhodesia from making a unilateral declaration of independence.

Earlier in the week Prime Minister Ian Smith rejected Wilson's proposal that a mission of Commonwealth premiers try to find a solution.

It would be "less than fair" for some hostile Commonwealth members to "sit in judgment upon the Rhodesia case," Smith said.

Then the Rhodesian prime minister sent an appeal to "do the statesmanlike thing" by granting independence on the basis of the present constitution, which gives few guarantees to the colony's Negro majority.

Wilson thereupon announced his decision to go to meet Smith, and made it clear that he also intends to consult with Rhodesia's African leaders, many of whom are held in detention.

There were signs that the tide of battle is turning in South Viet Nam.

U.S. air and ground forces, systematically built up over the last few months, repulsed two major attacks by the Viet Cong.

The monsoon season is ending without the guerrillas having made the gains that were feared, and the U.S. and South Vietnamese troops should find the going easier as the weather improves.

At the same time, debate over the rights and wrongs of bitterness in the U.S. the war is causing increasing

An organized series of marches across the country last weekend protesting American involvement was countered this week by demonstrations supporting government policy.

The FBI began cracking down on young men burning draft cards in a show of defiance and the first convicted youth was jailed three years.

●

Viet Nam also became an issue in the Canadian election campaign.

Creditiste leader Real Caouette started it all by alleging that the government had made an under-the-table deal with President Johnson to send troops to Viet Nam after Nov. 8. He went so far as to claim the Liberals were planning to introduce conscription.

Others, including the NDP's Douglas Fisher, also claimed knowledge of a secret agreement between the U.S. and Canada.

Conservative leader John Diefenbaker demanded that the government make public a letter sent by President Johnson to Prime Minister Pearson this summer.

When it was alleged at that time that the U.S. had asked for military aid, Johnson refused Pearson's request to make the letter public.

Diefenbaker charged that Pearson and three of his ministers had given conflicting accounts of what the letter said.

The prime minister has denied there is any deal and says Canada has no intention of sending troops to Viet Nam. He also brushed off Caouette's conscription charge.

Finance Minister Walter Gordon, who said Johnson had asked for troops and Canada had said no, added that the government would only consider sending military personnel to Viet Nam under United Nations' auspices.

Following his strong personal victory in last month's West German election, Ludwig Erhard ran into difficulties before being formally re-elected chancellor this week at the opening session of the new Bundestag.

Lacking an absolute majority, Erhard needs the backing of the Free Democrat Party. The Free Democrats lost ground in the election and Erhard balked at reappointing party leader Erich Mende as minister for all-German affairs in a coalition government.

Mende threatened for a time to withdraw his support, but later announced the Free Democrats would remain in the coalition.

The struggle continued in Indonesia between the military and the Communists, and the main loser was President Sukarno.

While the army continued its crackdown on the Reds, Sukarno tried desperately to save the party in order to keep his regime afloat.

The president steadfastly refuses to condemn the Communists for their part in the recent attempted coup.

Thousands have been arrested in the army's campaign. Thorough searches are being made for arms believed supplied by the Chinese, and Communists are being ousted from the country's radio stations and newspapers.

●

The Ku Klux Klan maintained its cloak of secrecy as the U.S. House of Representatives committee on un-American activities opened hearings into the super-patriot organization.

Leaders of the Klan sheltered under the fifth amendment and refused to answer questions. It was the same response Communist leaders have given the committee in the past.

Committee members indicated the Klan may be in trouble with the income tax department over a tawdry bit of profiteering on the sale of robes to Klansmen

An almost incredible footnote to history popped up in a New York courtroom.

It involves the legendary Rasputin, a medieval-style figure who held sinister sway over the court of Czar Nicholas II of Russia in the early 1900s.

Grisly details of how the "mad monk" was finally slain in 1916 were given to the court by Prince Felix Youssoupoff, who is suing the CBS television network for invading his privacy in a 1962 film.

The 79-year-old prince specifically denies the TV version which said he used his beautiful young bride as "bait" to lure Rasputin to his death.

In his testimony, Youssoupoff told how Rasputin was plied with poisoned cakes and wine, refused to die, and was finally done in with a revolver.

Youssoupoff and his wife left Russia after the revolution and now are living in Paris. No decision was reached in the trial.

Party Leaders Should Pledge To Serve Out Their Full Term

By GERALD WARING

Waring

OTTAWA—In the United States a pertinent issue in contests for such offices as senator and governor and mayor is whether the candidate will promise that, if elected, he will serve a full term. This is because the voters don't like a man using an office to which he has been elected merely as a convenient stepping stone to something bigger.

This is an issue in the current mayoralty campaign in New York City, where one candidate is strongly suspected of intending to quit in mid-term to run for governor. When confronted with the question, he replies lamely that he will make any decisions necessary after the election.

The issue does not arise in relation to the presidency because the president is elected for a term of four years, and there is a tradition—in effect, an unwritten part of the U.S. Constitution—that barring death or serious disability the president serves out his full term. There is no precedent, and indeed no clear-cut provision, for the president to resign.

★ ★ ★

Monday fortnight Canadians will elect a new House of Commons—265 MPs in 263 ridings, But however much that is the legalistically correct description of the forthcoming election, it is also true that the voters will elect either Lester Pearson or John Diefenbaker as prime minister.

Mr. Pearson is rising 69; Mr. Diefenbaker turned 70 last month. There is reason to question whether either one, if elected, will serve much longer than the 1967 Confederation centennial year. Yet no one has asked this question.

If the winner decides to retire from public life in mid-term, a new prime minister chosen by party conventions—or, temporarily, by parliamentary caucus — will take over. And no matter what his qualifications, he would become head of the national government without benefit of popular vote.

When the country gets around to rewriting the Constitution, it might well consider imposing an obligation on the prime minister to remain in office between elections. Or to put it conversely, the resignation of a prime minister would have to be followed immediately by a general election.

The possibility that Mr. Diefenbaker would voluntarily relinquish office, if elected Nov. 8, is much less likely than the prospect of Mr. Pearson quitting after a couple of years. Mr. Diefenbaker has a love for power that the Liberal leader does not possess in anything like the same measure.

★ ★ ★

Mr. Pearson has a desire for a few quiet years in the sun, and nobody appreciative of his lifelong service to Canada would deny him this. His friend Adlai Stevenson had the same wish—to sit and sip wine and watch the people go by. Death denied Mr. Stevenson his wish, and Mr. Pearson was much saddened.

Nevertheless the prospect remains that Mr. Pearson may not complete what we might loosely describe as a full term, if his government is re-elected. There is not even a vice-premier as first in line of succession to give continuity to the popular mandate.

Under our system there is no solution except to ask each leader to pledge to serve a full term. Nobody has raised this issue. But perhaps instinctively the people recognize it—as suggested by reports from the hustings that the election may turn not so much on the personalities of the party leaders as on the qualities of rival candidates in the 263 constituencies.

Something More Than High But Less Than University

By ART STOTT

Stott

LESS than three years ago, when he made public his findings on higher education in British Columbia and suggested a plan for the future, Dr. John B. Macdonald said that fewer than 50 per cent of the students who enrol as freshmen at UBC obtain their degrees.

"Approximately 40 per cent of the freshmen," he stated, "do not return for the second year, and another 10 per cent do not return for the third year."

Like most statistics, these are subject to qualification and challenge. On the face of them, however, it appears that half the people who seek education beyond the high school level are not in a position—for any of a number of reasons—to go through to graduation.

This is only part of the story. In British Columbia, something more than half the young people who graduate from high school—it may be three-fifths of them—go on to university. But less than one half of the children who start in Grade 1 succeed in passing through high school.

This is rough figuring. It adds up, though, to the fact that the vast bulk of our young people, some through lack of inclination, some through lack of resources, are not able to enjoy the benefits of university education. Some never will.

★ ★ ★

But insistent demand, both from the young people and from a society which requires higher education, or training, to fill modern and future jobs, makes it necessary to provide instruction beyond the high school level.

Hence the push for technological institutes and junior colleges.

This community is showing a particular interest in the latter at the moment. Mr. John Gough has brought in his recommendations to school boards of the lower island calling for a junior college to fill a hole in our present system—and his thinking gives it particular significance. He appears to agree that a junior college should not constitute a blind end to young students who attend and later show the competence and desire to go on to university. At the same time he wants to splice it into the adult education program and, also, to provide in it certain complete courses that would satisfy a desire for something more than a student receives at high school.

★ ★ ★

The statistics quoted by Dr. Macdonald in 1962 justify the principles Mr. Gough outlines. A junior college could quite conceivably meet the requirements of those who formed more than half the freshman class at UBC and did not go on to win degrees. They'd have more than is given at the high school level and it might be adequate for their needs, practical and non-material.

Beyond that it conceivably might furnish a highly useful "retread" process for adults now employed who find lack of traction, through inadequate schooling, hampering their progress upward in promotion.

It could also confer a special benefit on the university, permitting it to be more selective in the admission of students. A junior college might very effectively attract applicants who lack the abilities, including financial, to be successful in upper classes of the university but quite suitable for a two year program.

As an adjunct of adult education, moreover, it could give advanced courses in non-credit subjects which add to the individual's enjoyment of living without conforming to university requirements.

The concept looks promising for a community of this character.

Squirrel Cage Colloquy

By WILLIAM R. FRYE
Times UN Correspondent

UNITED NATIONS — In a moment of frustration, President Eisenhower once referred to disarmament negotiations as a "squirrel cage." The UN, this past week, had reason to sympathize with him.

One of the most urgent and far-reaching problems on the world's agenda is how to keep dozens of new countries from building the A-bomb — thus creating a security nightmare.

Yet the deeper the UN plunges into this problem, the more difficult seems the solution. The harder the UN scrambles, the faster the squirrel cage whirls—invariably ending up just about where it began.

Here, in a kind of colloquy, is a squirrel's-eye view of the exercise:

How to prevent small countries from getting the bomb? Easy. Just (1) get them to foreswear building it; and (2) get the great powers to agree not to give it to them.

Hold on a minute, say the small countries. This would perpetuate a five-power atomic monopoly. We would be forever second-class citizens. Why don't you give up your bombs and make us all equal?

The big powers clear their throats ostentatiously.

It will be only a temporary monopoly, says Russia. We want the atomic "five" to give up their bombs. Haven't we been saying so all these years?

Won't Give Up

Rubbish, say small (and big) powers. You don't have the slightest intention of giving up your bombs. None of the elite five will ever do it. And you know it.

Well, says the United States, at least the five can start reducing their stockpiles. They can destroy some of their warheads and put the nuclear fuel into power reactors. This would be a gesture of good faith.

Oh, no you don't, say the Russians. That would mean inspection. Impossible. Out of the question. Let's avoid "extraneous" problems.

The Canadians, who could have built the bomb, but have not, speak up. Never mind what the five do. Foreswear A-weapons anyway, because it's the intelligent thing to do so.

All very well, say the Indians (softly). But Canada is under the shadow of the United States. India is under the shadow of Red China. It's easy for you to talk.

And so the squirrel cage whirls. Inside, the squirrels run and run . . . each sure the others are to blame for their common frustration and entrapment.

More Whites For a Black Parliament

Leaders of Malawi, the small Central African state which has been independent for a year, have gone off to Lilongwe, 200 miles north of the capital to decide what kind of constitution they will have when the country becomes a republic next July.

One of the features, a novelty in the context of trends in all the other newly-sovereign states of Africa, is that European representation in the legislature will be increased.

At the time of independence many of the liberal Europeans in the country felt that to have special seats for whites might merely prolong the racial confrontation, and it was under pressure from them that the proposed number of five white seats was reduced to three. The number of white members of parliament is now increased from three to five at the wish of the blacks.

It is certainly the wish of Dr. Hastings Kamuzu Banda, prime minister and "Father of the Nation." He has already told his parliament that to have a few Europeans in it did no harm, that the three members had done good work, and that in view of increasing foreign investment he felt it proper for European representation to be increased.

Disappointments for All Parties Seen as Result of Nov. 8 Voting

By PETER NEWMAN

Newman

This election may be a bore for the voters, but for the politicians it must be a nightmare.

Unless there's some unexpected dramatic breakthrough during the next two weeks, the adherents of every party are going to be disappointed by the results on Nov. 8.

After travelling the country for the past five weeks, it seems to me, on weary reflection, that the most likely result of this strange campaign will be a slim Liberal majority, based almost entirely on gains made in French Canada.

So far there has been no evidence on any major shift of political power in eight of Canada's 10 provinces. With only two weeks to go, it's probable that Newfoundland, Prince Edward Island, Nova Scotia, New Brunswick, Manitoba, Saskatchewan, Alberta and British Columbia will return to Ottawa about the same mixture of MP's on November 8 as sat in the last parliament: 30 Liberals, 60 Conservative, 11 NDP and 4 Social Credit.

In Ontario, the Liberals stand to lose seats, especially in rural areas where there will be tight Tory-Liberal contests with an NDP vote large enough to allow the Conservative to slip in. This means that the Liberals will probably have just under 80 seats outside Quebec. But in that province, all the indications point to a sweep of startling proportions.

Take Own Sampling

Despite the large undecided vote shown by the Gallup Poll, the Liberals have recently taken a confidential sampling of their own which shows that they now hold 54 per cent of the Quebec vote, as opposed to 19 per cent for the Conservatives. (In Montreal proper, the Tories are down to an abysmal 6 per cent).

This kind of margin would mean at least 64 seats for Pearson in Quebec, giving the Liberals a national total of 144 or thereabouts with the Tories holding something close to their present strength of 96 seats and the small parties dividing the other 25.

If the results on November 8 turn out close to the above predictions, none of the parties will have much cause for rejoicing.

The pro-Diefenbaker Conservatives, who hoped that the Liberal scandals would open the portals of power to their champion one final time, will naturally be the most bitterly disappointed. But the anti-Diefenbaker Tories, who hoped this election would solve their party's leadership problem at least, are almost certainly bound to be disillusioned too. Having suffered the anguish of a hard-fought campaign and achieved a respectable result, there's little reason to suppose that the man from Prince Albert will be willing to surrender his position gracefully.

For the NDP, the indicated result would mean the humiliating acceptance once again of the fact that they seem destined to improve Canadian society, without ever governing it.

Even in victory, the Liberals would face a difficult situation. True they would have their holy majority, and at least the electorate would be spared an election for the next four or five years.

Won By Default

But it would be a majority clearly won by default and one that would hardly make for good government. During the critical period of Canada's Centennial and immediately afterwards—when the French-English crisis in this country will have to be resolved—the central government would not represent the nation's regions but would have a majority from French Canada. (While only 64 of the 144 seats would be from Quebec, according to the predicted result, another 17 seats outside Quebec are also dominated by French-speaking Canadians and nearly all of these are expected to go Liberal.)

The dominant factor which presumably is keeping a national majority beyond the Liberals' reach is a feeling of uncertainty about the calibre and ethics of some high-ranking Liberals. Pearson has tried to wipe away such doubts by stoutly defending his personal honor.

It is not, and never has been in question. It's Pearson's ability and willingness to deal firmly with lapses in conduct among his colleagues that remains at issue.

Because he failed to grasp the chance of resolving this situation during his cabinet shuffles last summer, the Liberal leader now must maintain the fiction that all is well in his government and that no further reforms are necessary.

No Breakthrough

John Diefenbaker is also caught in a position which prevents him from breaking through to a majority. His largest problem in this campaign has been to convince the voters that despite the sorry record of his stewardship, he is now interested in government as well as in politics.

Such an alchemy requires him to be credible as a proponent of rational new policies that will illuminate the Canadian future. But everywhere he goes, the crowds sit silent as he stumbles through a recital of his party's policies, then rise up in cheers as soon as he gets at the scandals. These cheers are the emotional current he needs to recharge his own political batteries. Inevitably, despite his resolve not to do so, he returns at nearly every meeting to a happy gloating over Liberal misdemeanours while his policy declarations take poor second place.

Since he can't use the same scandal material every evening, Diefenbaker is being driven into a self-destroying escalation, moving further away from the well-documented Rivard affair to the treacherously vague accusations of Dr. Marcoux.

THE GALLUP POLL

Minority Government Bad, Most Canadians Believe

One of Prime Minister Pearson's main planks in the current election campaign is that a minority government is bad for the nation. In the latest Gallup Poll survey, a majority of voters (54%) agree with Mr. Pearson that a party with no clear-cut majority is bad for the country.

Only about two in ten Canadians think a party in power, without an over-all majority, is a good thing for Parliament. One in ten feel it does not make much difference, one way or another.

The greatest number (64%) to view a minority government with apprehension comes from the western provinces. Only 47% from Ontario, on the other hand, feel a minority government in Ottawa is bad for Canada.

The question: "As you may know, Ottawa has had a number of minority governments recently—that is a parliament in which the party in power has no clear-cut majority over all other parties combined. On the whole, in your opinion, do you think this has been good or bad for the nation?"

GOAL $800 MILLION IN 1966

Tourism Year 'Best Ever'

OTTAWA (CP) — What appears to have been the best year ever for the Canadian tourist industry may have brought more than $700,000,000 into the country, Dan Wallace, director of the Canadian government travel bureau, said today.

Last year, non-Canadian travellers spent $661,000,000 in the country and the figure has been rising annually by about 10 per cent.

Mr. Wallace said in an interview he hopes the $800,000,000 mark may be passed in 1966 as a prelude to a $1,000,000,000 year in 1967.

He said the bureau has a $2,567,000 travel advertising budget this year, largest at the national level among 100 countries that have organized travel promotion.

This didn't take into account figures for states like Florida or resorts like Nassau that advertise heavily.

Also at the national level, Canada had the biggest budget in the world for straight promotion.

MOST FROM U.S.

Mr. Wallace said most of the advertising money is spent in the United States, where 90 per cent of the business comes from.

The bureau recently opened an office in Frankfurt and is negotiating for quarters in Paris.

Travel by Canadians in Canada had been spectacular this year, he added.

There was a 35-per-cent increase in Ontario cars going to Vancouver Island, which was "sensational."

Sudden Violence Quite Harmless

By ROD CURRIE

ATHENS (CP)—The Greek, says a Greek, is happy 80 per cent of the time, angry 15 per cent of the time and sullen five per cent of the time.

"And it's when he's sullen that you've got to watch out."

This rule of thumb, volunteered by a young doctor working in London and vacationing in his homeland, is sound advice.

The average tourist often is deceived and overwhelmed by the sudden violence of the Greek temper in full flare—really quite harmless—and tends to fall victim to Greek moroseness which in its quiet way can be far more perilous.

A Greek in a temper tantrum gives a magnificent performance. He plays it for everything it's worth, flailing the air with his arms, his voice booming, eyes bulging, the veins of his neck and temples rigid.

It's a sort of tourist attraction, one of the things every visitor must see — and just about as easy to miss as the Acropolis.

IGNORE TANTRUMS

But the Greeks themselves are only interested if they happen to be participants. Otherwise they are completely indifferent.

In a palatial Athens bank, a gathering spot for foreigners changing currency, this reporter witnessed a spectacular display of verbal fireworks when two distinguished-looking directors locked horns over a banking matter.

It lasted five minutes, their voices soaring to the tops of the great Corinthian columns supporting the massive marble ceiling. The combatants were oblivious to foreign spectators who shifted about uneasily, giggled nervously behind their hands or stared in open admiration.

Comely Greek secretaries working nearby were not only undisturbed by the clash but appeared to be unaware of it.

No one ever seems to win an argument in Greece. One of the parties simply wearies of the fight and walks off.

This one ended as usual, with one of the men pulling the typical argument-ending pose—shoulder hunched, eyebrows lifted, arms outstretched before him, palms upwards.

It's supposed to imply that the other chap is a fool, that there's no point arguing with him.

GOES OUT OF WAY

But when the Greek is in his usual jolly mood his friendliness knows no bounds.

He will walk blocks to direct you to your destination. If the menu leaves you bewildered the waiter will insist that you come into the kitchen to look things over before making your selection.

If you frequent a particular restaurant, the waiter will insist on writing your name on an unfinished bottle of wine and saving it for the next day.

"I will put your name 'John' on the bottle," said a cheerful, barefoot schoolboy working in a seaside restaurant during the holiday season.

"They call everyone who speaks English an Englishman," confided a helpful native at a nearby table, "and every Englishman they call John."

But a Greek gone sullen is a different matter.

A hotel clerk, for instance, will suddenly forget how to speak English. Ask for a restaurant and he doesn't know of one for miles.

Set off in the wrong direction and, lost in his petulance, he won't lift a finger to save you.

You wish he'd blow his top—and tell you where to go.

DOWN TEXAS! IT'S SARNIA

SARNIA—Far from ten-gallon-hat country North America's first oil well was dug in southwestern Ontario, just east of this industrial city on the Michigan border.

It was in 1858, one year earlier than Colonel Drake's discovery at Titusville, Pa., often considered to be the world's first commercial well.

Holiday travellers can find the site on Highway 21, just south of Oil Springs, because it is now occupied by a museum in which are depicted the historical aspects of Ontario's petroleum industry.

Dramatic View From New Tower

NIAGARA FALLS—Billed as the tallest structure of its type in the world, the 520-foot Skylon tower opened here last week in time for late autumn visitors.

Focal point of a $12 million Niagara International Centre which includes an exhibition building, the lofty pylon outrivals its two predecessors—the Seagram and Oneida towers—and commands a dramatic view of the American and Horseshoe Falls and the entire Niagara Peninsula.

Visitors ride to the top from the mezzanine of the exhibits building in three high-speed "bubble" elevators on outside shafts. Three levels accommodate roughly 1,500 persons and its uppermost floor contains an observation deck.

Up to 300 people can be served in its central level banquet lounge, with accommodation for a like number in a rotating restaurant on the lower level.

The centre, located on a 32-acre site above Queen Victoria Park, was jointly opened by Premier John Robarts of Ontario and Governor Nelson Rockerfeller of New York

Popular Stopover Point

CAIRO (AP) — Egyptian authorities predict 1965 will be a record year for tourism. This ancient land has become a popular stopover point for group tours of Americans and Europeans.

Officials expect the country to gain tourist income totalling $130,000,000 by the end of the year. This would mean a welcome increase in Egypt's foreign currency reserves.

Tourism income jumped from $40,000,000 in 1962 to $60,000,000 in 1963, then to $85,000,00 in 1964.

Traditionally, the second half of the year—which includes ideal autumn weather — is a boom season. Tourism officials report that most Cairo hotel rooms are reserved through the next four months, although 19 hostelries, ranging from luxury hotels to more modest accommodations, have been constructed in Cairo in three years.

LOOKING AROUND AT ART

By ROBIN SKELTON

Plea for Art in Everyday Life

I have always been an opponent of the view that the only proper place for art is an art gallery where it can be comfortably ignored by the majority of the populace. It seems to me that if works of art have those life-enhancing properties which artists and aestheticians claim, then we should endeavor to make them visible at every twist and turn of our environment.

Skelton

We should make certain that our children are taught in schools which contain large quantities of paintings, drawings, and prints of the highest quality.

We should, individually, make sure our own children find works of art around them in their homes. And we should ensure that our hospitals, nursing homes, orphanages, and, yes, even prisons all provide their inmates with the same aesthetic excitements of a visual kind.

I am aware that the notion of providing prisons with paintings may cause one or two of you to raise a skeptical eyebrow, and I cannot hope to convince the "flog 'em and kill 'em" school.

Nevertheless, if we maintain, as many of us do, that much, if not all criminaltiy, is the product of emotionally disturbed personalities, it would seem logical to endeavor to cure the disturbance rather than temporarily frustrate its overt expression.

The study and practice of painting has been long recognized as a valuable aid in the treatment of emotional disturbance. Moreover, many penal institutions in North America and Europe have had excellent results from the introduction of arts and crafts programs.

Perhaps, in some ways, it is more important that our prisons and detention homes should have good collections of paintings than that our galleries should be well-stocked.

These reflections have led me to wonder also about the damage we inflict upon our children by the ugliness we countenance in our surroundings.

It is well known that so-called "hot" colors and violent clashes of color can cause considerable nervous tension even in the apparently insensitive.

Certain business firms have made use of this fact by facing us with hideous neon signs and multi-colored hoardings which arouse so much nervous irritation that we are unlikely ever to forget the name of the business concerned.

These firms, however, are less to be admired for their strategy than condemned for inflicting a psychological wound upon the community which they purport to serve.

You all, I am sure, can think of places which it is an infliction to view, of filling stations that jangle the nerves to such an extent that they might well contribute to the accident rate, of shops whose facades cause the eyeballs to burn with a slow fire, and of beautiful streets and scenes so cluttered with poles and crossing overhead cables that it seems that a natural masterpiece has been slashed to ribbons by some demented axeman.

This last instance is the more shameful because our own elected representatives have the power to alter the situation, should we insist upon it with sufficient vehemence:

We, indeed, are the guilty ones, and the fools. We are not only inflicting suffering upon ourselves, but in order to save the money it would cost to make all cables run underground, we are allowing ourselves to forfeit the far larger sums we would gain from tourism were we to become one of the few cities in the world unafflicted by these diabolical cats' cradles.

All this, you may say, is mere idealism. We cannot make the business firms alter their ways. We cannot hope to bury all the cables. We cannot afford to fill the hospitals, schools, orphanages and prisons with works of art.

The only reply to this argument is the obvious question: "How do you know what you can do until you've tried?"

If art, if health, if sanity are really as important as we say, should we not make some attempt?

MOUNT ROBSON . . . unstable snow cornice hangs from southeast shoulder.
—From Cloud Walkers, by Paddy Sherman

OPEN SHELF

By John Mika

A strange and often-remarked anomaly of the Canadian character is myopic failure to recognize the luminaries of our national scene until we see their glories reflected in foreign appreciation.

So it is with our artists, statesmen, athletes and others.

And so it is with our mountaineers and the challenging peaks they surmount.

A British Columbia mountaineer, well known among the small and select circle of his peers but also, fortunately, well known among laymen through his association with a mainland newspaper, has attempted to scale this home-grown indifference.

Cloud Walkers, written by Paddy Sherman who lived in Victoria until a few weeks ago, I think attains its objective.

And, if you are a true Canadian, I'm sure you will be convinced too—by the fact that his book has been published this week not only in this country (Macmilian's of Canada) but also in Great Britain and the United States.

Here is a 161-page survey of several mountaineering feats along the jagged spine of the Yukon and British Columbia that rival the awesome tales of Himalayan expeditions.

These include almost incredible trials of alpinists who clambered to the very edges of human endurance to stand on top of Mount Logan's 19,850 feet—as high as you can stand on Canadian soil — and on Mount Waddington, which drew respectful scrutiny from Sir Edmond Hillary.

Epic struggles to the summit of British Columbia's highest mountain, Mount Fairweather, and the Canadian Rockies' loftiest peak, Mount Robson, also are recounted from Mr. Sherman's own notes and those of the Canadian Alpine Journal.

* * *

Interspersed, are the well-known mountain tragedies of 1956 when 62 persons died with an airliner on the high slopes of Mount Slesse, the death of Maj. Rex Gibson, president of the Canadian Alpine Club, the following year on Mount Howson, and the eventual rescue of a hiker lost on Mount Seymour for a week after a colleague had died of exposure almost within sight of downtown Vancouver.

Along the route, these chapters present much of the geological history of the province, the names of many Canadian climbers, some of the techniques of climbing ice, snow and rock and a few of the odd sensations encountered in the rarefied world above the clouds.

A section of 17 photographs illustrates many of the points in the narrative and some very helpful maps were drawn by John A. Hall for the book.

With this book you can follow the steps of men who reached the very heights of mountaineering in this or any land — whilst sitting by your hearth in the depths of the coming winter.

Essence Of Churchill

CHURCHILL'S HISTORY OF THE ENGLISH-SPEAKING PEOPLES, arranged in one volume by Henry Steele Commager; McClelland and Stewart; 1965; 475 pp; index, maps, bibliography.

Reviewed by R. H. Roy

It is a difficult task to write a History of the English-Speaking People even in four volumes, and if it were not for his vigorous style and firm grasp of the English language, even Churchill's original work might have fallen with a thump on the book sellers' market.

To compress into one volume the contents of four might seem equally difficult, but the distinguished American historian, Professor Commager, has in his own way overcome this formidable obstacle and presents here the essence of Churchill.

Churchill's History is basically an expert editing of the original four volumes into one. Retaining the text of the original without any attempt to add any interjections, comments or additions of his own, Commager wisely lets Churchill continue to speak for himself.

For those who would more readily tackle a one-volume, condensed edition than the original, this work is recommended.

Political Analysis Has Current Impact

THE DIEFENBAKER INTERLUDE, PARTIES AND VOTING IN CANDA, by Peter Regenstreif; Longmans Canada Limited, 1965, 194 pages, $5.

Review by J. C. M. Ogelsby

Professor Regenstreif's very important analysis of the voting behavior of the Canadian electorate since 1957 has arrived at an opportune moment—the election of 1965.

Unfortunately, not many of the interested party workers in the four significant parties will have had time to read it before Nov. 8.

If they had been able to do, it might have given them some insights into the problems facing those all too gallant few who actually engage in political partisanship.

In a step-by-step analysis, supported by copious charts supplied by the Canadian Institute of Public Opinion (the Gallop Poll) and his own scientifically charted polls, Regenstreif creates a picture of the Canadian political scene, on both a national and provincial level, as reflected in the federal elections of 1957, 1958, 1962 and 1963.

He has demonstrated that he has a real grasp of what makes the Canadian voter tick. And that voter's ticking is not always consistent.

A lot depends on where he lives, local economic conditions, the personality of the local candidate, numerous issues of national concern, and last and by no means least is the stature of a party's national leader.

As the author points out in his conclusions, "leadership will continue to have a powerful role in motivating political support."

The stress on party leadership is important in a country where the people are voting to elect not only a member of Parliament, but also a government.

Another important issue concerns the question of majority government. It is on this issue that Mr. Pearson based his decision to hold an election.

Regenstreif points out that Canadians in 1963 were apparently unconcerned with the accepted pre-election forecast that their next government would be a minority one.

If Regenstreif is correct in this analysis, it may be very hard to convince the 1965 electorate that they were wrong in 1963!

Try to read the book before election day. It will make an otherwise dreary situation more interesting.

Mutability Theme In Powerful Novel

THE EMPEROR OF ICE CREAM by Brian Moore. McClelland and Stewart, 1965. $5.95.

Reviewed by GRANT McORMOND

The title of Brian Moore's new novel set in war time Ulster is taken from Wallace Stevens' poem, The Emperor Of Ice Cream.

Like the poem, the novel contains wit and irony, with sombre, thought-provoking undertones.

Mutability, the change in man's lot, is the theme of both works. For Gavin Burke, the hero of Mr. Moore's Emperor, the change is a profound one.

At the beginning of the story, Gavin, at seventeen, is a boy, unsure and afraid. He has suffered the humiliation of failure, the uncertainty of love, and the frustration of parental misunderstanding.

By joining an Air Raid Precautions unit at a time when the possibility of an air raid on Belfast seemed ridiculous, he left himself open to the ridicule of his family and friends.

With sympathy and humour, Mr. Moore sketches the lives of the derelicts that make up the Air Raid Precautions post during the months of the silent war. They were cowards, drunkards, and bullies; all were infirm in body or mind.

It is in such an unlikely group of weaklings that Gavin Burke finds strength; among the directionless he finds a purpose to life; amid the cowards he finds courage; in the midst of death he finds life. He emerges from his experiences strong, whole, and mature.

Mr. Moore, whose earlier novel, The Luck of Ginger Coffey was both an artistic and a financial success, maintains the same high level in the Emperor of Ice Cream.

Some readers may find the opening chapters of the story rather slow moving; the speed of the final section, however, is breath-taking and powerful in its impact.

Here is an author who writes with simplicity and sincerity, and who can, with unerring precision, strip away externals and probe to the very heart of his characters.

DANGER OF COMPLACENCY

Prophet With Honor

THE MEMOIRS OF CAPTAIN LIDDELL HART, (Volume I). Longmans Canada Ltd., 1965. 433 pp. Index. Illustrated. $9.25.

Reviewed by R. H. Roy

Captain B. H. Liddell Hart is one of the most outstanding British writers on military affairs. Almost half a century has gone by since he wrote his first slim pamphlet dealing with military tactics.

Since the First World War, he has written or edited over thirty volumes, all on a military theme, dealing primarily with the First and Second World Wars, the theory of war, the conduct of war, generals and generalship.

He was an early and fervid exponent of mechanized warfare in the inter-war period when cavalry was thought by many to have a bright future.

His predictions regarding the striking power of tanks combined with aircraft were ignored in Britain but noted and adopted by the Germans and ultimately used in their blitzkrieg attacks through France.

His suggestions regarding the changing role of British naval strategy in an era when shore-based military aircraft rendered old concepts obsolete were for years ignored or decried by ranking naval officers who could not or would not concede the necessity for change.

Liddell Hart was not necessarily a prophet without honour in his own country. His books were widely read, and as the military correspondent of The Times what he wrote reached a good audience. A number of his suggestions, both public and private, were accepted and put into practice.

However the greatest barrier to his advanced ideas was the group of senior service officers who, for a variety of reasons, refused to acknowledge the potential impact on war of the tank and the aeroplane.

Their minds were frozen in the 1918 period, and their hair-raising marble-headedness must surely be one of the most depressing aspects of the history of Britain's unpreparedness before the last war.

In this first volume of his memoirs, the author deals with events up to about 1937. He writes extremely well, and pulls no punches when describing the many senior service officers and politicians he dealt with.

Churchill, Lloyd George, T. E. Lawrence, various Chiefs of the Imperial General Staff, Secretaries of State for War and others are described by the hard, discerning eye of an exceptionally intelligent and clear-thinking military expert. Few escape unscathed.

Hart's Memoirs will be of primary interest to those interested in military and diplomatic affairs between the wars.

It is at once a lesson in the danger of complacency, and at the same time should be an incentive to many senior officers in our own military establishment to re-examine their mental alertness in an ever-changing world.

Non-English Words May Limit Appeal

"BEHOLD THE FIRE" by Michael Blankfort, General Publishing Co., Ltd., 1965. 397 pages. Price $6.95.

Reviewed by Erick Henderson

Although there is an imposing list of successful books and plays to the credit of this author, it is possible that the reader-appeal of this novel may be subject to some limitation.

Basing his story mainly on events concerning the Palestinian Jews in 1914, he shows a fondness, like too many modern novelists, for frequent use of non-English words or phrases, unintelligible to the average reader.

Some sort of glossary might have helped in this respect—few of us will know Hebrew, Yiddish, Arabic or Turkish.

The novel dwells at length on the persecution and atrocities suffered by these hapless people at the hands of their ruthless Turkish masters, which resulted in the formation of NILI, a Jewish espionage group to aid the advancing British army.

It tells a nightmarish tale of suffering, cruelties, torture and death before eventual success—achieved only at the price of virtual extermination of this devoted, dedicated band.

Those who like an occasional touch of humor in their reading will not find it here—it is not that kind of book. There are some interesting glimpses of famous men, and an impressive description of General Allenby's entry, on foot, into Jerusalem after its surrender by the defeated Turkish army.

Cruise Book Invaluable Guide For All Small Craft Owners

"COASTAL CRUISING," by Will Dawson (second edition), published by Mitchell Press Ltd., Vancouver, B.C., 1965. 258 pages. Price $6.95. Index, maps and photographic illustrations.

Reviewed by Eric Henderson

Mr. Dawson, who for 25 years has roamed happily about these beautiful waters of our Pacific Northwest, writes with expert knowledge of small boat cruising in the general area of Puget Sound, San Juan Islands, coastal British Columbia and south-east Alaska.

His book contributes invaluable advice on problems and needs confronting or affecting the amateur sailor, some of which may be listed here: Weather, tides, currents, engines, navigational aids, communication, government regulations, ship's papers, stores, food supply (including menu suggestions), clothing and other personal requirements even to sun-tan lotion.

He suggests 12 attractive cruises, for which he furnishes excellent sketch maps and information as to local facilities, amenities and historical notes.

Small boat cruising is available today to nearly everyone, whether by ownership or hire; to parties or families as well as to the time-honored, strictly-male fishing or hunting trips.

This book could be of great help to the beginner as well as useful to the seasoned mariner.

Admittedly, this is a guidebook—but a very special one: it must not be considered merely as a travelogue nor as tourist propaganda. Besides containing a wealth of useful information, it is well stocked with excellent photographic illustrations which should arouse the wander-urge in the most lethargic reader.

"Coastal Cruising should be invaluable in the wheelhouse of every small craft.

Roy Thomson was born in Toronto in 1894 with few advantages. His early ventures were inauspicious. Then, in the midst of the Depression—knowing nothing about radio—he acquired a ramshackle station in northern Ontario and, against all odds, was on his way.
In this biography Russell Braddon reveals the character and motives of the man behind one of the most remarkable success stories of the world today. It is a true do-it-yourself success story that began with one small radio station and two employees and has grown to become a 300 million dollar communications empire that stretches round the world. INTERNATIONAL STATURE

Noted Hebrew Violinist To Be Symphony Guest

Born in Russia, a Hebrew, raised in Israel, studied violin in New York, debuted with N.Y. Philharmonic—it would almost seem a magic formula, for Zvi Zeitlin in several of these essentials parallels his great contemporaries, Heifetz, Stern, Milstein, Oistrakh and Elman.

Zeitlin, whose career is spiraling on four continents, will be the next guest artist to appear with Victoria Symphony Orchestra, Nov. 7 and 8.

With Otto-Werner Mueller conducting, the violinist will perform Beethoven's Concerto in D Major, Op. 61.

The youngest student ever to win a full scholarship at the Julliard School of Music, Zeitlin studied there from age 11, under Jacobsen, Persinger and Galamian.

While still a post-graduate be was invited by Koussevitzky to become a member of the chamber music faculty at Tanglewood.

South American triumphs have resulted in five tours of that continent since 1955.

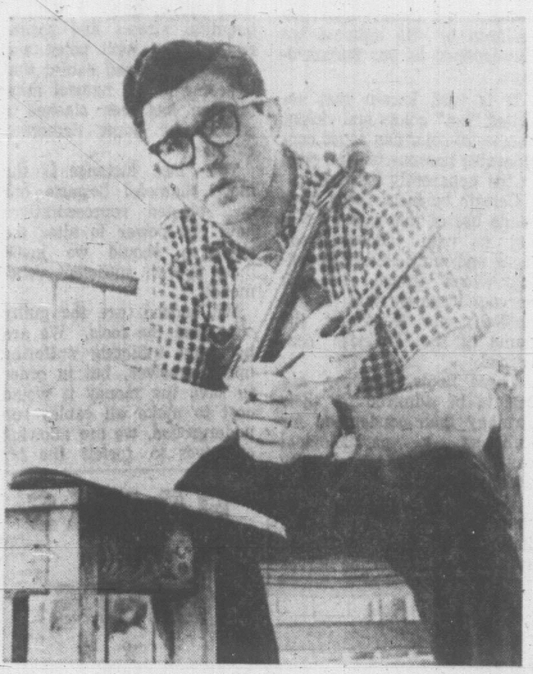
European debuts came in 1961, when he appeared in London, Stockholm, Vienna, Amsterdam, The Hague and Milan.

His successes took him back for a second tour the following year during which he appeared with major orchestras. Altogether he has appeared four times under the aegis of the BBC both as recitalist and guest artist with the BBC Symphony.

Two of the greatest musicians of our time have expressed their delight with this virtuoso artist.

Said Stravinsky following Zeitlin's performance under composer's baton, of the Stravinsky Concerto: "I would like to express my great pleasure and highest satisfaction in Mr. Zvi Zeitlin's performance of my Violin Concerto. Mr. Zeitlin plays not only with impeccable musicianship but with real taste and imagination. His gifts deserve the widest recognition."

And following his performance at the Casals Festival in Prades, France, the renowned cellist wrote: "He is worthy of being regarded among the greatest of instrumentalists."



ZVI ZEITLIN . . . artist at work

The Sounding Board

By AUDREY ST.D. JOHNSON

If anyone wants a really acute criticism of the way in which an orchestra performs he should go to the one responsible for its performance—the conductor.

When all is said and done, the man who trains the ensemble from first readings of the score to first public performance, who knows exactly where one section has a problem, where pitch has given trouble, where there is a technical hazard in the score—this is the person most keenly aware of every flaw in the ultimate result.

I would conclude, following a recent conversation with Otto-Werner Mueller, that there can be few instances anywhere in the world where a competent critic, discussing his review of a concert with its conductor, would not find a competent conductor as fully aware as himself of every technical discrepancy that occurred.

Interpretively, on the other hand, any musically literate member of the audience might, at this point or that in the score, find himself at some quite reasonable variance with the conductor.

"My main job," Mr. Mueller commented to me, "is that of critic. It's the only reason for my existence as a conductor . . . to listen, point out things, try to eliminate anything that is bad as far as the limitations of the ensemble will permit."

"Presumably one could know what one was about but still not get results—like some teachers and stage directors," I said.

"Yes. I must do it in such a way that my critical presence will improve the end result . . . this demands quite a lot of psychology, and this, for me, is the most difficult part of my profession," he replied.

Mr. Mueller went on to admit that . . . "for me to find quite the right tone for encouraging and scolding is sometimes very difficult . . . there is a broad range of degrees between whipping the horse and giving him sugar."

Considering the conductor as critic, he continued: "The main resource we have must be as thorough a knowledge as possible of the material we have to deal with—that is, the material (music) to be presented, knowledge of the score in all detail—and knowledge of the material we have to work with which is in my case, the orchestra.

"I must bear in mind the musical possibilities of each section and each member; nor must I ever forget working conditions. I have found myself very often driving the horse too hard and had to resort to some other technique."

Guest Conductor's Problem

Mr. Mueller has become sufficiently a Victorian to sum up in gardener's terms: "My constant endeavor is to improve, to prune, to weed, but never to uproot."

"What happens when you go to an orchestra as a guest conductor—as you will do several times within the next 18 months?" I asked him.

"The basic difference in approach is that one has to assess the situation very fully and quickly and has no time to consider the scale between using the whip and offering the sugar," he answered.

"Here in Victoria, where my job is to build and raise standards constantly, I find myself actually working as a very severe critic of our orchestra at every rehearsal."

And he added: "With few exceptions I must state that I admire the musicians for how they take it and how they have improved.

"The orchestra is in a growing-up stage — adolescent — and very different components are far from being in an ideal balance with regard to technical ability and sound production.

"Still I personally consider that the improvement so far that I have been fortunate enough to watch is about double what I had hoped two years ago."

It was hardly necessary for me to ask him what the biggest problem is. Many of us have been aware of it and some of us have struggled with it for most of the orchestra's 25 years.

"Naturally certain things could be improved with having more money, but this is the case with every musical organization.

"But I can assure you," he went on, eyes flashing, "I would not be here if I would not find that at least 90 per cent of the orchestra has a quality that cannot be bought for money—namely this completely non-commercial approach of trying to give the music the best interpretation with all the dedication they are capable of and not just serving a time for any specific salary.

"This is a fact—and a quality—that has been noticed immediately by every guest artist who has appeared here with me."

LAW OF OPPOSITES

'Method' Out

By WILLIAM GLOVER

NEW YORK (AP) — Cyril Ritchard, an ace at elegantly cheeky on-stage behavior, calls it all sheer sham.

"People are always asking me, 'How can you do such things?' " says the jaunty star. "And I answer, 'Because I don't do such things at home.' "

Being someone you aren't, he adds, is acting at its finest—a notion that brings him into headlong collision with adherents of "the method," which relies on inner involvement.

"Nonsense," the blue-eyed veteran retorts. "Over the years, the best performances of tarts have been by girls who don't go in for that sort of thing. And the best drunk scenes are played by those who never touch the stuff.

"I think such things come off so well because it's all make-believe and an actor dares what he'd never do otherwise."

Having been everything from piratical Captain Hook in Peter Pan to a timorous Roman emperor, the 66-year-old Ritchard currently is regaling audiences as the frayed personification of old-school tradition in The Roar of the Greasepaint—The Smell of the Crowd. His work in the musical won a nomination for a Broadway Tony award as the season's top performance.

"I always do parts larger than life, outrageous and mad," he explains. "It's true that my theatre character is Quite Camp."

Being known by that last word adds special cachet at the moment to the whole Ritcharian existence.

Along with such items as courreges ladyboots, the frug and pop art, Camp has recently been an item of fad enthusiasm. Ritchard finds the term's sudden popularity rather ambiguous.

"In my sheltered boyhood—I was raised by the Jesuits—it had a lavender tinge," he says. "Now it describes anything odd, exotic or so outlandishly square as to be 'in' with the stylesetters. Like Tiffany lamps.

"Bernard Shaw Was Camp," adds Ritchard. "When he was most angry, he made you laugh. Or take David Merrick, the producer of the show I'm in. I behaved like a Russian bear while rehearsals were on. Afterwards Merrick congratulated me for the calm way I took all the changes which were made—that's Camp, too."

DIRECTING season's first production for University of Victoria Players' Club, is Robert Hedley of Uvic's Drama Division faculty. The play is Arthur Miller's probing, controversial social drama, A View From the Bridge. It will be presented in the new Phoenix Theatre on Gordon Head Campus for 10 performances, Nov. 16-20 and 23-27.

NORTH BREEZES

"Wait until I tell them at home. I saw a lion on the street in Victoria," remarked a guest in IMPERIAL poolside dining room. He was just back from a Chinatown celebration.

"If you had been here 103 years ago you would have seen a camel — several camels — and live ones at that," we told him. (We've been boning up on history for the '66-'67 centenaries.)

"A ship called Hermann brought 23 camels to pack miner's supplies to the Cariboo. Some remained here as farm work animals. But they scared horses and didn't last," we added.

"Doesn't surprise me," said our guest with a sly grin. "They left their humps on some of your side streets!"

Edge-of-Seat Suspense In Triangle Thriller

A cruel, sadistic husband, a desperate wife and her lover, a plan for the "perfect" murder—this is a basic plot perhaps—but several very original twists to the story make "Sound of Murder," Bastion's next production at the McPherson Playhouse, one of the most unusual thrillers ever staged.

The husband (John Drean) writes delightful stories for children, about Small Bobby and Fuzzytail. The wife (Vanessa Lax) and her lover (Lawrence Eastick) are certainly not murderers by nature.

And when the plot is complicated by a scheming spinster secretary (Joy Richards), a friendly police inspector (John Martin), who only wants an autograph for his children, a disappearing corpse, a violent storm, and a glass of champagne, you have the right ingredients for edge-of-the-seat suspense.

Sixth member of the cast is Bud Bishop, in his second stage appearance as a policeman.

With "Sound of Murder," Oct. 26 to 30, Bastion Theatre is instituting a door prize night (Wednesday, Oct. 27). There will be a door prize night for each production, in a frank attempt to stimulate interest on a night when audiences are usually apt to be smaller.

Local merchants are donating merchandise (retail value $25 and over) and the draw will be made at the close of the show on the night.

RED'S PHILOSOPHY

Write a Concerto—Paint a Picture Tell a Joke—You're Communicating

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Red Skelton, now in his 15th consecutive season as the star of a television variety hour, appears to have one of the world's easiest, high-paying jobs—an official work week of two days.

The 52-year-old comedian arrives at CBS Hollywood headquarters early Tuesday, rehearses, confers with writers, revises and improvises endlessly for two hectic days, concluding with the taping of his show before an audience Wednesday night.

The minute the show is over, Skelton goes directly to his dressing room, gets into sports clothes, and soon is in his car travelling the 125 miles back to the Skelton home in Palm Springs.

Skelton, his wife Georgia and their daughter, Valentina, 17, spend most of the time at their desert home. Skelton uses his other residence, a spacious hilltop house in Bel-Air, only on his two nights in Los Angeles.

His car is equipped with a tape recorder and Skelton, while driving, wears a microphone around his neck.

Sometimes he "writes," dictating short stories or outlining plot ideas.

"I must have written about 800 of these stories," Skelton said.

On other days, he spends his hours at the wheel composing music—and lyrics to go with them.

"Sometimes I try to set down my impressions of people in terms of music," Skelton continued. "I felt that Greer Garson was a concerto of classical simplicity. Patrice Munsel was sparkling music."

TUNES RECORDED

He sings — or, more often, whistles—tunes into the microphone, and they are later transcribed. Some of his work has been so impressive that four of his songs will be used in a forthcoming motion picture and others will be the basis of a record album.

RED

The comedian, famous for his pantomime skills, is the son of a circus clown who died shortly before Red was born. Red surprised his friends—as well as serious critics of art—by his skill at painting. He attempted only pictures of clowns.

"I don't paint clowns any more," he said. "Somehow, I've gotten away from that."

He sees nothing remarkable in his broad interests in the creative arts, and thinks they are all closely related — comedy, pantomime, prose, poetry, music, paintings.

"It is all just communicating with people," he reflected. "You just use different approaches."

Drought in Artists But Series Goes On

Things are tough this year on the Pacific Coast as regards touring artists and groups. Presumably Eastern circuits, Europe and South America are attracting all the major talent.

But Famous Artists, which has maintained a celebrity series in Victoria and Vancouver for the better part of two decades, has nevertheless, come up with a five-event program for this fall-winter season.

The series provides an interesting variety with piano, violin and vocal soloists, that general favorite, The Vienna Boys Choir, and a ballet company which has been making a considerable reputation in the East.

Les Grands Ballets Canadiens is under the artistic direction of Anton Dolin and comprises a company of 60 traveling with an orchestra of 25.

It was recently described by the New York Times as having "international scope."

Starring in the current tour are Anna Marie Holmes and David Holmes who have joined the company directly following their prolonged and personal triumphs in Kirov and Leningrad.

Husband-and-wife duo, Mrs. Holmes was formerly well-known as Anna Marie Ellerbeck, having studied initially in Vancouver and at the Wynne Shaw Studio in Victoria.

Little needs to be said regarding the delightful Vienna Choir Boys who have never failed to charm Victorians, as they do all their audiences with their unique style of program and lovely voices.

Of the two Russian artists, the young pianist, Nicolai Petrov is the less well known by reason of his youth—22—and the rapidity of his climb to international mark.

He first became known on this continent when he won, three years ago, in Texas, the Van Cliburn Competition for pianists from all countries.

Outstanding violinist, Boris Gutnikov is the other Russian artist.

Fifth event will be a song recital by Vancouver soprano, Betty Phillips who has long been associated with Vancouver Opera Society, International Festival and CBC television.

As extras, on which series subscribers will receive advance buying privileges, there will be incredible Gracie Fields who made a completely triumphant return tour of Canada last year, and our own popular revue show, Spring Thaw in its latest edition.

Sophisticated Comedy
Royal Theatre

Leslie Caron tries hard to convince us she is a prim professional psychologist who has forgotten she is also a woman. But her natural endowments argue otherwise; Rock Hudson is around and it is obvious that, sooner or later, she must fall under his ultra-masculine spell.

Meantime, Dr. Caron tyrannizes her weak-kneed fiance and rouses the concern of her French father (Charles Boyer), who feels she is becoming too much the dominating American female.

Perhaps only a Frenchman could play such a role and Papa Boyer, with his whimsical charm, is just convincing enough to be amusing. He enlists the help of glamor boy Hudson in humanizing his daughter, suggesting that a romantic interlude would be to her advantage.

Hudson calls on her as a patient with an unusual complaint — he is irresistible to women—and Dr. Caron enrolls him in one of her group therapy sessions.

* * *

Later she takes him to her apartment for safe-keeping, but Hudson gets her drunk on champagne and she winds up in his.

The situation is a lot more innocent than it appears, but the usual complications ensue when Dr. Caron's fiance finds out what has happened.

Adding to the general confusion are Walter Slezak, an old friend of her father, who runs a cafe, and Norma Varden, her fiance's mother, who falls down an elevator shaft.

More confusion follows when Dr. Caron launches a counter-attack on Hudson by concocting a yarn about a Spanish lover whose passionate advances are far superior to his own.

Those who like their humor spicy won't be disappointed in this sophisticated bedroom farce and, judging from Friday night's audience at the Royal, many do.

The script by Stanley Shapiro and Nate Monaster contains some witty lines; the direction is slick and efficient and the general standard of acting for this type of entertainment is above average.

Warrant for Actor

NEW YORK (AP)—A warrant for the arrest of Toronto actor David Henry Britton, 22, charged with smuggling the hallucination-producing drug LSD from Canada, was issued Thursday when he did not appear in U.S. federal court.

Novelist Fined For 'Insults'

PARIS (Reuters) — A Paris court Friday fined novelist Jacques Laurent a total of 6,000 francs ($1,300) for insulting President de Gaulle.

The court ruled that in his book Mauriac Under de Gaulle Laurent "attributed dishonorable and disgraceful feelings and motives" to the French president.

Adjudication Panel Named

Syllabus for the 1966 Greater Victoria Music Festival has already gone to press, thus completing one preliminary stage in preparation for the annual spring event.

The roster of adjudicators has been completed. British adjudicators from the Canadian chain will be Neil van Allen, piano, and Wyndham Williams, vocal.

Others returning from last year's and previous festivals are Crawford Clarke, accordion, Rose Hill, dance, Alfred Boyington, strings, Randall Spicer, bands and instrumental and Ralph Manzo, school choral.

Speech arts will be adjudicated by newcomer, Mrs. Jose Smith of Port Alberni.

Following up a suggestion from the Registered Music Teachers' Association, quick study classes will be discontinued, it being considered that sight reading classes fill all requirements satisfactorily.

Coercion Ruled Out For Metro

By AB KENT
Times City Hall Reporter

Regional government will come by consensus not coercion, deputy minister of municipal affairs J. Everett Brown told Victoria city council Friday.

The mayor and aldermen had a 90-minute informal session with the deputy to help council make vital decisions on regional functions involving parks, hospitals, sewers and fireworks.

All the lands contained in the outer boundaries of school districts 61, 62 and 63 are declared to be the regional district of the capital of B.C.

FOUR FUNCTIONS

Control of the four functions named would become joint responsibilities when an order-in-council declares them so.

And unless an area takes steps to opt out, it is automatically included.

"What if four or five areas vote no?" Ald. Clyde Savage asked.

"Then I think we'd just walk away and forget about it for the time being," Mr. Brown replied.

"But if it were just one or two areas, then I think it would have to be tried again."

"Would it have to be unanimous?" the alderman asked.

"Let's put it this way. The area as a whole would not be very happy with any particular part that voted no," the deputy minister said.

MORALLY OBLIGATED

He suggested that responsible people living in the rural areas and now benefitting by services provided at the expense of urban ratepayers would feel morally obligated to contribute to these services.

Ald. Michael Griffin asked whether recourse to referendum would be needed each time a function were to be changed or added.

Mr. Brown said this could be done by council decision, or popular consent, depending on how much support council felt it had from the public.

The key lies in letters patent because due to the diversity of conditions in B.C. it would be "physically impossible" to legislate all terms of regional joint administration, Mr. Brown said.

Mayor R. B. Wilson said he was glad to see the proposed letters would cover compensation to joint services board members. These appointees would need extra pay because of extra demands on their time, and the question is raised as to whether councils will have to be larger to permit aldermen to handle the additional load.

An area could be a member of the joint services board without taking part in cost items, he said.

"A lot of people will have to be thinking along the same lines," comptroller-treasurer James Bramley said.

"Otherwise there will be stone wall after stone wall."

BETTER DEFINITION

Mr. Brown referred to regional planning, a matter originally intended to be covered with the other items. This has not been forfgotten, he said, although there was objection to it being a function of a regional board He said his staff is working on a better definition of what the planning function should include.

Ald. Robert Baird asked the deputy whose responsibility will be public education on regional functions.

"We have an MLA on the air now who is doing a lot of damage before it is even off the ground," he complained.

Mr Brown said it is up to councils to decide on leadership after they have come to conclusions on the concepts.

The mayor said councils must decide many things, for example, on hospital capital costs: how much should be local responsibility or whether full responsibility should belong to the provincial government, as in Quebec.

Hospitals would be financed under the proposed system by a formula based on 50 per cent of assessment and 50 per cent of population within each area, with a maximum of 2 mills per year on the aggregate assessment of $275 million.

On this basis, the city of Victoria would pay about 2.25 mills or some 35 per cent of the total.

Mr. Brown said that since hospital planning takes about 1½ or two years before any construction commences, a building fund could be started meanwhile to raise a fund.

"In this way the board could finance hospital needs far into the future," he said.

16 MEMBERS

There would be 16 members on a regional board and votes would be given on the basis of each 5,000 population as follows:

NO BANANAS

Baron of Gangland Missing Full Year

NEW YORK (AP) — In the heat of an investigation into organized crime, Joe Bananas, gangland baron, disappeared one year ago today in a sidewalk kidnapping.

Real or hoax crime, he still is missing, despite a search ranging from Mafia haunts in the United States to Sicily, the birthplace of the secret brotherhood of the underworld.

On the same day that two gunmen snatched him in the early morning hours of Oct. 21, Joe Bananas was to have appeared before a federal grand jury investigating the rackets. The jury still is sitting, its probe now broadened to include the disappearance itself.

Bananas, identified in Senate testimony as ruler of one of New York City's five Mafia "families," had dined with his Tucson, Ariz., lawyer, Lawrence P. D'Antonio; lawyer William Power Maloney, and two of Maloney's law associates at an East 45th Street steakhouse.

After midnight, Bananas accompanied Maloney to the latter's Park Avenue residence. Bananas stood beside him while the lawyer paid the cab fare.

"Suddenly, I got the shock of my life when I saw this guy grappling with Joe," Maloney reported.

APPEARED WITH GUN

"As I started toward the man who grabbed him first, the other one appeared and he also had a gun. The first one said in a loud, clear voice, 'Come on, Joe, my boss wants to see you.'

"Joe said, 'What's going on here? Who are these guys'

"I followed the man with Joe and the second one backed after them, holding the gun and pointing it right at me. He was about 25 feet from me when he fired the gun once . . . .

"The men put Joe in a late model, two-door beige car. The headlights were on. I couldn't see if anyone else was in the car, because it was too dark. The car was pointed east on 36th Street, just off Park Avenue.

"Joe was still struggling as it sped off."

Maloney was not hurt.

REAL ESTATE

SHIRLEY OF COLONY

THE SELLING BLUES

Every day thousands of dollars of Real Estate changes hands. In the month of September in Victoria (as reported by the secretary of the Real Estate Board, Mrs. Catherine Godfrey), Real Estate transactions valued at $1,653,000 were sold through Multiple Listing alone. Many thousands were sold through exclusive and open listings. Each time a "For Sale" sign is erected it's the beginning of the "Selling Blues" for the Lady of the house. Now the home must be kept in apple-pie order for viewing, the phone rings frequently, sometimes dinner schedules are disrupted and complete strangers wander through her "little castle," even peering into the closets. The invasion of her privacy is a very upsetting thing, but knowing this, the well-trained Realtor can do much to see that it is more bearable: by making and KEEPING appointments, by being prompt, by calling when a change in plans occurs, by advising the home-owner regarding the views of the client AFTER inspection and by a hundred little courtesies the Realtor can and does help the home owner through the SELLING BLUES.

Overloading Of Refugees Brings Fines

KEY WEST, Fla. (AP) — The operators and owners of two boats used to shuttle refugees from Cuba to the United States were given stiff fines today in what appears to be a U.S. Coast Guard crackdown on the traffic.

It is the first legal move against the huge flotilla of small boats which have brought more than 1,200 refugees to the U.S. since Cuban Premier Fidel Castro opened the doors Sept. 28 for a general exodus.

It was not immediately known whether similar action will be taken against the operators of at least 60 boats which are being detained at Key West.

Penalties of $6,000 were levied against Jack Ott, city of Miami recreation department employee, owner of the 44-foot sloop Shark V; Donald R. Green, 30, of Miami, awaiting appeal on a criminal court conviction and owner of the 30-foot Mistral, and Jack Peter Zack of Pittsburg, Pa., a treasure hunter who chartered Ott's boat.

FACE MORE FINES

Federal officials say the three also could face fines ranging up to $1,000 each by customs and immigration departments for each of the 60 refugees the three allegedly brought into the country.

The coast guard said its action arose from "concern for the safety of the lives of the refugees."

Meanwhile, the U.S. continued negotiations with the Cuban government for an orderly movement of some 50,000 or more waiting to seek a new homeland.

Friday, a group of 89 refugees reached Key West in a converted patrol boat. It was the largest single group so far as the refugee count in the last two weeks rose to more than 1,200.

Judgment Reserved in Suit Against Union for Pickets

VANCOUVER (CP) — Chief Justice J. O. Wilson of the B.C. Supreme Court Friday reserved decision on a suit by the attorney-general against the International Longshoremen's and Warehousemen's Union (CLC) and three of its members.

The charges allege an injunction granted Aug. 10 against picketing at a dock in Squamish was not obeyed.

The ex-parte injunction was granted to Nissho (Canada) Ltd. and Pacific Coast Hydrocarbons Ltd. on grounds that illegal picketing had blocked loading of liquid propane gas aboard a ship bound for Japan.

The contempt of court suit was brought against the union and two members, Clarence John Cordocedo and James Boles. Charges against two other members were dismissed for lack of evidence.

Arthur Baker, Canadian area president of the union, was charged with counselling contempt of court.

Boles testified Friday he was picketing at the scene but left when the injunction was served. He said he returned two hours later to deliver a telephone message to a union official and, while talking, another man draped a placard over his shoulder.

At that moment, he testified, a photographer took his picture with the placard.

Police Probe Hotel Fire

QUEBEC (CP) — A spokesman for the Quebec Provincial Police said this week certain aspects of a fire which destroyed the Hotel Gagnon in Donnacona 20 miles southwest of here in November, 1963, are being investigated.

The hotel was owned by Emile Gagnon, father-in-law of Paul Chandonnet, one of the victims in recently-discovered underworld slayings in Quebec.

The needs of our senior citizens are not adequately provided for in the Canada Pension Plan. The cost of living has spiralled, and a pension of $100 per month is today's recognized level of minimum subsistence.

2. Homeowners' municipal taxes up to $500 will be deductible for federal income tax purposes
Rising school costs impose an unfair share of the tax burden on homeowners, almost to the breaking-point. The $500 deduction will mean a federal sharing of education costs with the provinces and municipalities.

3. NHA mortgages will be provided for older homes
NHA mortgages have been limited to new home construction. Mortgages on older homes will permit the mobility of people that is essential if wage-earners are to take full advantage of Canada's growth.

4. Interest rates on consumer loans will be reduced by the enactment of special legislation (Consumers' Loans Act)
Present interest rates add 20% and more to the cost of necessary and basic consumer purchases. High interest rates dry up consumer demand. We will provide urban dwellers with the same type of credit advantages now available to farmers.

5. National plan for education—Canada's first—will increase per capita university grants from $2 to $5
Higher education must not become an institution reserved for the privileged. Our new program will allow thousands more Canadians to obtain a university education; will increase grants for university expansion and medical research; and will be a stimulus to the whole economy. A Department of Youth will be established.

6. The 11% sales tax on building materials and production machinery will be removed
The sales tax adds to the cost of homes and goods, raises prices in the domestic and export markets, and jeopardizes important job-producing sectors of the economy. The elimination of this tax will be a first objective of a PC government.

7. Foreign trade will be greatly expanded
The Progressive Conservative government opened up wheat sales in China and Russia and found new markets for Canadian goods throughout the world creating the first commodity export trade surplus in years. Our new program will expand major port facilities in Canada, stimulate an aggressive sales program abroad, and welcome foreign investment in Canada which will be of greatest value to B.C.

8. Eliminate the "Squeeze" on the small businessman
Working capital will be more easily obtained through the "Small Business Loans Act". A wife working in the business may be paid a salary, deductible as a business expense. Proof of the Conservative Policy For People.

VELLY GOOD IN VINTER

Chrysanthemums Chinese Style

By JACK BEASTALL

Thirty-five years ago the dark bronze, late spray chrysanthemum was the symbol of autumn in the majority of local gardens.

Jack

These plants were kindly donated to gardeners by the inevitable "John," the Chinese vegetable man.

After flowering was over and the blooms cut and sold, "John" would graciously donate an old root to each of his customers.

If you were a very good customer you might also receive a "Chinese Lily" bulb at Christmas.

The strange part is that the plants still persist in many gardens, flowering late October into November and even December, and tough enough to withstand any winter right out in the open garden.

FLOWERING LATE

To some a chrysanthemum means only this late blooming old-timer, for a surprising number of gardeners have yet to become acquainted with the modern varieties which give color in the garden from August until cut by frost.

These modern beauties are not thoroughly winter hardy, and while they often survive in a well-drained soil on high ground, they usually succumb to wet or frost in low-lying gardens.

Another point, one not known to all gardeners, is that the flowers deteriorate markedly when the old roots are left to flower for another year, and to overcome this the chrysanthemum specialists grow new plants from cuttings every spring.

To obtain strong shoots early in the year (March and April) for making cuttings, the old roots have to be in a protected place otherwise it would be May before suitable growths were available on plants that survived.

PLASTIC SUFFICIENT

The protected place is usually a coldframe, one of the simple structures described in this column a few months ago.

Since coddling is the worst thing that can happen to a chrysanthemum root (it only needs protection from extreme rain and cold) the frame does not have to be airtight, watertight or frosttight.

In fact, four pieces of shiplap with a plastic film cover is sufficient.

As the different varieties of chrysanthemums finish flowering, the stems are cut about two inches above soil level, the name tag attached firmly to one of the stubs, and the roots, complete with any basal growths, lifted, shaken free of excess soil and taken to the frame.

At this point one of two methods can be followed.

When the frame is on a well-drained piece of ground and the soil mixture inside has a fair percentage of sand in its makeup, the old roots (or stools as they are called) can be planted directly into the mixture as close together as it is possible to place them.

PROTECT ROOTS

Should there be any possibility of the soil within the frame becoming excessively wet over winter, it is better to place about one inch of sand over the soil and stand the stools cheek-by-jowl on top.

A mixture of dry compost and sand can then be sifted between and around the roots until only the basal growths and cut back stems are showing.

The frame covers, whether glass or plastic film, will have to be put in place from the start to protect the roots from rain, but they should be raised on pieces of 2x4 to give a four-inch air space all around between frame and cover at all times.

Only when severe frosts or arctic outbursts are forecast should the frame covers be lowered and a few sacks or mats thrown over the top to break the cold.

Wires attached to the frame sides and pulled tightly over the covers will be needed to keep the covers in place when the wind blows, or two pieces of 2x6 can be laid on top.

ATTACK YOUNG

Slugs are the main enemies of chrysanthemums in a coldframe, and slug pellets should be used freely from the beginning.

In a watertight frame some hand watering may be needed from time to time but this must be done judiciously.

Too much water, or too moist an atmosphere, will cause fungus rots to attack the young growths, while too dry a condition will cause the growths to wither and die.

As long as the roots receive plenty of air, even to removing the covers on days that are sunny although cool, very little growth will take place before February.

By March the covers can be closed and growth encouraged.

When about three inches long the shoots are cut off, rooted in sand, sand-peat, or terralite, and new plants made to beautify the garden next fall.

WEEK'S WORK

By JACK BEASTALL

Stow away the canna roots, the hybrid fuchsias, and the crinums if the garden soil is heavy and cold in winter. The floor of a cool greenhouse, or other frost free place should be chosen where watch can be kept over them until spring.

Water greenhouse pots carefuly. Avoid watering those which are resting. Keep the air on the dry side.

Pot up dwarf irises, dwarf tulips, ixias and sparaxis.

Bury the pots in sand in an open cold frame until cold weather. Then cover with glass as needed.

In spring these pots can be used to brighten the odd corner with unexpected bloom.

Any young geraniums and other pelargoniums should be potted on as the roots fill the pots.

Keep rather on dry side from now on if but little heat is used in greenhouse.

Broadleaved evergreens to be dug from open ground may now be moved and planted.

Leaf-losing shrubs and trees which have to be dug will not yet be ready to move for another week or so.

Late potatoes should be dug without delay.

Brussels sprouts can be given liquid fertilizer if buttons are late forming. See that plants are firmly in ground.

Pick and gather filberts on a dry day, and spread in a cool basement to finish ripening.

Conduct Your Music Scientifically

Fly High With Hi-Fi

By PAULINE GRAVES

Music plays a larger part in our homes today than ever before.

Thanks to technical advances in sound engineering, not only are music systems better than ever, but the equipment that produces music for homes has made such strides that records and radio transmit music flawlessly.

No wonder more people than ever buy records and own high fidelity and stereo systems.

But where do you put it all?

As shown in this home, one wall provides the answer.

What lifts this out of the ordinary, though, is that the plan includes a niche for the spinet piano, and sometimes they, too, are hard to locate successfully in a room.

Even the television set has a place.

By concentrating everything that is a part of home entertainment in the one area, there is a minimum of miscellaneous furniture scattered about the room.

It is a great idea for small rooms and apartments.

Note how carefully the plan is worked out for an attractive symmetrical arrangement.

Television and piano are centred, and speakers are behind cane in the upper right and left corners.

Radio and record player match up with bookshelves on the opposite side, and the remaining space is divided evenly.

HOMES and GARDENS

Take Note Now Of Michaelmas

Take note of some of the new perennial asters (Michaelmas daisies) which produce great mounds of color now. Color range is wide as well as the size. Low edging plant, a middle-size plant for the centre of the border, or a tall one for the back will meet any of these requirements. Nothing bothers them. They are best planted in the spring, however, if the blooming is early enough, they can be divided soon after. They should be divided each year or at least every other year. A combination of the new Solidago hybrids (Goldenrod) and Michaelmas daisies plantings in a border or mass grouping is spectacular.

Cash Safe As Your Home When This Man Inspects

All homes built under the National Housing Act are inspected during construction.

The owner of the house under construction may think that as a federal government official the Central Mortgage and Housing Corporation inspector is checking the building to protect the home owner's interests.

The inspector is first of all making sure that the building, when completed, will be a good security for the money lent on the property.

Though CHMC's first concern is to protect the investment guaranteed by the Canadian government, it goes without saying that these inspections afford a degree of protection to the home owner as well.

CANADA PROGRESSING FASTER THAN U.S.

TORONTO (CP)—Canada has been outstripping the United States in economic progress in the last two years and the boom should continue well into next year, Finance Minister Gordon said Friday night.

The boom is one of the country's longest and strongest in peacetime history, he told members at a banquet of the German-Canadian Business and Professional Associates.

The gross national product rose by 26 per cent during the last three years and national output has expanded at nearly twice the average growth rate of the previous five or six years.

HAVE WEAPONS

Americans Battle Inflation Threat

NEW YORK (AP)—Gardner Ackley, chairman of the president's council of economic advisers, said the U.S. government has both the weapons and the will to contain inflation.

While cocoa bean prices have been falling, some manufacturers have been raising the prices of overcoats and shoes, automobiles and tin cans, color television, aluminum siding and certain steel products.

Some increases have been announced publicly, and some are being tacked on by cutting cash discounts and charging for extras that used to be included free.

Manufacturers blame increased costs of labor, material and payroll taxes.

Cloth prices are up five to 1 per cent, and a suit that retailed for $80 last fall may cost $85 now.

Shoe prices are scheduled to go up this spring: A $12 pair of shoes may cost about $13 and the $20 models about $22, reflecting the selective price increases made last week by major steel manufacturers.

Magnavox Co. increased prices on about one fourth of its color television sets five to eight per cent.

SOME EXPRESS FEARS

The price increases, coupled with higher personal income, a rising volume of credit and increased federal spending, have led to fears of inflation in some areas.

Administration spokesmen said spending for the war in Viet Nam doesn't appear to be climbing fast enough to cause inflation, but that it almost certainly ruled out another tax cut.

The United States currently is spending about $51,000,000,000 a year on defence. Treasury Secretary Henry H. Fowler said that if there were an increase of $10,000,000,000, he would think about a tax increase. Even $5,000,000,000, he indicated, would wipe out administration hopes of proposing a tax cut in January for those with low incomes.

A report from the council of economic advisers said personal income after taxes rose $12,400,000,000 this summer, the largest three-month increase since 1950.

The council said U.S. citizens had $31,000,000,000 more to spend on goods and services, with income at a seasonally adjusted rate of $471,300,000,000, up from $440,300,000,000 last year.

Auto production for the week was estimated at 213,647 cars, up from 204,763 cars in the previous week.

Iron, Steel Industry Grows Fast

TORONTO (UPI) — Canada's iron and steel industry is rapidly approaching a position of self-sufficiency, V. W. Scully, president of the Steel Company of Canada, told the Empire Club this week.

Scully said the steelmaking industry's rate of growth had outstripped expectations contained in the Gordon commission report of 1955.

He predicted that the industry's growth in the future "should continue at a rate certainly not appreciably less than that attained since the Gordon forecast was published a decade ago."

Since 1946, Canadian steel makers have pushed capacity from 2.3 million tons to 9.8 million tons, an increase of more than 400 per cent, Scully said.

He attributed the dramatic growth of steelmaking in Canada to increased facilities and technical advances.

He noted that steelmaking was probably the only major industry in Canada where U.S. companies have not acquired ownership or control.

Aphid Battle Grants Asked

PRINCE GEORGE (CP)—Forests Minister Williston said Thursday night he has asked for federal aid to combat an infestation that has hit British Columbia balsam forests.

Mr. Williston said at a Social Credit election meeting he has received no reply from the federal government to his request for help in fighting the infestation of the balsam woolly aphid which has struck Lower Mainland and Vancouver Island balsam stands.

He expressed fear that the aphid could devastate the balsam forests of the province if not checked.

The forest industry has asked for a $250,000 program to fight it. Mr. Williston promised to pay half the cost and asked the federal government to pay the other half.

RETAILING BOOM SPREADS INTO FALL

OTTAWA (CP)—A retailing boom, with some lines of business reporting sales as much as 22 per cent higher than last year, appears to be spreading into autumn.

The bureau of statistics reported sales in August by all lines of chain stores were up nearly 5 per cent from a year earlier.

September department store sales were nearly 12½ per cent greater. They were up 7.1 per cent in the Atlantic provinces, 12.9 per cent in Quebec, 9.7 per cent in Ontario, 12.2 per cent in Manitoba, 12.3 per cent in Saskatchewan, and 10.9 per cent in British Columbia.

Pearson Hails New Car Bill

OTTAWA (CP) — Prime Minister Pearson hailed President Johnson's final signature on the U.S.-Canada automobile trade pact Friday with confidence that the expanding Canadian auto industry will gain momentum.

He said that since the two countries began melding their vehicle production facilities to serve and capitalize on the North American common market pool, 170 Canadian concerns have expanded or made definite plans to establish new or expanded facilities.

Announcement of many of these projects by the firms involved has been held up pending presidential approval of the new U.S. Automotive Products Trade Act, enacted by Congress earlier this month. President Johnson signed the bill Friday, lauding it as a measure to protect U.S. auto production.

Mr. Pearson said in a statement issued here before he flew to Halifax to continue his general election campaign that the benefits of the agreement "will continue to increase as its operation gains momentum."

Already, he said, it has meant a reduction in prices for 1966 model cars. Base prices of the new models are below the prices of the same models in 1965, before adding the cost of additional frills being built into next year's cars now on the market.

SIGNED IN JANUARY

The auto trade pact was signed by Mr. Pearson and the president last January. Canada immediately abolished tariffs on imports of U.S. cars and car parts through manufacturers' dealers.

Legislation was necessary to abolish the U.S. tariff on Canadian cars and parts, and the new law takes effect in 60 days but is made retroactive to Jan. 18 when Canadian tariffs were abolished.

The net effect of this is to open the border to free trade between the two countries in automobiles and original-equipment parts. Savings would result from higher volume production of specific lines in either country to serve the markets of both countries. But tariffs remain in effect on cars purchased across the border by individuals, and on replacement parts.

BONN TRADE BOOST SEEN

HAMBURG (Reuters) — A British Columbia trade mission will end an 11-day visit to West Germany "highly encouraged" about prospects of increasing trade with the federal republic, its leader, Thomas Sturgess, said Friday night.

Guard Stays Over Beard

HAMILTON (CP) — David William Patchett, 23, a worker in the mechanical department of the Steel Co. of Canada, has a beard.

Stelco wants Mr. Patchett either to shave off the beard or continue wearing a beard-guard — a leather harness worn around and under his chin—at all times on the job.

The beard, say company officials, is a fire hazard and Mr. Patchett must wear the guard no matter how silly he says he feels.

He told an arbitration board here he thought the company was infringing on his civil rights and that the guard irritated his face.

Magistrate J. Arthur Hanrahan of Windsor, arbitration board chairman, said it was the strangest case he had ever heard. It will take at least a week before he passes judgment, he said.

Meanwhile at home, Mrs. Patchett said the beard was symbolic of "Bill's manliness,' character and virility."

Power Demand Grows

VANCOUVER (CP) — A report prepared by British Columbia Hydro predicts a greater demand for electricity than had been calculated by experts only last year.

The new report predicts a maximum electrical load by 1967-68 of 2,368,000, about 83,000 kilowatts more than Hydro had forecast.

Dr. Gordon Shrum, co-chairman of the power agency, said this will spur Hydro's work to arrange for alternate sources of power until Peace River power is available.

Hydro's total generating capacity now is about 1,894,000 kilowatts.

By 1974-75, said the report, demand should be 3,716,000 kilowatts.

HOW SAFE IS A MORTGAGE?

Whereas most investments risk a loss on the first dollar's depreciation of the value of the security, a mortgage can retain its full value IN SPITE OF A DEPRECIATION of the property secured. Therefore, the LOWER PER CENTAGE of total value represented by the mortgage, the lesser the projected risk.

But real-estate is considered so basically sound by many lending institutions that 75%, 83%, and as high as 87½% MORTGAGES are given. Their projected confidence in real-estate is further manifested by their low monthly repayment requirements allowing 15, 20, and 25 years to repay.

We in Victoria Mortgage Corporation agree. Property values have increased steadily for 30 years, and will continue to do so for another 30 years, especially in this PARADISE called BRITISH COLUMBIA, where people are coming from all over the world.

We, therefore, at times make higher percentage loans on the type of security WE PREFER. However, current mortgage investments average 35% of appraised security.

We feel fairly confident about it. Our investors seem to feel the same way.

5-Year Debentures pay 7½% — One year, 7%.

There is no equisition cost.

BUSINESS VIEWS

Ivory Tower Era Ends

By JIM HUME
Times Business Editor

Hume

East is east and west is west and the twain, contrary to Rudyard Kipling's earlier stand, are starting to meet. In Canada, at least.

Today in Vancouver 11 directors of Du Pont of Canada Ltd., will sit in solemn conclave for a board of directors' meeting normally held in Montreal. The official release announcing the directors defection to the west says that while out here the gentlemen will take a look at developments in the west and generally view this booming section of Canada.

In recent years several companies based in the east have held similar meetings in western cities which means that at long last British Columbia is being recognized in those Montreal and Toronto ivory towers.

Members of the Du Pont board savoring west coast sunshine are: Herbert H. Lank, chairman; Robert G. Beck, president and chief executive officer; Frank S. Capon, vice-president; Joseph M. Breen, W. Samuel Carpenter, Irenee du Pont, Jr., Robert L. Hershey, John K. Jenney, Hugh H. Lawson, R. Russell Pippin and Lester S. Sinness, all directors.

It had been hoped that the group would have time to slip over to the Island for a sample of gracious living before heading back east. But delayed departures and business pressures make it impossible this time around.

NET EARNINGS

Net earnings for Imperial Oil Ltd., for the first nine months of 1965 were $61,300,000, an increase of 6.8 per cent over last year's earnings for the same period.

W. O. Twaits, president of the company, noted that while net earnings were up, so were capital and exploration expenditures.

At $81,723,000 they were up 26.3 per cent from the 1964 figure of $64,730,000.

Earnings per share were $1.93 compared with $1.81 for the first nine months of 1964.

Sales of all products rose 7 per cent to 349,000 barrels per day and refinery runs were up by 6 per cent to 327,000 per day.

The Canadian Chamber of Commerce news letter reminds us that while the Gross National Product of Canada will probably hit the 50 billion mark this year for the first time, rising costs are making it tougher to get by.

Total personal income dropped 1 per cent in the second quarter of the year while prices rose 1 per cent.

Thus, notes the letter quietly, the price scales are tipped on the side of inflation.

The comment adds the Chamber's voice to the growing chorus that while everything looks rosy inflation could be waiting just around the corner.

Last week Jean Costiguy, president of the Investment Dealers Association, said inflation was a real threat though he felt the Bank of Canada was keeping a close eye on the situation and enough strength to prevent a run-away economy.

Let's hope so. Inflation is one of the modern economic ills we can well do without.

YULE ORANGE COMBINE ALLEGED

VANCOUVER (CP)—One man and 10 companies were charged Friday following a combines investigation covering the sale of Mandarin oranges in western Canada during the last 18 years.

J. Arthur MacLennan, chief prosecutor in the case, said the investigation, under the Combines Act, was begun in 1963 and covered the period from Jan. 1, 1947, to Jan. 1, 1965.

Charged with conspiring to prevent or lessen free competition were:

Leslie F. Burrows, secretary-treasurer of the Canadian Fruit Wholesalers' Association, Ottawa;

Birks-Crawford, Limited; Kelly Douglas Company, Limited; W. H. Malkin Limited; Slade and Stewart Limited; David McNairn and Company, Limited, and Chess Brothers Limited, all of Vancouver;

Consolidated Fruit Company, Limited, Calgary; and Dominion Fruit Limited, Macdonald's Consolidated Limited and Canada Safeway Limited, all with head offices in Winnipeg.

Mr. MacLennan said 40 other business firms, located throughout the four western provinces and in Japan, were named in an information as co-conspirators but were not charged.

The charge alleges that Burrows and the 10 companies conspired, combined, agreed and arranged together and with others to prevent or lessen competition in the production, purchase, barter, sale, transportation or supply of Mandarin oranges.

Dining Car Men Angry

OTTAWA (CP) — While the CPR makes plans to abandon one of its two transcontinental passenger trains, employees on the line's other cross-Canada train are encountering inhuman working conditions, a union official said.

G. R. Brown, general chairman, Dining Car Service Employees, Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen, told a board of transport commissioners hearing of numerous complaints from dining car stewards on the CPR's Canadian.

The hearing is on the CPR's decision to abandon its other transcontinental train, the Dominion, because of financial losses and the need to use its diesels to move wheat.

Mr. Brown said the CPR took dining cars off the Dominion Sept. 7—a seasonal practice—and since that time, the Canadian's dining cars have been overloaded.

"Our men have been working from seven in the morning to nearly midnight and feeding up to 200 people."

SOME HIGHLIGHTS OF OUR NATIONAL "POLICIES FOR PEOPLE"

NATIONAL UNITY

The Progressive Conservative Party is opposed to the present dismantling of Canada piece-by-piece. Our national survival depends on maintainig the principle of unity in equality which is the basis of Confederation — equality of opportunity, equality of citizenship, equality of responsibility between our two founding races. In the interest of National unity a Progressive Conservative Government will convene a national conference for the purpose of amending our Constitution as may be necessary, and establishing it as a Canadian Statute.

AID TO HIGHER EDUCATION

At present, less than 20% of qualified students are able to attend our Canadian Universities. (In the U.S. the figure is 43%). A Progressive Conservative Government will inaugurate a comprehensive program of assistance to higher education through a newly organized Department of Youth Affairs.

WE WILL: (1) increase the existing Federal per capita grant to Universities from $2 to $5.
(2) increase existing grants to the National Research and Medical Research Councils and to the Canada Council.
(3) implement the Hall Commission recommendations calling for establishment of a capital fund for development of new teaching and research facilities in medicine, dentistry and nursing.
(4) extend to Canadian universities and colleges the existing Federal-Provincial capital cost sharing formula whereby Ottawa contributes 75% of vocational and training school capital costs.
(5) give immediate consideration to meeting the problem of spiralling tuition fees.

URBAN DEVELOPMENT AND CONSUMER LOANS

A Progressive Conservative Government will undertake to provide better housing for young urban families, better opportunities for the small businessman to grow and wider scope for useful community living for the retired and elderly among our citizens.

WE WILL: (1) accelerate urban renewal in cooperation with other levels of government.
(2) provide for NHA mortgages on older homes as well as new, and for writing up of partly-paid NHA mortgages to assist in the sale of such older houses.
(3) substantially reduce current high interest rates through a Consumers' Loans Act designed to provide urban dwellers with low cost credit for appliances and other essential purchases similar to the existing Farm Loans Act.

TAX INCENTIVE AND SOCIAL JUSTICE

The Progressive Conservative Party contends that the present tax burden is oppressively high on most sectors of our Canadian economy — so high in some areas as to dull incentive. We believe that intelligent tax reductions will stimulate business, increase production and provide larger total revenues.

WE WILL: (1) allow as a deductible expense for income tax purposes all municipal property taxes paid on owner-occupied homes up to $500 a year.
(2) eliminate the inflationary 11% manufacturers' sales tax on building materials and production machinery.
(3) reduce present levels of corporate and personal income tax.
(4) increase the Old Age Pension to $100 a month.
(5) provide Federal aid toward the monthly cost of maintaining chronically ill relatives in private hospitals.

SOME HIGHLIGHTS OF OUR PACIFIC "POLICY FOR PROGRESS"

PACIFIC TRADE AND INDUSTRIAL DEVELOPMENT

The Progressive Conservative Party recognizes the great opportunities that challenge Canadians in the Pacific world where we are potentially an important regional power. If we accept the challenge we can play a constructive and valuable role both in trade and in the promotion of greater understanding and harmony throughout this whole vast area stretching from South America to New Zealand, Australia, China, Japan and the emerging nations of Southeast Asia. A Progressive Conservative Government will seek to expand trade and cultural communication with all these countries.

WE WILL: (1) construct a Pacific Trade and Cultural Center in Vacouver to house all aspects of trade promotion activity, government, industry and special agencies concerned with development in this field. The structure would serve as a focal point for continuous exhibits, displays, forums and seminars.
(2) conduct a Pacific-wide marketing program for western Canadian products and promote the establishment of new heavy industry in this area, including auto assembly plants to serve the Western North America market.
(3) extend the benefits of Export Credit Insurance legislation to small B.C. industries.
(4) provide additional support to the Institute of Pacific Studies at University of British Columbia.

MASTER PLAN FOR PORT DEVELOPMENT

Hand in hand with the stimulation of export trade goes the necessity for a massive program of modernization and expansion of West Coast port facilities. Immediately upon election, a Progressive Conservative Government will assess the 10 year overall requirements of BC's vital ports on the Island, the mainland coast and the Fraser River.

WE WILL: (1) undertake construction and reconstruction of harbour projects wherever studies indicate an urgent need.
(2) increase harbour budgets to facilitate hydrostatic channel surveys and make provision for improved rail traffic and approach facilities.
(3) permit accelerated write-offs to companies prepared to build private docking and handling facilities.
(4) restore shipbuilding subsidies to encourage marine construction and allocate a greater share of government contracts to west coast shipyards.
(5) build more dyking and bank protection on the Fraser and other navigable rivers and channels.

COMMUNICATIONS AND RESOURCE DEVELOPMENT

In a mountainous region such as British Columbia good communications are of prime importance to any program of resource development. Recognizing this, the Progressive Conservative Party set high priority on cooperative efforts to bridge the natural barriers that still impede our economic progress and restrict our full enjoyment of this richly endowed part of Canada. Election of a Progressive Conservative Government will bring swift action on many provincial needs long postponed or conveniently forgotten.

WE WILL: (1) reactive the bold highways policy of the previous Conservative Government and build a second Trans-Canada Highway.
(2) restore the 'Roads to Resources' program including rapid completion of the Stewart-Cassiar road. Concurrently we will initiate talks with the United States regarding paving of the Alaska Highway and the acquisition of access routes to the Pacific through the Alaska Panhandle.
(3) grant federal subsidies during construction to necessary rail extensions linking resource areas with population centers.
(4) negotiate with the Government of British Columbia for the establishment of new National Parks on the Lower Mainland, Vancouver Island and in the North Central area of the province.
(5) participate in a joint program to eliminate air and water pollution.
(6) In cooperation with the B.C. Government, accelerate the development of the ARDA programme to bring under irrigation and cultivation the lands of the interior.

We Progressive Conservatives regard each of the above policy pledges as desirable of fulfillment at the earliest possible date. Many, long overdue, must be classed as essential. There is, however, one policy of this party that carries an urgency beyond the merely desirable - - or even the essential. It is the immediate restoration of integrity to the public life of Canada. This step is imperative. It is the cornerstone on which all else depends. We ask your help to enforce it.

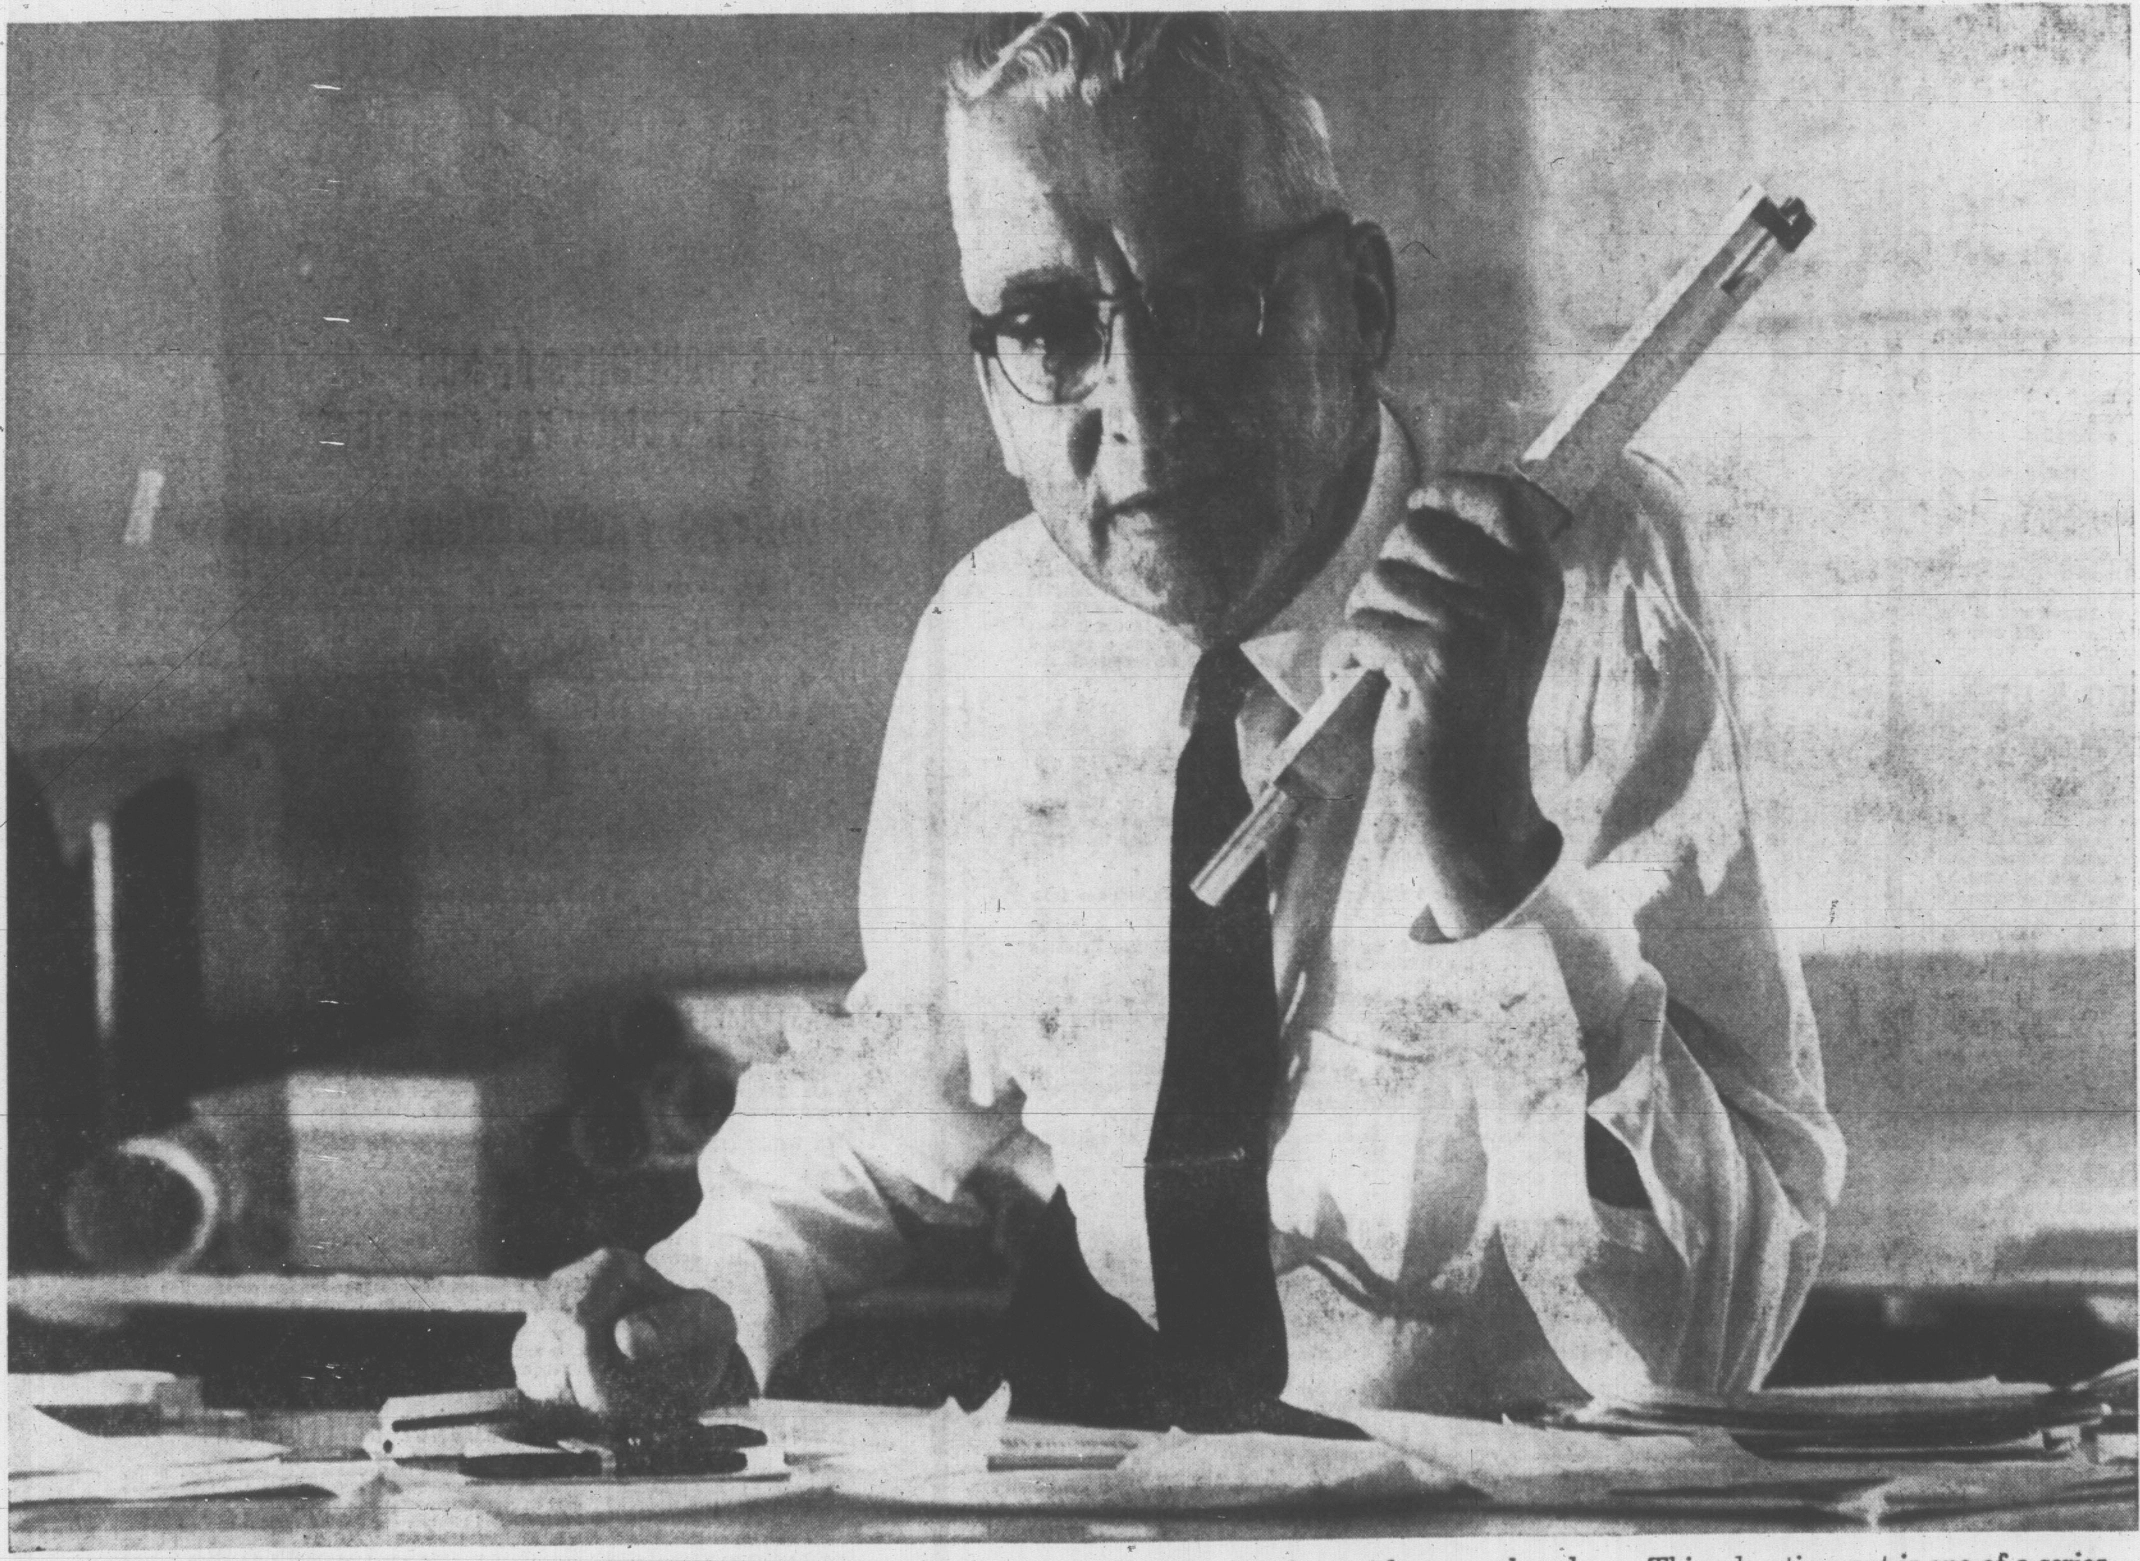
The Canada Pension Plan and its benefits

Here is what the Canada Pension Plan will do for people like Clark Kilgore, a 60-year-old professional engineer who earns $11,000 a year.



Clark will probably retire sometime during the next ten years. This ten years is the transitional period for the Canada Pension Plan and during it, only proportionate retirement pensions are payable. Thus, if Clark works until age 65 and then claims a retirement pension, he will receive $52.08 a month. If he works until age 67 he will receive $72.92 a month. Should he work until age 70 he will get the full retirement pension of $104.17 a month.

If Clark retires before he is 65 he will be entitled to a proportionate pension which will become payable when he reaches that age. Also at age 65, whether he is working or not, he will receive the Old Age Security pension of $75 a month.

While retirement pensions will be paid on a reduced basis before 1976, survivor's benefits will be paid in full beginning in 1968. Thus, if Clark Kilgore dies anytime after 1967, his wife will receive a widow's pension of $64.06 a month if she is under 65 but over 45. If she is 65 or over, her widow's pension will be $62.50 a month and she will also receive the $75 a month Old Age Security pension. At the time of her husband's death, Mrs. Kilgore will also be entitled to a lump sum payment of $500.

All benefits under the Plan will maintain their value. The actual benefits payable will probably be higher than those given here since benefits will be adjusted to meet changes in living costs.

Furthermore, it must be remembered that all Canada Pension Plan pensions and benefits are additional to any to which you may be entitled through your employment or personal planning.

What will the Plan cost you?

If you, like Clark, earn $11,000 a year, you will only pay 1.8% of $4,400, the maximum amount on which contributions are payable. If your earnings are spread evenly over the year you will contribute $15.60 a month until your contributions for the year total $79.20. Your employer will pay the same amount.

This advertisement is one of a series which relates some of the important benefits of the Canada Pension Plan to individual circumstances.

Issued by authority of the Minister of National Health and Welfare, Canada,
The Honourable Judy LaMarsh.

'Sports in Action' To Open Season With Racing Classic

NBC Sports in Action zooms back, after a brief vacation, with color coverage of the Bridgehampton "500" racing classic for modified sports cars Saturday at 5:30 p.m. on Channel 5.

Some of the top sports car drivers in the world will be seen competing for cash and glory on the track at Bridgehampton, Long Island, N.Y. Among them are Hal Sharp, co-developer of the fiery Chaparral; Walter Hansgen, known as "King of the Bridge" because, going into this race, he had never lost a modified sports car competition at Bridgehampton; Mario Andretti, "Rookie of the Year" at Indianapolis and United States Auto Club oval track champion, and Pedro Rodriguez of Mexico, high on the list of champions on the track.

Characteristically, "NBC Sports in Action" not only covers the race, but focuses its cameras on behind-the-scenes activities to provide special insights to the sports. "SIA" reporter John Travieso talks with some of the leading drivers and, as a special feature, discusses the Chaparral, which has dominated modified sports car racing in the United States for the last two years.

One of the ingredients of the Chaparral's success is its automatic transmission, a feature that makes it unique in its class. Although the transmission has been kept a strict secret by its developers, Sharp reveals some hitherto unpublished facts about it. And when the conversation is ended, he takes his Chaparral out on the circuit and indicates where and how the automatic transmission is an advantage.

'Face the Nation

Juan D. Bosch, former president of the Dominican Republic, will be the guest on "Face the Nation" Sunday at 11:30 a.m. on Channel 7.

The interview was recorded in Santo Domingo several days ago and the film was flown to Washington, D.C., for presentation on the network. Bosch returned to Santo Domingo recently after two years of exile in Puerto Rico.

CBS news correspondent Robert Schakne and two other newsmen question Bosch.

The interview will mark the third time that Bosch has appeared on Face the Nation. He was interviewed in Puerto Rico shortly after his overthrow and again for a special broadcast last May 2. Bosch has been critical of United States intervention in the Dominican uprising.

Gemini 6 Minus 1

The Frank McGee Report will present a preview of the Gemini 6 space flight one day in advance of its scheduled launching, on Sunday at 6 p.m on Channel 5.

Frank McGee and NBC News correspondents assigned to cover the space-flight will report on last minute preparations at Cape Kennedy and will describe the intricate rendezvous and docking manoeuvres scheduled during the two-day flight. McGee will join Chet Huntley and David Brinkley Monday in anchoring NBC News' continuous color coverage of the actual flight.

Bell Phone Hour

Making his first appearance on a "Bell Telephone Hour," Victor Borge will play host to Benny Goodman, Joan Sutherland, Patti Page, Allegra Kent and Jacques D'Amboise Sunday, at 6:30 p.m. on Channel 5.

Borge will bring his unique style of comedy-and-music to the show. Miss Sutherland, absent from the U.S. this season, taped her appearance last spring before returning to Europe. She will be heard in the double aria from the end of Act One of Verdi's "La Traviata," starting with "Ah, Fors e Lui" and continuing with "Sempre Libera."

Benny Goodman, backed by his own jazz musicians, will offer his distinctive brand of jazz to the program. In the 1930s the "Benny Goodman Sound" was a revolutionary development in popular jazz. Jacques D'Amboisee and Allegra Kent will dance the "pas de deux" from "Sylvia" by George Balanchine, to the music of Leo Delibes.

Patti Page continues year after year to be one of the top record sellers in the nation. She recently returned from a concert tour of the Far East. She will sing some of he old favorites as well as some new tunes.

LITTLE ORPHAN Eileen Baral, shocked into total silence after witnessing the death of her parents, finds a friend in Ben Cartwright on Bonanza's Found Child, Sunday at 9 p.m. on Channels 2, 5 and 6.

BRIEFED by William Hopper (right) on confidential information about a client, Perry Mason endeavors to clear his man out of inextricable confusion, in The Case of the Hasty Honeymooner, Sunday at 6 p.m. on Channel 2 (9 p.m., Channel 7).

Hockey Night

Hockey Night in Canada returns for its 14th season, on Channels 2 and 6, Saturday, at 5:30 p.m. The Detroit Red Wings will meet the Montreal Canadiens.

During the season Toronto home games from Maple Leaf Gardens will be described by Bill Hewitt with Ward Cornell, Ed Fitkin and Jack Dennett handling the intermission show. From the Montreal Forum, Danny Gallivan calls the Canadiens' games while Frank Selke, Jr., looks after the between-period interviews.

The majority of Canadian viewers will see Toronto and Montreal home games on an alternating basis.

Ed Sullivan Show

A hit of the New York World's Fair during the 1965 season has been a fiery young flamenco dancer named Manuela Vargas. She and her troupe of 16 dancers, the Manuela Vargas Ballet, make their American television debut on "The Ed Sullivan Show" Sunday at 8 p.m. on Channels 2, 6, 7, and 12.

Miss Vargas is a 23-year-old Andalusian gypsy from Seville. Her performance at the Spanish Pavilion, as described by one critic (Time magazine): "Tops the fair's entertainment bill . . . What she doesn't convey with her Goya-esque good looks, arching back and rippling feet, she says with her long, serpentine arms and spidery hands . . . She is the real thing."

Miss Vargas made her professional debut only two years ago at the Festival of Nations in Paris, where she won the award as Dancer of the Year. She studied the ancient art of flamenco under one of Spain's foremost teachers, Enrico el Cojo, who confesses that he had little to teach her; without any lessons at all, she instinctively knew more than most dancers twice her age. Now, after training, she is regarded as one of the most accomplished artists in her field and the most idolized flamenco dancer in Spain.

If she were not a dancer, what would she like to be?

A bullfighter, she says.

At her ranch outside Seville, she keeps baby bulls and fights them in her spare time.

Also appearing on the show will be actress Helen Hayes.

She will re-enact a scene from the play "Harriet," in which she was starred on Broadway.

Joining Miss Hayes on the broadcast are the musical aggregation of Herman's Hermits, Duke Ellington and his orchestra, comedian Myron Cohen, the Ginny Tiu and Company song-and dance troupe and comedian Richard Pryor.

Water Diversion

KOMO-TV's "Viewpoint" examines the issue of water diversion, Saturday at 6:30 p.m. over Channel 4.

Channel 4's Art McDonald will have as his guests Harold T. Nelson, regional director of the United States Reclamation Bureau, Boise, Idaho, and Philip F. Walsh, chairman of the Water and Power Committee of the Los Angeles Chamber of Commerce. Walsh is also president of the Southern California Water Company.

These two gentlemen both attended a symposium in Seattle earlier this month on the question of water diversion. Basically, the problem is that soon the southwestern United States will begin to feel a great strain on its too-small water supply, and the northwestern part of the country has an abundance of water. It is hoped by many that some agreement can be reached between the two sections to send the northwest's water to the southwest.

Walsh feels that the northwest has a virtually untapped storehouse of water. He cites that the Columbia River alone empties 6.9 billion gallons of water into the Pacific Ocean each year. Walsh also feels that although the problem of water shortage in the southwest is of minimal concern today and the real problem won't be felt for another quarter of a century, plans for a remedy must be made now.

Nelson, however, feels that water is the northwest's "ace in the hole" and that careful and lengthy study should be made before any agreement to share the supply is made. It is his contention that other arrangements can be made to satisfy the southwest's demand for power and water.

EVA GABOR

'Daahling . . . Vunce Ham Alvays Ham

By VERNON SCOTT

HOLLYWOOD — Lotusland—television—has become a livelier place with the arival of Eva Gabor to portray a farm wife (!) on the new Eddie Albert Show, a comedy titled Green Acres.

Albert is cast in the show, which is a sort of Beverly Hillbillies in reverse, as a wealthy New York lawyer who finally achieves his lifetime ambition by moving from the city to a broken-down farm that is short on electricity but long on plumbing problems — among other harassments.

★ ★ ★

Miss Gabor, seen as Albert's clothes-conscious, society-oriented wife, is totally incapable of coming to grips with such bucolic companions as the common cow.

We caught up with Eva—who is not known as the shy sister of the gabby Gabor clan—in her lavishly appointed dressing room at General Service Studios. Miss Gabor, dressed in a colorful muu muu, with diamond-studded accompaniment—earrings, bracelets and rings—was playing nursemaid to her Yorkshire terrier, a minor menace named Miss Magoo, while awaiting a camera call.

★ ★ ★

Unhappily for posterity, no tape recorder was available to transcribe her garrulous responses to a few innocent questions posed by your completely cowed correspondent ("Ask me vun question, dahling, and you get a mouseful").

Picking up the conversational shrapnel as it sprayed over an adjoining soundstage, the exchange ran something like this, give or take a few thousand words from Miss Gabor—

Q. What kind of woman do you play in your new series?

A. I am playing a vuman I don't like—she is spoilt. Sleeps till one o'clock. You know the way zee public thinks I am.

★ ★ ★

Q. How do you like working on a TV series?

A. To get up at 5:30 in the morning, I must be cray-zee. I was ready to vork at zix-zirty and I haff had one zecond in front of the camera. I am hysterical.

Q. What is your relationship with your husband in the series?

A. Vee are very much in luff, and very sexy about it. I don't know how that goes on American television.

Q. Why did you decide to take on a series?

A. Silly boy; vunce an actress, alvays an actress. Besides vee have a very huge story. It smells of success.

★ ★ ★

Q. Will you be going around the kitchen in apron and jeans?

A. Heffens no! Vot vould my public think? Ay-vah must alvays be fashionable. Just yesterday I go chasing a chicken in this flimsy nightgown. I tell the hen, 'Three eggs—you know how to do it.' You know vot? That bird turns out to be the husband of a chicken.

Q. How many seasons do you think your show will run?

A. Just the other day I was asking Eddie, 'Vot you tink, vill vee luff each other five years from now?'

Q. May we quote you on that?

A. You are going to qvote me anyway, yiu dahling newspaper man, so viy should I complaint?

Fade out.

U.S. Policies to Be Aired

American Statesmen To Face Europeans In Early Bird Talks

Solicitor General of the United States, Thurgood Marshall, will join former president Dwight D. Eisenhower and United Nations Ambassador Arthur J. Goldberg on the premiere of Town Meeting of the World Tuesday at 10 p.m. on Channel 7.

The three will be linked by Early Bird satellite in a transoceanic "teach-in" with students from universities in Europe.

Marshall, the first Negro to hold the post of solicitor-general, was introduced to the Supreme Court Monday, Oct. 11. He had argued appeals before the court 40 times as a private lawyer. Marshall had served on the United States Court of Appeal in New York since 1962.

The broadcast will be videotaped earlier in the day on Oct. 26 with the co-operation of the British Broadcasting Corporation.

The European students are expected to ask former President Eisenhower and Ambassador Goldberg questions of the kind that Europeans consistently raise about America's foreign and domestic policies. The students will be seen from universities in England and France, as well as from an Iron Curtain country.

Correspondents on the broadcast, in addition to Charles Collingwood, will be CBS News' London correspondent Dan Rather, on location in England; CBS News' Paris correspondent Bernald Kalb, on location in France, and CBS News' Bonn-Berlin correspondent Daniel Schorr, on location behind the Iron Curtain.

JFK's Personal Life

The personal life of John F. Kennedy, from his childhood through the Presidency, will be detailed in an outstanding television special, "The Young Man From Boston," Thursday at 7:30 p.m. on Channel 5.

The never-before-seen film footage and photographs, secured from family and friends, are blended into a glowing tribute to the late President.

The hour-long special is narrated by Joseph Cotten, with original background music performed by the Kingston Trio and the Mormon Tabernacle Choir. Gordon MacRae is soloist and lead-voice with the choir.

Original folk lyrics were written by multi-Academy Award winner, Paul Francis Webster. The book for the program was written by another Academy Award winner, Stephen Longstreet, and the original music was composed by producer Allan Jay Friedman.

The program will show the late President as his family and friends knew him best—as a bright, happy child, an aggressive young football player, an inconspicuous Harvard freshman, an enthusiastic sailor . . . and, above all, a family man.

Mrs. Jacqueline Kennedy cooperated in the preparation of the special.

She provided many valuable insights and personal photographs and approved the final script.

Personal interviews with J. F. Kennedy, his personal secretary Evelyn Lincoln, press secretary Pierre Salinger, under-secretary of the Navy Paul Fay, Supreme Court Justice Byron White, Arthur Schlesinger Jr., classmates from prep school and college, and friends from his years in the navy, provide a valuable insight into the man who became the youngest President in this nation's history.

The production of "The Young Man From Boston" represents the culmination of eight months' preparation and thousands of man hours of research.

Miss Teen America

Some 3,000 bright and attractive girls between the ages of 13 and 17 have vied for Miss Teenage "hometown" titles in 55 major cities during the past two weeks.

Their goal was the national competition at Dallas, Texas, where the young finalists will compete for the Miss Teenage America 1966 crown, which includes a $10,000 four-year college scholarship to the school of the winner's choice.

The final selection and the coronation of the new queen on the "Miss Teenage America Pageant," will be broadcast Friday at 10 p.m. on Channels 7 and 12 from the Dallas Auditorium Theatre. Bud Collyer will be master of ceremonies, with Allen Ludden and Marilyn Van Derbur as hosts.

There will be 60 local finalists, including five contenders at large who, though not residing in official franchise cities, will represent major geographic areas.

Singer Frank Sinatra Jr. will be a special guest on the program.

Entertainment on the broadcast also will include the singing cadets of Texas A & M University; a specialty number by Carolyn Mignini, featuring four former Miss Teenage America titleholders, and performances and impromptu dramatizations by the seven Miss Teenage America finalists.

Abigail (Dear Abby). Van Buren, nationally syndicated columnist and author, Dick Clark, long-time television favorite of teen-agers, and Mickey Mantle, baseball star of the New York Yankees, will serve on a five-member selection committee.

Holland Visit

George Carlson, producer-host of KOMO-TV's "Northwest Traveler" series, presents a film entitled "Holland," Wednesday at 7 p.m., in color over Channel 4.

Henry Portin, Seattle writer and motion picture photographer, filmed this journey of a group of Pacific Northwesterners to Amsterdam and Rotterdam.

While in Amsterdam, the tourists visited the Anne Frank House; the Beehive, Amsterdam's largest department store; the Rijks Museum, in which are found original paintings of Rembrandt and Van Ruesdael; Westerkerk, a picturesque church built in the early 1600's. They rode some of the city's 50 canals and under many of its 500 bridges, dined at the great tourist cafe the "Five Flies," and exchanged gifts with Amsterdam's mayor burgermeister.

GEMINI 6 RECOVERY TO BE TELECAST LIVE

WASHINGTON (AP)—The first live transmission on television of the recovery of a manned space capsule is scheduled for Wednesday.

Live coverage of the Gemini VI recovery will be transmitted from the U.S. aircraft carrier Wasp in the Atlantic Ocean.

Three television networks will beam their TV signals from the Wasp to the Early-Bird Satellite which will relay them to the satellite ground station in Andover, Me., for transmission to the networks.

The networks plan to go on the air at 7 a.m. Monday, pre-empting regular programming, to colorcast the pre-launch preparations and lift-off of the Atlas-Agena Rocket and the manned Gemini space capsule of the Gemini VI rendezvous mission.

PATIENCE REWARDED

Men will tell of the long, dry spell
That hit us in '65,
Of whole towns cursed by a raging thirst
And the struggle to stay alive.
They tell of the drought as the beer ran out
And the spectre of empty shelves,
As the men grew grey and wasted away
To ghosts of their former selves.
And they dreamed of sips that had passed their lips
In a sleep that was blessed by beers,
But the dream was gone in the cruel, dry dawn
Leaving only the taste of tears.
And for many long weeks those tear-stained cheeks
Were worn like a badge of pain,
Then a whisper . . . a shout . . . and a cry rang out:
"Lucky Lager's back again!!!"
You could hear them cheer for that big, bold beer
From Comox to Williams Lake,
And all through the day you could hear men say:
"Give yourself a Lucky break!"
So when men grow old and tall tales are told
They'll say of "The Great Thirst Saga"
That the drought they faced was worth the taste
Of that first glass of Lucky Lager!

Grit Urges Study Of Island Poverty

Poverty in Saanich, the golden nematode and the need for strong, majority government were the major issues debated over coffee Friday night by Esquimalt-Saanich Liberal candidate James Gorst.

"People tend to think about the Maritimes or Quebec when they hear about the war on poverty," the 43-year-old business man said. "They forget that poverty can exist in our backyard."

During the question period following Mr. Gorst's campaign speech to 40 persons in Lutheran Church of the Cross, Mrs. A. J. Rhodes said she had encountered "widespread and appalling" poverty in Saanich while going house to house as a census taker.

Mr. Gorst said a study should be made of the extent of Saanich's poverty problem and he advocated an increase in the tempo of job re-training.

Most families are able to look after themselves if the breadwinner is able to find full-time employment, he said. Under the Liberal government unemployment had fallen to its lowest level in eight years, Mr. Gorst said.

He assured a 17-year-old girl that the Liberals, if re-elected, would speedily reduce the voting age to 18 for federal elections. He added that municipalities should consider matching the provincial age of 19 because "increasing numbers of 19 and 20-year-olds are buying homes and paying municipal taxes" and should vote in civic elections.

Before the question and answer session, he defended the Liberal government record in a short, formal address. He called for a strong Liberal majority to implement medicare, increase aid to universities and make grants to medical centres.

Mr. Gorst aimed a few barbs at his Conservative opponent, George Chatterton, characterizing him as an agriculturalist who spread the golden nematode infestation from farm to farm during an inspection tour.

"A man in his field should know better," Mr. Gorst said. "It's like a doctor spreading an epidemic."

He charged that the tour was made to get newspaper headlines rather than to help the farmers. He noted that Agriculture Minister Harry Hays has announced federal assistance for farmers whose crops have been affected by the infestation.

Mr. Gorst said that Conservative leader John Diefenbaker was a man living in the past who would hang on to leadership as long as possible.

"Mr. Diefenbaker has no intention of resigning. Surely he has demonstrated to us by now that he will hang on come what may."

Minimum Wage Hike

WINNIPEG (CP)—Manitoba's minimum wage will be increased to $1 an hour in three stages over the next 12 months and will be equalized between rural and urban areas, Premier Roblin said Friday.

STUNNING SETBACK FOR ALABAMA GOV.

MONTGOMERY, Ala. (AP)—The Alabama State Senate handed Governor George Wallace a stinging political defeat Friday when it refused to pass an amendment that would allow the governor and seven other state officers to succeed themselves.

The state constitution prohibits top Alabama state officials from succeeding themselves. Wallace is serving his first four-year term as governor. He was elected in 1962.

CALGARY SPORTS EDITOR GETS NO TV PAY . . . . . . AFTER CRITICIZING FOOTBALL OFFICIALS

'If I'd Known About Fine, I'd Have Told Whole Truth'

CALGARY (CP)—A Calgary sports editor has discovered that the rule is "speak no evil" when it comes to broadcast comments on Canadian Football League officials.

Gorde Hunter, sports editor of the Calgary Herald, said Friday that payment was withheld for a play-by-play broadcast he did with Eric Bishop of radio station CKXL Calgary because they criticized the officiating.

The game in question was played in Montreal Oct. 11 between Calgary Stampeders and Montreal Alouettes. The radio broadcast was originated in Montreal by CKXL and carried by several stations across the country.

"We were fined by the station because the contract the station has with the league expressly prohibits criticizing officials on their calls during the game, before and after," Hunter said in an interview.

Hunter said he remarked during the broadcast that there were calls that he couldn't understand, that officiating was spoiling the quality of play and Bishop's comments were on the same lines.

"If I'd known a fine would be involved, I'd have told the whole truth—that the officiating was poor, pathetic, incompetent and sloppy;" Hunter said in a column Thursday.

In Vancouver, Allan McEachren, chairman of the Western Football Conference radio and television committee, said he initiated criticism of Hunter's statements.

Radio rights for WFC games were sold to station CKNW of New Westminster, B.C., for subletting to other stations. This was on the understanding that the quality of the broadcasts would be discussed by the league and the station with the purpose of increasing the objectivity.

"The contract with CKNW specifically prohibits the broadcasting of criticism aimed at officials," he said.

He had discussed the Hunter broadcast with manager Bill Hughes of CKNW during a discussion of several other broadcasts. The matter was left at that and it was then "strictly an internal matter."

The league has no power to fine broadcasters or ask stations to fine commentators, McEachren said. However, commissioner Sydney Halter has the power to prevent a man from doing broadcasts.

In Winnipeg, Halter said the complaint was made by the WFC and he knew nothing about it until advised by the conference. He was not familiar with the terms of the WFC's broadcast contracts.

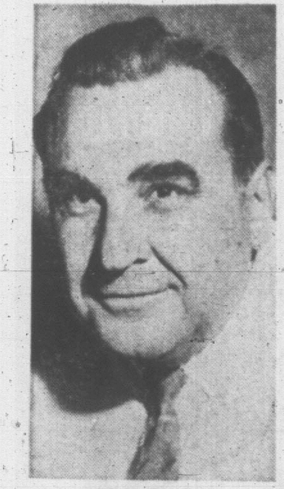
LOOKS AT SPORTS

With Sandown-By-The-Sea out of the way, I am now in a position to reopen the forecasting bureau revered as H. Malone's Casual Choices.

This may come as a mild shock to some readers who felt my choices at Sandown were casual enough. At hand are letters, tear-stained, mostly, seeking an explanation of why specific horses didn't run with the velocity it was suggested they had.



RUDY PILOUS
. . . light reader

These and other questions will be answered in due course or after my wounds heal, whichever occurs first.

H. Malone's Casual Choices returns, naturally, in response to a mandate.

The mandate was a long time coming; it arrived only today in the form of a letter from a third cousin of mine named Shifty Gears, who works in Squamish, in the weaving game.

"Dear Cousin," wrote this prominent weaver.

"Why aren't you predicting this year? Is it because the B.C. Lions are so unpredictable? C'mon, your readers, are ready for the guffaws your selections produce.

"Uncle George says he gets more instant relief from your stuff than he does from Claxton's Little Pills. Meanwhile, can you spare $20 until 1968? Things are slow in the weaving business. As you know I sling beer, but I haven't slung enough since August to make a pink-eyed peewee weave."

I quote the remarks of this talented artisan to show that I am meeting a popular genuine demand, and not just forecasting to hear myself forecast.

As to the reasons for the delay, Shifty Gears is right. The Lions have been as drearily predictable as a politician's platform. Where's the kick in calling Hamilton over B.C., or Ottawa over B.C.? Everybody's doing it, including the six-year-olds who make book when General Gregory isn't looking.

There are other problems. Last year it wasn't necessary to attend the body-and-mind-building sessions at Memorial Arena to find out about Victoria Maple Leafs.

Each afternoon at Sandown you could bet your shirt that Rudolph Pilous, the genial patriarch, would be engaged in light reading. Mr. Pilous was an avid reader, Chaucer, The Racing Form, stuff like that.

This year, no Pilous and no information. The new prime minister of the Leafs, Francis Mario, obviously prefers other forms of livestock.

Somethin' Fell Into Libby's Juice

Without any form to rely on, it was necessary to turn to the Hockey News to get the dope. In the Oct. 16 edition, a Mr. William Libby, writing out of Los Angeles, advised that the Leafs had lost "forwards Danny Belisle and Bill Shvetz.

This will no doubt come as a surprise to Mr. Shvetz. He is very forward when it comes to belting people across the Adam's apple, but usually he plays defence. If he is AWOL from the 1965-66 version of the Maple Leafs, the Missing Persons bureau hasn't heard of it. The last time anybody looked Shvetz was still socking souls right here.

Mr. Libby offered other priceless pearls of information. Among "players returning" he listed Roland Wilcox, forward, and Bob Taylor, defenceman.

Reliable sources insist that Wilcox is continuing his apprenticeship in Tulsa. Taylor, if one can believe the newspapers, is a flanker with Calgary Stampeders.

These are minor discrepancies, Mr. Libby, but when you refer to Bobby Taylor as a defenceman you must be pulling somebody's leg. Bobby played defence like it was never played before. If you don't think so just ask Alphonse Miller, the goalkeeper, or M. Pilous.

Time now for Casual Choices to wander off into the quicksand, complete with educational tips. Best advice: keep cool under pressure and get in line early at McGugan's Ye Olde Lubrication Shoppes.

Tonight

Victoria over Portland. (Until Friday, the Buckaroos were the only unbeaten team in the Western Hockey League, and doesn't that get you right up there in the ventricles?

Chinooks over YMCA. (There is some betting in bars, saloons and other swamps of amateur commerce that the Chinooks may not lose a game this season).

Sunday

B.C. Lions over Saskatchewan Roughriders. (Dennis the Menace returns, and his blithe spirit may see the Lions emerge triumphant, tra la).

Ottawa over Toronto. (A hippopotamus may be 13 feet long and weigh 2½ tons, but it's not mandatory).

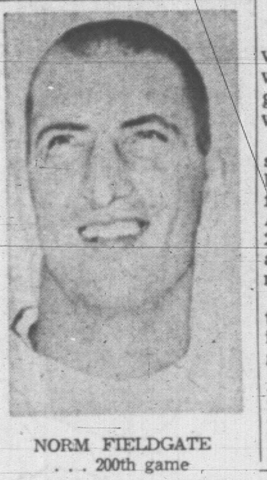
ASSESSING THE DAMAGE

Getting peek under Joey Giardello's dark glasses, world middleweight champion Dick Tiger assesses the damage he did to Joey's complexion the previous night. They were seated together at dinner in New York Friday night. Giardello lost title to Tiger Thursday and said later he was retiring from ring.

Disgruntled Fight Fan Gets His Money Back

(Times News Services)

A man who paid $10 for a closed-circuit television viewing of last May's Cassius Clay-Sonny Liston heavyweight title fight and then charged the fight was "the greatest farce ever perpetrated on the American public," was given his money back Friday.



NORM FIELDGATE
. . . 200th game

Ronald Lewis, a New York stockbroker who lives in Elberon, N.J., bought a ticket from the Mayfair Theatre in Asbury Park to see the May 25 fight. It lasted one minute as Clay knocked out Liston to retain the world championship.

Lewis filed a suit to recover the price of his ticket, charging the match was "not a genuine prize fight."

Lewis' lawyer, David Friedland, said he received a letter Friday from lawyers for the theatre enclosing a cheque for $10.

PLANS have been made to finish off Shea Stadium in New York with a $9,000,000 glass dome that will top Houston's Astrodome because it will be glare-proof and bigger.

Announcement of the plans for turning Shea into an all-weather stadium, made today by city sports commissioner Ben Finney, also called for 14,000 additional seats. Shea now has 55,000 permanent seats. The seats presumably would be added in centre field, which currently has only a fence.

Finney said that with infield seating, Shea could hold as many as 90,000 people for such events as fights.

The dome would be 268 feet high and 745 feet in diameter. That would make it about 60 feet higher than the roof of the Astrodome, which has a diameter of more than 600 feet.

Finney said the glare problem that originally plagued the Astrodome — outfielders had trouble tracking fly balls — would be solved by the use of tempered glass.

Finney estimated the seats could be put in by the fall of 1966 and the dome between the end of the 1966 football season and the beginning of the 1967 baseball season.

SECOND straight clean round by Billy Steinkraus sparked U.S. to Nation's Cup over Canada in the international jumping competition at the Pennsylvania horse show.

Canada set the pace with two riders going clean and a third rider suffering 2½ time faults.

Mrs. Mary Chapot on Tomboy and Kathy Kusner, riding Untouchable, went clean first for the U.S. but so did Moffat Dunlap, 23, Toronto, and Jim Elder, 31, Aurora, Ont.

The second-place finish for the Canadians brought them within 16 points of second-place Mexico and a chance to overtake the Mexican team tonight in the finale.

THIS-IS-IT GAME

Can Roughies Add Leos To Slain-Giants List?

By The Canadian Press

Saskatchewan Roughriders, traditional giant killers in the Western Football Conference, can add another big one to their list this weekend.

Roughriders could put the British Columbia Lions, national champions in 1964, on the outside of the WFC playoffs looking in Sunday afternoon.

Sunday's Saskatchewan-B.C. game will be shown in the Victoria area to cablevision subscribers (channel 13), starting at 2 p.m. CKNW will carry a radio account of the game.

Lions could end all tabulations Sunday by simply beating the Roughriders.

"If that happens," says Regina coach Eagle Keys, "then the Lions will go all the way to the Grey Cup."

In another WFC game, the Edmonton Eskimos were at Winnipeg today.

Almost unnoticed in the excitement of the do-or-die showdown in Vancouver is the fact Lions' veteran Norm Fieldgate is setting a Canadian football record.

Fieldgate, 31, a 12-year man, will be playing his 200th game with the Lions, counting regular seasons, playoffs and Grey Cups.

A three-time western all-star and once all-Canada, Fieldgate is the last of the originals, the players who began with the Lions in their first WFC game in 1954.

Or—more likely—they could become the WFC's second casualty in the race for the playoffs.

Roughriders and Lions meet Sunday at Vancouver's Empire Stadium in the closest thing to a "this-is-it" game in Canada in 1965.

If Roughriders can beat the Lions by 13 points or more it will eliminate the defending Grey Cup kings.

A Regina victory would tie the teams' season series at a win, a loss and a tie apiece. If the Roughriders win by 13 or more it would mean they would have outscored Lions in games between the teams—the yardstick used to break ties.

Playhouse to Try Pugilistic Culture

McPherson Playhouse is scheduled to be exposed to a different kind of culture on November 1.

Scheduled for the theatre that night is a closed-circuit telecast of the World Boxing Association world championship heavyweight fight between Toronto's George Chuvalo and Ernie Terrell of Chicago.

The bout will be held at Maple Leaf Gardens in Toronto, and the telecast will be shown in 19 other Canadian cities, including Vancouver, Calgary and Edmonton.

Malitz Productions, Ltd., will handle the telecast. Don Dunphy, former Madison Square Garden boxing announcer, will described the bout and fullback Jimmy Brown of the Cleveland Browns football team is scheduled to provide between-rounds commentary.

Theatre officials said today the Victoria telecast would be promoted by Doug Isman of Vancouver. Seats will be scaled at $4, $5 and $6.

The fight will not be carried on radio.

'New' Canucks Give Leafs Shot at Lead

Vancouver Canucks, normally the "bad guys" of the Western Hockey League in the eyes of Victoria Maple Leafs, today look like knights on white chargers to the local shinny warriors.

Canucks, who made a habit out of beating the Leafs last season, extended a helping hand to the Leafs at Vancouver Forum Friday and gave the Victorians a chance to grab the league lead before the weekend is out.

Canucks turned into giant-killers by stopping the league-leading Portland Buckaroos 5-2 and thus giving Victoria a chance to grab a share of the top berth tonight at Memorial Arena.

Leafs tackle the Bucks at 8:30 and a victory would leave the men of coach Frank Mario deadlocked with coach Hal Laycoe's Bucks.

AGAIN SUNDAY

The clubs continue hostilities Sunday night at Portland and if the Leafs can manage a pair of wins, they would be sitting on top of the WHL heap.

San Francisco Seals, expected to battle it out with Portland and Victoria for first place this season, pulled into a tie with the Leafs by whipping the Totems 5-2 at Seattle Friday night.

Seals, however, are now idle until they move into Memorial Arena next Wednesday night.

In another game played Friday, Los Angeles Blades came out on the wrong end of the score in the first interlocking contest between WHL and American League clubs. Each WHL team will play 12 games against AHL clubs during the season.

Billy McNeill, Howie Hughes and veteran defenceman Ron Matthews were the men who did the most to snap Portland's victory streak at three games.

TWO FOR RUN

Canucks were never headed as they collected their first triumph of the season.

Matthews, 38, who had been expected to retire this season, got Vancouver away to a 1-0 lead in the opening period and made it 2-0 with his second goal early in the middle session.

Phil Maloney, another 38-year-old, gave Canucks a 3-0 lead before the period ended and McNeill and Hughes, who each also had two assists, scored for Vancouver in the third period.

Portland's goals were scored by Gerry Goyer and Len Ronson.

In Seattle, the star-studded Seals had little trouble tripping the Totems as the Waynes wrecked hopes of the home club.

BURNS SPARKLES

Wayne Connelly and Wayne Maxner each fired two goals for the Seals, who got their other tally from Ron Harris. Charley Burns collected three assists.

Jim Powers and Bill Dineen counted for Seattle.

At Baltimore, three goals in just over five minutes during the second period provided the cushion the Clippers needed to hold out against a late Los Angeles rally.

Dave Creighton scored for Clippers in the opening period, Ken Schinkel, Jean-Marie Cossette and Ray Cullen staged the second-period spring surge and Larry Regan completed the Baltimore scoring in the third.

Rookie Bill Orban gave Los Angeles a 1-1 first-period deadlock and Brian Smith and John Hendrickson wrapped up scoring for the Blades in the closing minutes.

Arch-Rivals Pick Off Soccer Playoff Spots

Ho hum. . .

Mount Douglas gave it a good try, but it will be Oak Bay and Victoria High Tyees in the Inter-High Senior Soccer League final. As usual.

The Tyees clinched another crack at their perennial rivals by scrambling to a 3-1 victory over Mount Doug at Royal Athletic Park Friday night.

Oak Bay, the defending B.C. champions, assured themselves of no worse than a tie for first by blanking Mount View 4-0 in an afternoon match.

The championship final will be played at Athletic Park next Friday.

Brian Howe scored two goals to pace Oak Bay, which completes its schedule with a Wednesday game against Claremont. Ike McKay and Kevin Costain added the other goals for the Bays.

Tyees, two points behind Oak Bay and three ahead of third-place Mount Douglas, got two goals from Bob Stevenson and a successful penalty shot from Palle Poulson to beat off the Doug challenge. Peter Duncan scored Mount Doug's goal, also on a penalty shot.

BOMB DISPOSAL EXPERTS . . . . . . TO CHECK SPECTATORS

Army Called in for Rome Soccer Game

ROME (UPI)—Rome authorities today mobilized police and the army for the year's most popular and dangerous event—the Roma-Napoli league soccer game.

At least 40,000 Neapolitans are expected in Rome for Sunday's game, an event during which tempers traditionally run high and crowds sometimes get out of control. Police took no chances and made arrangements for a force of 1,200 men to control the Olympic Stadium fans.

Army bomb disposal experts were joining the police to search spectators before they enter the stadium. Neapolitan fans have a habit of celebrating soccer victories with colorful but sometimes dangerous fireworks displays and the army's task is to see that nothing lethal gets into the stadium.

More police were controlling traffic in the area around the stadium and the highway patrol was being reinforced on the Naples-Rome "Superhighway of the Sun" to handle the expected mass migration of Neapolitan fans on overcrowded cars.

Police got a foretaste of what may be ahead for them when the last batch of tickets for the 90,000-seat stadium went on sale here Friday.

The tickets were sold out in a matter of minutes, for a record total gate of $173,120, not counting season tickets. Two policemen were injured while trying to control the crowd. More than 30 scalpers were arrested and 500 tickets seized.

Casper Going Great

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP)—Bill Casper continued to dominate the $100,000 Sahara invitational golf tournament Friday, firing his third straight sub-par round, a three-under-par 68, for a 54-hole total of 200.

The 34-year-old Casper, who opened the tournament with straight 66s, rallied on the last nine Friday when young Randy Glover began applying the pressure.

Casper birdied four of the last five holes after Glover, 23, drew within one stroke of the Californian after the 11th hole.

Glover finished with a 68 for 203 and presumably poses the biggest threat as the pros go into the final round today.

Pre-tournament favorite Jack Nicklaus not only failed to gain ground on Casper, but slipped back two more strokes from his second-round margin, shooting a 70 for 208.

Canadiens Picked To Finish on Top

By The Canadian Press

The Stanley Cup champion Montreal Canadiens are favored to finish first as the 1965-66 National Hockey League schedule gets under way tonight.

The Toronto Maple Leafs play host to Chicago Black Hawks and Detroit Red Wings tackle the Canadiens.

All six clubs are in action Sunday with Toronto at Detroit, Montreal at New York against the Rangers and Chicago playing the Bruins at Boston.

Two major factors place Montreal as a winner among the pundits—speed and an injury-free roster.

Tonight's Detroit - Montreal game will be carried on the CBC-TV network (Channels 2 and 6), starting at 5:30.

The three positions behind Montreal should be a toss-up among the Leafs, Wings and Hawks.

RANGERS A THREAT

The Rangers, with a combination of youth and hustle are expected to be a first-division threat.

The league is getting off to its latest start in 20 years. The 1964-65 season began Oct. 12 and the playoffs ended May 1.

It also marks the 20th NHL season for Red Wing stars Gordie Howe and Bill Gadsby, tying a league record set by former Bruin Dit Clapper.

A new rule this year requires each team to have two goalies dressed for each game.

The return of coach Toe Blake for another season is in itself enough inspiration for the speedy Canadiens.

POWER PLAY STRONG

With the 37-year-old Howe as its nucleus Detroit's power play, which could prove to be the best in the league, includes all-star Norm Ullman, a 42-goal scorer last season, recently acquired veteran Andy Bathgate, Alex Delvecchio and defenceman Doug Barkley.

The best defence and solid goaltending in the league rests with Toronto in veterans Johnny Bower and Terry Sawchuk.

An improvement for Chicago is that they will not have to rely so much on its all-stars—left-winger Bobby Hull, centre Stan Mikita, defenceman Pierre Pilote and goalie Glenn Hall. The team should click more as a team in its bid to reach first place.

The Rangers are without super stars, but last year their hustling style of play suggested they were shooting for better things than fifth place.

The Bruins are still considered the NHL's weak-sisters even though they have a new general manager in Hap Emms, formerly with Niagara Falls Flyers of the OHA Junior A series.

GRID SEMIS SUNDAY

Farmers Respect Sting of Hornets

There's a "thing" sticking in the throats of Oak Bay's Farmer Construction football players.

Call it a Hornet's sting.

Ken Stokes' Victoria Hornets are the only team that refused to knuckle down to the tough Farmers during the regular Vancouver Island Juvenile League schedule.

Hornets tripped the Farmers 34-19 early in the season. They never got a chance to play a scheduled second game because of the league's decision to wipe out the last week and get into playdowns.

MUSTANGS AT NANAIMO

The sudden-death semifinals will be played Sunday and the Hornet-Farmer clash is the headliner at Carnarvon Park. JBAA Mustangs will visit the Redmen in Nanaimo in Sunday's other semifinal.

Farmers, who reeled off six straight victories and claimed first place after the loss to Hornets, will be without two first-stringers. Definitely sidelined from Sunday's contest are linebacker Bob Zapotichny and fullback Dave Young.

Another fullback, Ken Stainsbury, will be the one Farmers will have to watch Sunday—or be stung again. It was Stainsbury's running that sparked Hornets' early victory over the Ralph Sinden-coached Oak Bay team.

Game time is 2 p.m.

He came to terms almost at the last minute. The NHL season opens tonight. Chicago's first game is at Boston Sunday night.

How are we able to offer this service?

We are not a small loan company, discount company or an acceptance corporation. We deal only in loans of more than $1,500. By doing so we eliminate the high cost of servicing such as would be borne by a finance company making ten loans of $50 each. We deal only in mortgage loans for long terms and reasonable rates. Many a home-owner today may find that he is in the uncomfortable situation of having several high interest rate, short term obligations that lead to over-burden monthly payments. Why not give us a call to see if we can arrange to consolidate all these obligations into one low-cost term low monthly payment loan.

We invite comparison!

We invite you to compare our facilities and loan system with any other finance or loan company. Thousands of British Columbians have compared and have taken out loans with our company. We have a complete network of offices throughout Western Canada. People from 186 cities, towns and villages throughout B.C. have come into our 4 offices to take advantage of our low-cost, low monthly payment loan service.

CHINOOKS START . . . AT CENTRAL TONIGHT

'Y' on Equal Footing

Vancouver YMCA and Victoria Chinooks will be on equal footing in one department when they move into the Central Junior High gymnasium for the opening of the Inter-City Men's Basketball League season tonight.

The Y, like Chinooks, has six holdovers from last year's squad.

YMCA finished second to Victoria in regular league play and was upset by CYO in a tough semifinal series. Coach Ollie Goldsmith's Chinooks went on to win the Canadian championship.

Vancouver's six holdovers are Howie Knapfl, the team's tallest at six-foot-six, Dick Joyner (six-three), Murray West (six-three), Mickey Meyers, Dave Evans and John O'Connor.

Filling in vacancies are Bill Etherington, Frank Aschenbauner, Peter Kostchin, Ross Molberg and Joe Hatori.

Of the newcomers, Kostchin appears to be the big catch. A native of Grand Forks, he is six-foot-five and will add considerable height to the already-tall Y squad.

Game time is 8:30, with a preliminary between Esquimalt's bantam boys and St. Louis College scheduled to start at 7:15 p.m.

Navy Victory Sparked By Newest Reservist

Bob Buie came back to haunt the Esquimalt Pontiac Chiefs on Friday.

Possibly one of the speediest skaters ever developed by the district's minor hockey leagues, Buie scored three goals—including the winner in a second, sudden-death overtime — as Navy nipped the Chiefs 5-4 in an Esquimalt League thriller at the Sports Centre.

It was busy night for Buie, who formerly hung his tack in the Esquimalt dressing room. In addition to scoring goals, Buie, who qualified for the Tars by joining the naval reserve, also managed to tack four penalties onto his individual record.

His winner came at 1:26 of the second overtime, on Navy's first sortie into the Chiefs' zone after the breather. Buie, circling from behind the net, caught Esquimalt goalie Ed Hastings by surprise with a sudden, sharp-angled shot.

While Buie was putting 'em in, goalie Phil Frank was busy kicking 'em out at the other end to also figure prominently in Navy's first victory.

Frank made a whopping total of 51 saves, missing only on two shots by Bob Holness and one each by Peter Dawe and Doug Couch.

Duff Gray and Nick Nicoletti scored Navy's other goals before a noisy crowd of about 900.

Regional College To Be Discussed

Area education officials hope to meet next week with government spokesmen on a proposed regional college serving South Vancouver Island.

In a report Thursday to a joint meeting of school boards from Districts 61, 62 and 63, Greater Victoria district superintendent John Gough said there is a gap between high school and university programs.

It is not foreseen that a proposed regional vocational school to be built in Victoria wll entirely fill this gap, he said.

District superintendents will attend a meeting with the education department, with Victoria trustee Lloyd Clarkson, chairman of the joint board study.

For more than a year the group has been working toward a type of college that will fill the needs of those who have just left school and also of adults seeking to continue their education.

Crux of discussion is expected to be centred on whether joint college terms of reference are broad enough to include adult education programs, as well as first and second year university.

New Car Park Set to Open Next Friday

Off-street parking in the north downtown business section rises by 210 spaces next Friday with opening of Centennial Square car park.

Official opening is set for 3 p.m., with Victoria city council, downtown business representatives and other guests present.

Victoria Parking Commission is expected to take on operation of the new facility immediately.

The car park building, last of the major square projects to be completed, provides space for 17 police vehicles in a segregated area with its own entrance and exit.

It brings to three the number of council-inspired parking buildings placed under VPC operation, and is likely to be the last for several years.

Aldermen Balk On Film Record For Old Homes

A suggested film record of historic homes about to be demolished was rejected by Victoria city council finance committtee Thursday.

In reporting to council, the committee recommended against the Victoria Historic Building Foundation proposal.

A letter to council asked that color photos be taken at city expense and placed in the archives.

"This is a function they could well undertake themselves at their own cost," Mayor R. B Wilson said.

★ ★ ★

The committee agreed to pay for equipment damage incurred when a civic employee was engaged in his own time taking night photographs in Centennial Square.

James Morant was asked to take pictures for a square brochure because of his experience in photography. He agreed to the job, for which he borrowed a special camera lens

But by accident he dropped it and the lens from his own camera and was billed for $98 by the lender, who would have to replace the lens unit.

City manager Dennis Young said he was satisfied the claim was proper and recommended that the $98 and repair costs of about $20 for Morant's lens should be taken from funds available for producing the brochure.

★ ★ ★

A combined semi-automatic telephone switch board for Metro Health and social welfare departments was recommended by the committee.

It would replace an overloaded manual switchboard and free nine lines from the city hall central board, personnel officer Terry FitzPatirck reported.

The installation would cost $450 and $4,000 a year to rent. Cost of staffing would be borne jointly by the two departments, prorated as to usage.

RUSSIAN leaders may soon invite Prince Philip to visit the Soviet Union, a London newspaper said Friday, quoting Eastern bloc diplomats: The British government said they have no knowledge of any invitation.

Agricultural Course Backed

Extension of agriculture courses into the senior secondary level has been endorsed by Saanich school trustees for Claremont High School next fall.

District 63 trustees had felt the need of high school agriculture to complement junior secondary courses offered in Grades 9 and 10 at Royal Oak and Mount Newton schools.

Otherwise, there is no agriculture course available until the university level.

About 80 junior high students are taking agriculture courses this year.

Department of education approval has been given.

NOT SIMPLY LOCAL

Business Needs Broader Look

Local and prospective local industry should be looking at business opportunities up the Island and not just in Victoria district Ald. A. W. Toone said Friday.

He spoke following a meeting of Greater Victoria Industrial Development Research Commission, of which he is chairman.

Ald. Toone said business expansion should be on a broader area than that which is simply local.

As part of its work, the commission is evaluating the local industrial economy on the basis of questionnaires seeking such information as where purchases are made and the volume of business conducted.

The intention is to encourage local business expansion and the purchase of local goods, besides encouraging more local manufacturing.

Inquiries are out to other industrial development organizations and government departments which may assist in the evaluation, Ald. Toone said.

The commission has suggested the Victoria Chamber of Commerce should produce a directory of industry and commerce, largely through its existing files or up-dating of material available to it.

This could be a valuable addition to the kit on industrial opportunities being compiled by the commission for reply to outside inquiries, Ald. Toone said.

Acquitted

VANCOUVER (CP)—A police constable was acquitted of impaired driving because the symptoms he showed after an accident could be blamed as easily on shock as on liquor.

Const. Calvin Reynolds, 41, was charged June 5 after his car hit a wooden barrier. Magistrate Gordon Scott accepted an explanation that the constable fell asleep seconds before the accident.

Planner's Job Gets Bid From Bangkok

A bid from Bangkok is among some 40 applications for the new post of Victoria community planner.

The city manager's office said applications for the job are about one-third Canadian and two-thirds foreign, and include Australia, England, Hawaii and continental U.S.

A professional planner is sought to head up a new department of community development, and advertisements have appeared in professional journals in most English-speaking part of the world.

The job will cover planning, zoning, beautification and long-range use of community resources.

Shortness of Canadian applications for the post is attributed to the fact that community planning is in its infancy in this country, and opportunities for professional training are slim.

Candidates will be narrowed down when aldermen go over the applications, allowing the top contenders to be interviewed.

VICTORIA, B.C., SATURDAY, OCTOBER 23, 1965—PAGE 23

Arthur Mayse

Today I am going to set aside my other column notions and turn instead to a speech, by an American, which we Canadians might well ponder in these months when our neighbor's will to peace is being questioned more sharply than ever before.

The address was delivered at Johns Hopkins University a few days ago by U.S. Secretary of State Dean Rusk, who titled it, "The Unseen Search for Peace."

What this distinguished interpreter offered was a quiet reassurance that the America to which much of the world looks for help and hope, does still exist.

We'll bypass his preamble, which treats of the reasons for American military involvement in Asia. These have about them the inevitable heat of the participant. Valid they may be; but for me, the meat of Mr. Rusk's exposition lies elsewhere.

He cites the conferences, of which "on an average working day," U.S. delegates attend 15 to 20.

Here are random examples:

. . . Conference on sanitary regulations affecting international trade in livestock and meat, under auspices of the Organization for Economic Co-Operation and Development, in Paris.

. . . Preparatory meeting on the Asian Development Bank, called by the Economic Commission for Asia and the Far East, in Bangkok.

. . . Parleys on health, safety in civil aviation, world meteorological observation, use of radioisotopes in the development of natural resources.

These which I've cited merely hint at the range of these undramatic but useful efforts.

★ ★ ★

Listen now while Dean Rusk speaks of his country's foreign aid programs:

"One" of the basic policies of the United States," says he, "is assistance to the less developed countries of the free world in advancing economically, socially and politically.

"These comprise more than 80 nations, three-fourths of them new since the Second World War, and covering most of Central and South America and Africa and much of Asia, and containing nearly half of the world's population."

That the U.S. stands to reap where she sows, I concede without argument. She does; and as nations she assists begin to emerge from their early struggles, those gains will multiply.

Since ours will too, however, through a boosted world economy, I see no grounds for censure.

Canada, within her capabilities, follows a like course: there is our participation, with other Commonwealth nations, in the Colombo Plan.

★ ★ ★

Dean Rusk's America is party to 4,300 treaties and international agreements, dating back to the Treaty of Paris which established her independence in 1783.

Three-fourths of these treaties, Mr. Rusk pointed out, were signed in the last 25 years. He sees them as important in shaping "a new law of mankind."

Also—and I find the fact most heartening—this senior spokesman for the American government reaffirms his faith in the United Nations in clear and positive terms.

"We shall," he promises, "continue to support and do all we can to strengthen that organization."

He sketches a United States which believes strongly in educational exchange as a factor in the search for peace. Last year, 82,000 foreign students attended American colleges and universities. A further 9,000 came as teachers or on research projects, and a like number served as interns or residents in U.S. hospitals.

The picture keeps building . . . and I like what I see.

Not for a moment do I suggest we suspend judgment on our neighbor's ways and works, or surrender our right to criticize policies we believe to be against our mutual interest.

We should, however, keep in mind that Dean Rusk's America is not enemy, but tested friend.

PHOTOGRAPHER Bill Kleeman of New Zealand will present a slide show about his country Wednesday, Nov. 3, at Oak Bay Junior High. Mr. Kleeman's presentation at 8 p.m. will be sponsored by the Victoria Camera Club. He is a recognized authority on the hobby and has given more than 1,000 lectures.

BOUNDARY PROBE SET FOR NOV. 3

A three-man provincial commission on redistribution of B.C. electoral districts will open hearings here Wednesday, Nov. 3.

The three-man commission, headed by Dr. H. F. Angus, will hear submissions at the Law Courts, 850 Burdett, starting at 10:30 a.m.

The hearings were announced last Aug. 5 to consider changes which could reduce the number of B.C. electoral districts from 52 to 48 with a minimum population in a riding being set at 7,500—steps proposed earlier by Premier Bennett.

NOT BINDING

At the time the hearings were announced it was made clear that the provincial government would not bind itself to the findings of Mr. Angus and his two board members, chief electoral officer F. H. Hurley and his deputy K. L. Morton.

There was criticism at the same time from opposition political parties who felt a judge should head the inquiry.

The opening sessions were slated for Vancouver in September. The hearings in this area are to receive representations from the Esquimalt, Oak Bay, Saanich and Victoria ridings.

REPORTER GETS THE FACTS (FIRST HAND)

Onisht Friend, the Pubs Really Are Open

By TERRY IZZARD

Mishter Editor:

About that beer parlor story you shent me on.

Well I can now reveal that they're OPEN.

'Onisht.

At 10:30 on the dot the pearly gates folded back to the cheers of dry-tongued peasants.

Thish peasant was first in line.

Anyway, to get back to that story—the truth is there is no story.

What more can you say than: "THEY'RE OPEN."

Of course, you can say there were queues at all the liquor shtores firsht thing thish morning.

And you can say that people were waiting at the beer parlor doors before they opened.

Ash far ash I'm conshernced you can say jusht what you like.

'Cause I jusht don't care.

The cool, clear liquid is washing away eight weeks' dust.

★ ★ ★

Sitting at your little desk I guesh ish hard to pitcher the scene.

But allow me to try to deshcribe to you what a glass of beer looks like.

Well to shtart with it's kind of ambler colored with a creamy froth lapping around the top.

Little beads of condensation trickle ever so shlowly down the glass with each sip.

There's something of a tongue-tingling sensation as the first drops pour over your tongue to filter slowly past the Adam's Apple and into the oesophagus.

Shomeone tells me 150,000 gallons of draught beer and 300,000 cases of bottled beer has been shipped out already.

Quite honestly I'm shatisfied with jusht a few pints.

★ ★ ★

Inshidentally, I was wondering if maybe you could cancel that interview I had for thish afternoon.

Ish not that I'm not up to it but I'd like to give thish story I'm on now full coverage.

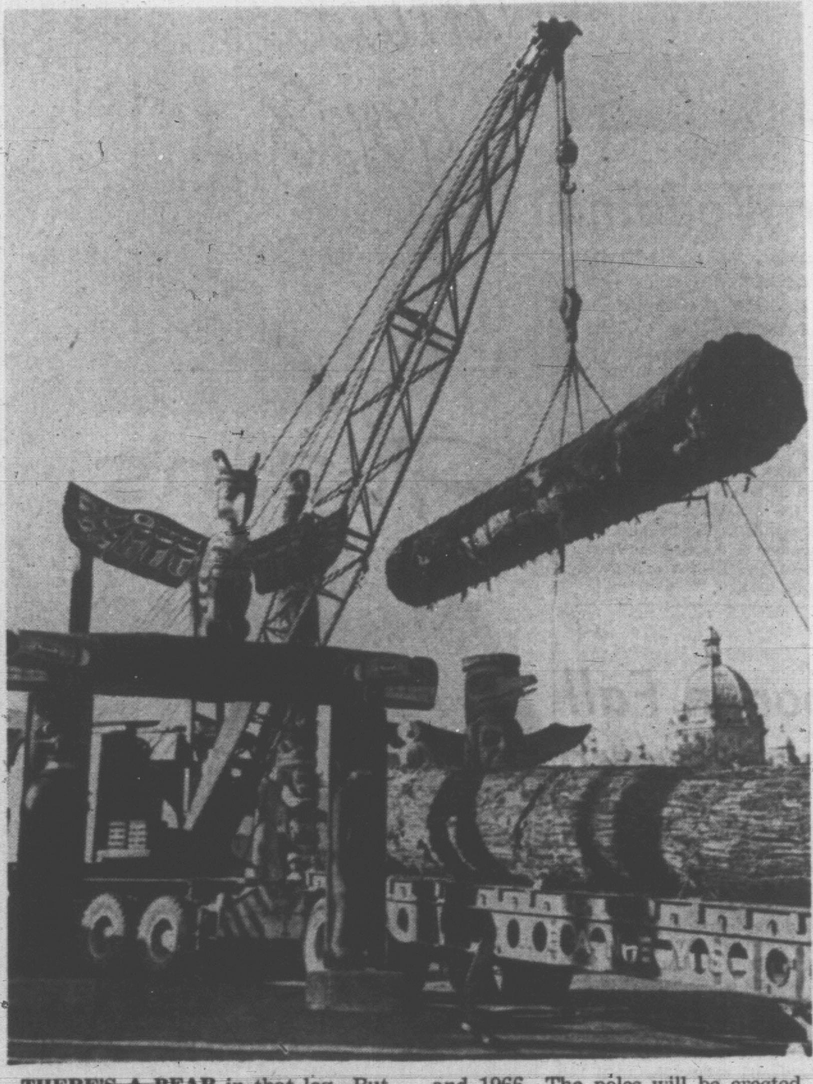
I'm getting the facts as quickly as the waiter can serve them.

I've already got the "what, where, why, when."

But I'm shtill trying figure out "How?"

PS: I wanha raise.

PPS: Shend it in care of the pub.



THERE'S A BEAR in that log. But it's waiting the genius of native carvers Henry and Tony Hunt to bring it out. The big stick of cedar and another like it were lifted into Thunderbird Park here Friday to open a provincial centennial committee competition which will see chips flying across British Columbia between now and 1966. The poles will be erected then in ceremonies marking the 100th anniversary of the union of the Crown colonies of British Columbia and Vancouver Island. Each pole's design is left to the carver except that each one must include a likeness of a bear which was common to the mythology of all early B.C. tribes.

FOR TOURIST ROUTES

Totem Carvers Get Big Boost

A centennial year plan to boost Indian arts while brightening British Columbia tourist routes with brilliant new totems was unveiled today.

Deputy Provincial Secretary L. J. Wallace, chairman of the provincial centennial committee, said a competition is being held for Indian carvers.

They have been invited to undertake completion of 20 12-foot poles commemorating the mythology of their forefathers. Each pole must contain the likeness of a bear but the rest of the design is left to the carvers.

The bear, said Mr Wallace, is common to the legends of all B.C. tribes.

The carvers will be paid for the poles and there will be a $250 bonus for the finest creation.

CEREMONIES

The contest will be climaxed by traditional Indian ceremonies on a date to be set during 1966, the centenary of the union of the Crown Colonies of Vancouver Island and British Columbia.

The ceremonies will take place at separate points at the spots where the poles will be erected. These points are at major centres along the proposed tourist route between Victoria and Port Hardy (which will be linked next year by ferry to Prince Rupert) and at Tsawwasssen and Horseshoe Bay on the mainland.

Mr. Wallace said the project is mainly the work of a provincial centennial sub-committee on native Indian celebrations. The chairman is Bob Clifton of Comox. His sub-committee located the carvers and will arrange for judging.

The sub-committee also will arrange for plaques to be placed by each totem describing the legend of the pole.

"The plan was evolved with the intent of bringing out the artistry of the Indians and the continuation of this craft," Mr. Wallace stated.

Rod McInnes, director of the Indian Advisory Act, said carvers from Campbell River, Port Hardy, Prince Rupert and other mainland points are taking part in the competition as well as two carvers in Victoria.

FINE TOTEMS

The Victoria carvers, who are beginning work at Thunderbird Park almost immediately, are Henry and Tony Hunt. They plan to make five totems. They received a shipment of two huge cedar logs Friday from Sooke, a gift of MacMillan, Bloedel and Company Ltd.

The work at the park will be done in the long shed previously erected to permit full public viewing of the work.

MURDER SUSPECT MENTALLY ILL

Murder suspect Robert MacDonald, 44, of 1036 Caledonia, is mentally ill and has been ordered detained at Essondale Hospital.

MacDonald was charged Sept. 27 with the murder of Frederick Dyer, 83, of 1213 Walnut.

MacDonald was committed to Essondale by Provincial cabinet order Friday. He is to be held there "until his complete or partial recovery is certified to the satisfaction of the lieutenant-governor or until further notice."

Second Offence Nets Jail Term

William Bernasky, 606 Francis, was sent to jail today for one month when he pleaded guilty to his second offence of impaired driving.

Bernasky was charged after his car was seen weaving at 55 m.p.h. Friday night. He stumbled and fell when he got out of the car.

Bernasky was convicted of impaired driving one year ago.

Speakers' Corner

Don Poirier of the Socialist Party of Canada will speak on the election, Sunday at 3 p.m., at Beacon Hill's Speakers' Corner.

SAANICH NEEDS ALL PROJECTS, SAYS CURTIS

Taxpayers Urged to Approve Plan

Saanich Reeve Hugh Curtis today urged municipal taxpayers to give close consideration to a $2.7 million capital projects budget they will vote on in December.

"I naturally would hope for an affirmative vote," he said.

The budget was approved unanimously at a closed meeting of council Thursday, culmination of a year of special meetings to work out details.

60 PER CENT NEEDED

Sixty per cent approval of those who vote is needed for the bylaw to pass. The money would be repaid over 20 years and the work undertaken in a five-year plan.

Approval would mean a two-mill tax increase, or about $10 for a person paying gross taxes of $250 a year.

Reeve Curtis gave three reasons for the proposed expenditure, 40 per cent of it for land acquisition:

● The need exists for the projects outlined;

● Work must proceed now while land is available and before it is put to other uses, and lost;

● Future users of the facilities should share the cost with present taxpayers.

He said council and municipal staff will give as much publicity as possible to ratepayers because "it is necessary to have a fully informed electorate."

The budget has already been endorsed by the Gordon Head Community Association, which is especially interested in one of the two outdoor heated swimming pools to be built in the Kenmore-Tyndall area.

BUDGET HIGHLIGHTS

Highlights of the budget are acquisition of the McRae Estate, covering 78 acres of the Cedar Hill golf course and some surrounding area of 24 acres, and construction and reconstruction of McKenzie Avenue.

Widening McKenzie Avenue to four lanes will cost $951,000 and will lead to the vicinity of the planned Centennial stadium at University of Victoria.

Other expeditures include $215,000 for major drainage of the Bowker Creek basin north of Blair Avenue to reduce the flow and make culverting more economical.

The two outdoor heating swimming pools—one at Gordon Head and the other near the Tillicum Outdoor Theatre—will cost $300,000.

UA Passes Halfway Mark

The United Appeal campaign is over the hump!

Fund total pushed past the halfway mark at 5 p.m. Friday and stood at 50.7 per cent of the $439,210 goal at noon today.

Right now there is $223,054 in the kitty.

The residential campaign going all this week has so far pulled in $1,650.

Initial shortage of canvassers as eased and the house-to-house campaign "is beginning to come along quite a bit better," said campaign vice-chairman Mrs. J. A. McArthur, in charge of the residential drive.

But canvassers are still needed badly in several districts, she said.

The Langford district is "desperate," with Gorge, Lake Hill and James Bay also short of canvassers.

Response from other areas, especially Oak Bay, has been good.

Volunteers should call Mrs. McArthur at 384-2676.

Boy scouts, girl guides and several men's service clubs have been taking part in the residential campaign.

Community Chest members, who benefit from the appeal, have also provided people to pound pavements for the fund.

Ask The Times

Q. Is there any provision for those confined to hospitals or nursing homes to cast a ballot Nov. 8? Is there any provision for a blind voter to take with him into the voting cubicle at the polling station someone who will show him where he wants to place his cross?—H. L.

A. Yes, to both questions. Three hospitals—Royal Jubilee, St. Joseph's and Mount St. Mary's—have been designated as chronic care hospitals and ballot boxes will be taken from bed to bed.

In the case of a blind elector, he may be assisted by a friend or the poll clerk to cast his ballot after first taking the oral oath of an incapacitated elector, says Ray Bryant, returning officer for Victoria.

Anyone wishing a question answered is invited to send the problem along to the Times, addressed to "Ask the Times" Editor. Questions and answers will be published daily.

Two Accidents Send 3 People To Hospital

Two accidents in two hours in the Colwood area Friday night sent three persons to hospital with facial cuts.

Thomas Murray, 220 Zealous Cres., was treated after he drove his car into the guard rail on Belmont Rd. bridge. He was heading toward Belmont Park at the time.

In a separate accident, driver John Stark, 38, of 1219 Pandora, lost control of his rear-engined foreign-built auto and hit a rock wall on the Trans-Canada Highway near Goldstream Ave.

He and passenger Helen Thomas, 1184 View St., received facial injuries.

Someone Doesn't Like Road Signs

Colwood RCMP today were looking for a car and driver responsible for pushing over half a dozen highway speed and stop signs in the area Friday night.

There was no estimate of the damage available.

Police said they know what type of car to look for from evidence found at the vandalism scenes.

BEER ON—BEARD OFF—That was the order of the day for "Red" Simpson. Red, an employee of Lucky Lager brewery in Victoria, vowed he wouldn't shave until the beer strike was over. Friday was the day. Doing the honors is Mayfair barber Gerald Hughes. (Halkett Photo.)

GREATER VICTORIA STUDENTS TO GET MESSAGE

Indy Racing Safer Than Riding on Highways!

By RON SUDLOW

Indianapolis driver Bob Harkey doesn't mind living dangerously.

But not when it comes to highway driving.

He knows what it's like to flip a racing machine.

He has a pretty good idea what could happen to him in a highway accident.

And next week he will be taking his message of highway safety to 10 Greater Victoria schools. His visit is sponsored by The Times and the Champion Spark Plug Co. in co-operation with Greater Victoria School Board.

Friday he flew from Victoria to Sacramento for a United States Auto Club race. The car he will drive was the first car driven by Victoria's Billy Foster when he joined the USAC championship trail last year.

While racing, Bob had his nose broken four times, suffered several neck whiplash injuries and burns to his feet from scalding water and oil.

But racing cars are engineered to give a driver ten times the protection offered by passenger autos.

On the Memorial Day weekend in the U.S., he'd much rather be taking calculated risks whizzing around the Indianapolis Motor Speedway at 160 mph than taking his chances on the highway.

"It's much safer," says Bob.

His worst accident occurred two years ago at Ascot Speedway in Los Angeles when he flipped an Indy-type sprint car which went end-over-end once, then rolled four times.

He walked away from the mangled hulk of metal, "but I was stiff for a couple of weeks."

"It's hard to describe a crash like that. It happened so fast. I was going 110 at the time.

"Stock cars are different in a roll. You see the grandstand go by upside down. Then you see the lights. And you even get time to wonder when the thing's going to stop," said Bob.

But track racing and highway driving are different.

Drivers wear crash helmets, seat belts, shoulder harnesses and fire-proof suits.

And there are no needless frills on a race car, as in today's passenger cars.

The seat is moulded around the driver and the cockpit is protected by a roll bar or "squirrel cage."

"Driving is so easy in today's models you can get yourself in trouble. You were pretty busy working a '40 Ford up to 60 mph.

"Today the driver can let his car climb to 80 or 90 without even noticing it. And he doesn't pay so much attention to what he's doing.

"And stopping two and a half tons of iron at that speed isn't easy," said the veteran wheel jockey.

Bob began his racing career 17 years ago when he was in high school.

He took a hopped-up 1929 Ford roadster to the local track at Charlotte, N.C. and beat out a midget and a modified sportsman to win his first race and purse of $15.

"Then I had to wait two years before I won another."

His biggest payday was in the 1964 Indianapolis 500 when he collected $12,000 for an eighth-place finish.

Racing is not Bob's only interest. His main hobby is flying and sky-diving. In high school and college he fought as a middleweight, winning 57 out of 63 fights—27 by knockouts.

He is married and now makes his home in Indianapolis.

Garden Labor in Fall Yields Spring Reward

By PENNY SAVER

Autumn is the time when I begin to cast a cold eye on the wreckage in my garden, the fallen leaves, dilapidated rockery and untidy flower beds, and decide that this year I am really going to make something out of the wilderness.

Gazing at the shambles can be quite discouraging at times, especially when you know very well you should have trimmed the hedge or tidied the lawn last Sunday afternoon, but didn't. The only thing that saves me from real despair is the thought of how wonderful it will all look next spring and summer if only I do something about it NOW.

Early dwarf iris are one of the most enchanting types of flowers I've seen. They seem dainty and rather shy until you see a clump or border of them together. They come in some wonderful colors—a yellow like spring sunshine, a clear sky-blue, and my favorite, the deep blue that is almost mauve.

Selling for 89 cents a dozen, the bulbs do best when they are planted in a rockery or some other spot that is thoroughly dry in summer. They'd also make a marvellous splash of color amongst the other rockery plants.

And for the individualist (there's always one) who wants an eye-catcher in the garden . . . something that will make people exclaim "Wherever did you get it?" . . . Here's just the thing! It's a dwarf peach tree, true dwarf, which I'm told is quite difficult to get in this part of the world.

Selling for $9.50 each, these peach trees should make a big hit with the patio gardener as they're just right size to put in a tub and place in the corner of your patio. They look lovely, so cool and fresh, and would make a very attractive addition to anyone's outdoor living area.

In several Greater Victoria homes, membership in the Victoria Musical Art Society is very much a family affair, with children and parents taking part. One such family is that of Lr. and Mrs. J. W. E. Hunt of Foul Bay Road. Seen with their mother who is assistant concert master with the Victoria Symphony Orchestra are, left to right, Wendy, nine; Darien and Marshall, 13. Darien marked his 15th birthday last Sunday by playing his first solo at the orchestra's concert in the Royal Theatre.

A member of the society for the past eight years, Miss Merlin Naduriak, at 19, is already making her name in musical circles with her mastery of the 'cello. The first-year University of Victoria student was awarded a bursary by the society at the 1964 festival.

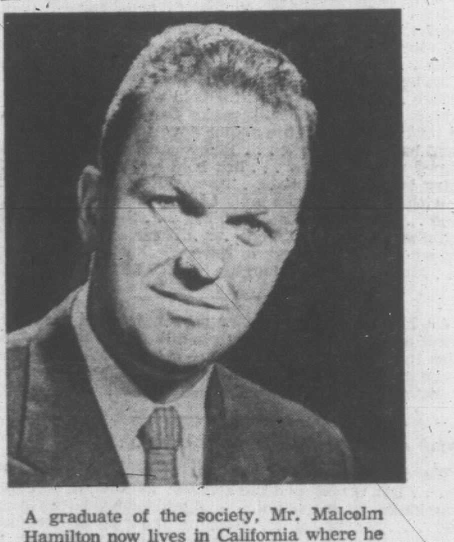
Mrs. Jay I. Durand, honorary president of the society, has won international acclaim as one of Canada's outstanding pianists.

As far back as 1910, Victoria's women were keenly interested in fostering an appreciation and informed knowledge of music. A group of them, completely unaware that their actions would have important results in today's musical circles, formed the Ladies' Musical Club.

On Sunday afternoon at 3 p.m., the McPherson Playhouse will be the setting for a concert featuring West Coast violinist Elfreda Sewell—a direct result from that initial meeting in 1910!

It is the first in a series of concerts to be presented by the Victoria Musical Art Society this season. The society is the 'descendant' of the Ladies' Musical Club, the latter being incorporated in 1930, changing its name and electing Mrs. J. O. Cameron as its first president.

As its horizons grew, so did its membership. Now youngsters, men and women share its work and its triumphs. Many of its members have been helped in fulfilling their musical ambitions by bursaries awarded by the society. Numerous enthusiasts have 'graduated' from the Junior Group, to the Intermediate and Studio Groups, providing a strong 'family tree' for the city's musical future.



A graduate of the society, Mr. Malcolm Hamilton now lives in California where he combines a concert career with his duties of professor of harpsichord at the University of California. He will return to Victoria next January to perform at a society concert. (Kandid Kamera.)

Many youngsters knock on the door of opportunity by joining the Junior Group and taking full advantage of the program of music appreciation provided by the society. One of these is 10-year-old Hilary Scott, a member of two years' standing.

Following in the steps of her elder sister, Pamela, 18-year-old Miss Jill Paver was another of the 1964 festival bursary winners. The talented singer is much in demand at local concerts.

Excellent leadership is provided to junior members by those in the Studio Group. Always ready to help in society projects are, left to right, Miss Lorna Langley, harpist; Mr. Richard Snape, society treasurer; Miss Yvonne Muir, soprano; Mrs. Hans Waelti, speech arts; Mr. Larrie Forbes, flutist, and mezzo soprano, Mrs. Richard Snape.

A piano is as tempting as the prospects of a new dress to the feminine members of the Junior Group. Twelve-year-old Lynne Maggs, left, and Janet McCandlish, 14, test the one in the Deal Street home of society president, Mrs. S. G. Watts. Waiting to take their turn are Rosemary Fryer, 15, and Becky Jay, 12.

Try these chairs on for comfort . . .

We heard that Home Furniture has the largest selection of the most comfortable chairs on the market . . . but insisted on seeing for ourselves . . . Well, it's absolutely true! . . . For solid, blissful, unadulterated . . . almost sinful comfort . . . you just have to sink into one of these chairs . . . and we only hope you'll be able to get out of it long enough to complete its purchase! . . . There are Colonial rockers, recliners . . . and combinations thereof . . . swivels, cushy straight chairs . . . wing backs . . . and the grandaddy of them all . . . the big leather-like lounge chair that encloses a man's body like a cloud . . . helps make home so nice to come home to . . . and obtainable only at Home Furniture . . . On the visual side, Colonial chairs have most attractive covers in old-world prints, plain colors or tweedy mixtures . . . Scotchguarded for protection against soil and spills . . . styles and colors to fit into any room . . . If you're contemplating a new, really comfortable chair for Christmas, now is the time to visit Home Furniture . . . while the selection is at its best . . . A small deposit will hold any of them . . . Home Furniture Company, 825 Fort St., 382-5138.

All Paris is currently crazy about feathers . . . a craze epitomized by Dior's brightly-colored ostrich hoods.

Boots . . . boots . . . boots! . . .

We just never DID get past the boots being put on display in Munday's when we happened in the other day . . . Talk about dashing! . . . They've got that faintly Edwardian look that's so very, very smart today . . . criss-cross laces . . . or big buckles . . . These boots are just in from Italy . . . made by Bandolino . . . and you most certainly won't see anything like them elsewhere in Victoria . . . Soft, supple leather, in three heights . . . calf, below-calf, and ankle-high . . . All have trim low heels, rubber soles . . . warm wool lining and foam rubber intersole . . . They're meant for cold weather wear, and a light spraying with silicone will make them waterproof . . . The high boot is plain, with a zipper down the inner side . . . Dark brown, loden and black . . . Below-calf height is unexpectedly trimmed with cow-hair . . . has bold laces up the front, comes in dark brown or black . . . Two styles in the ankle boot . . . one with cow-hair trim and laces, the other with a silver buckle . . . loden, red, beige, black . . . $14.95 for these, while the higher boots are $18.95 . . . These are undoubtedly the smartest winter footwear in town . . . so be sure to see them at . . . Munday's, 1203 Douglas St., EV 3-2211.

An English fashion writer says nylon tights are the only possible answer to the sky-high hemlines so popular in Britain. British lingerie manufacturers are lagging behind in designing undergarments suitable for the new clothes, and pantie girdles have never caught on with English women.

A coat every woman should own . . .

We don't know who thought of making the first duffle coat . . . but whosoever the creator, he should be counted as a benefactor to mankind . . . Nothing beats the duffle for hiking . . . marketing . . . taxiing the children to and from school . . . flitting around the campus . . . defying the elements, however capricious they may be . . . We saw some beauties in Wilson's this week . . . just arrived from England . . . Soft, sturdy pure wool . . . with red satin-lined hoods to snuggle into when it's blustery . . . or fold down into a smart shawl collar . . . They fasten with Buffalo horn toggles and rawhide hooks . . . come in fawn, winter white or vivid cherry red . . . lined with red flannel . . . and the ¾ length is just right for keeping you warm where it counts most . . . These cost $62.50 . . . and will probably wear as long as you will . . . More warm goodies at Wilson's are the wool knit gloves, in short, mid-arm or elbow length . . . Imported from Switzerland, some have a fancy crocheted top for dressier wear . . . Shorties are plain, or with a pretty bead trim . . . Black, white, beige in the longer lengths . . . others may be had in a variety of bright colors . . . Quite inexpensive, too . . . W. & J. Wilson Limited, 1221 Government St., 383-7177.

Mollie Parnis defines her fall collection as the "shift to the shaft". . . and she believes that clothes are moving inward to make women look tall and slender.

House of Glamour hairpieces are superlative . . .

If you've never owned a hairpiece . . . to supplement your own tresses . . . you've no idea what a joy . . . (and heaven-sent convenience) . . . such an article can be! . . . Doesn't matter whether your hair is short or long . . . a postiche can ring endless variations on your hairdo . . . glamour you up for evening . . . even make you feel more feminine and exciting! . . . And on the practical side, if you're caught with your hair down between sets . . . simply brush it back, attach your hairpiece . . . and you're instantly presentable . . . House of Glamour have just received from Europe a new stock of hairpieces of all sizes and colors . . . hand-made, 100% human hair . . . which they blend so expertly to match your own, you won't know where you stop and your postiche begins! . . . This is of paramount importance, and no one can equal H of G's expertise . . . Prices for these hairpieces start at $35 . . . less than you'd pay for a moderately priced dress . . . and once you own one, it'll last for years . . . So why not treat yourself to a pre-Christmas gift? . . . With the festive season coming up, it'll be the best money you ever spent . . . Drop in or call . . . House of Glamour, 658 View St., 386-6188.

Fashion designers are well ahead of the times . . . A return to more emphasized waistline and a flared skirt is seen in New York as the trend for spring coats.

The new Volkswagen has gone glamorous . . .

It's almost a year since we told you about the new 1965 Volkswagen at Speedway Motors . . . and if we waxed enthusiastic then, it's nothing to the way we feel now after getting behind the wheel of the 1966 model! . . . A perfect woman's car, if we ever saw one . . . (though if you're lucky enough to get one, just try keeping your husband out!) . . . There's the brand new Flashback, a real glamour-puss . . . but you've probably read about this new baby in the ads . . . What we want to stress is that the less expensive, familiar VW is still with us, but with a new name, the "1300 series". . . and all sorts of improvements like more powerful engine, easier gear shift, seats you can adjust every which way . . . and which automatically lock back to keep the children from bouncing forward at sudden stops . . . It's a smoother-riding, more comfortable car than the old VW . . . Easier than ever to drive and to park . . . The "1300" VW's now have smart color-keyed interiors . . . all new washable fabrics . . . Two new exterior colors have been added . . . Amazonas, which is sort of greenish black, and Bahama Blue . . . a very feminine shade to match your baby blue eyes! . . . Drop in for a test drive at Speedway Motors Limited, Yates at Vancouver St., 385-2415.

The pale, almost white lipstick, has gone the way of all fads. Women are returning to bright, vivid red shades . . . to give vivacity to the face. It seems, too, that men really like red lips . . . can't abide the anaemic lipstick colors.

Welch's candy for the witching night . . .

In the unlikely event your children have let you forget it . . . next weekend is Halloween . . . and on Saturday night the little ghosts, witches and hobgoblins will be roaming abroad gathering in their annual tribute of loot . . . It's a great night for the young fry, and you'll want to be well prepared to placate the trick-or-treaters . . . So lay in a supply of Welch's candy for handouts . . . We say Welch's, because they're fresh and wholesome . . . the kind of candy you hope people will give your own children . . . and avert those post-Halloween tummy aches! . . . Welch's have jelly beans and gum drops especially colored for the occasion . . . black, orange and yellow . . . All kinds of yummy chews wrapped in paper . . . Everton and Rum-and-Butter toffees . . . Molasses Nut . . . Silver Mints . . . Frisco Chews, Mint Nougats and barley sugar . . . (so good you'll be hard put to keep your hands off them yourself) . . . which prompts us to suggest you treat yourself to a box of Welch's delicious chocolates for the adults to nibble on between door-bell rings . . . After all, who said Halloween's just for children? . . . Welch's Candy Shop, 755 Fort St., 383-6422.

Sybil Bateman is the epitome of half-size elegance for Fall 1965. A perfect 12½, she has chosen medium grey wool worsted in a suit by Bellino of Montreal. The suit is simply styled with the perfect touch of a deeper grey velvet collar. The black tricorn felt, a Courreges-inspired style, has the sharp architectural contrast of white on black which is symbolic of this young Frenchman's designs.

Basic 'Bodies' Boon For Half-Size Figures

Because we are all differently built it is sometimes hard to determine our correct fitting.

Damaske

However, there is no longer the problem of purchasing a dress and then having the waistline raised, the shoulders narrowed or the bust darts released.

There are all manner of size variations in this diversified age. Once you find your correct fitting, and your weight remains constant, you should overcome most alteration problems. Skirt length remains a thing of personal choice, but adjusting a hemline is a simple matter and may often be done at home. Most stores will mark and pin the correct length for their customers.

Consider proportion . . . where are you long or short? Are you long through the waist, the lower legs, the back, the thighs or the neck?

Women's fashions are made according to certain basic "bodies" that take into account this difference in proportion of the female figure.

The short-waisted figure is called a "junior" and is built according to these proportions for an average, size 11 figure: Bust 34½", waist 25½", hip 35", collar 12", wrist 6½", length of waist in back 14¼".

The regular "misses" figure is longer waisted and has these proportions for a size 12 figure: Bust 35", waist 26", hip 35", collar 12", wrist 6¾", length of waist in back 15".

The short-waisted fuller woman's figure is labeled "half-size" and has these proportions for a size 16½ figure: Bust 38½", waist 30", hip 39", collar 13¾", wrist 7⅝", length of waist in back 15¼".

The regular "women's figure" is again fuller but longer-waisted. For a size 40 figure: Bust 43½", waist 34", hip 43", collar 16", wrist 8½", length of waist in back 16½".

These are realistic sizes for the "average" woman in the various classifications.

If you have a feeling that your fitting could be improved, choose a day when you have a little time, choose a saleswoman who looks rested and cheerful and try the various sizes.

Dress and suit departments keep each of these groups carefully divided so that once you find your grouping you should stay with this selection and stop wasting time on improper fittings.

The difference of just an inch here or there can make the difference between a really smart new outfit and one that is just new.

DEAR ABBY . . .

Stranger Than Fiction!

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: I am thoroughly confused. I have been dating a widower in his middle 50s. He is an attractive, intelligent, well-to-do executive. Yesterday he told me that his sister-in-law (the sister of his deceased wife) who is married, has grown children and lives in another province, has offered to accompany him on his vacation to Hawaii. He says they will be good company for each other and she is "lots of laughs." Does this sound all right to you, Abby? He says he sees nothing wrong with it as they would have separate rooms. I said I didn't think it was proper for a married woman to vacation with a bachelor and, furthermore, I couldn't understand what kind of a husband would allow it. He said her husband was very "broad-minded." I would like your opinion of this.

"OLD-FASHIONED"

DEAR "OLD-FASHIONED": Maybe her husband has a "broad" in mind he hopes to entertain in his wife's absence. Otherwise, I can't understand it, either. For an attractive, intelligent, well-to-do executive to take "company" to Hawaii, is like carrying coals to Newcastle.

DEAR ABBY: Please don't give me a long lecture on how much children owe their parents because I already know. My problem is whenever I get any money from relatives, (mostly my grandparents) my mother takes charge of it and that's the last I see of it. I have gotten lots of money for birthdays, holidays, and things like that, but I have never even seen my bank book and I don't know how much I have. When I ask my mother to show me my bank book she says, "Never mind, Shylock, I'm busy now."

Don't you think I have a right to know how much I have saved for me? How can I get her to tell me? I am 12.

'SHYLOCK'

DEAR "SHYLOCK": Your request is not unreasonable, but your timing could be poor. When your mother is in a good mood, and is not busy, ask her to schedule a meeting of the finance committee. Don't press for an examination of the books. Just ask for a treasurer's report. Yes, you have a right to know.

DEAR ABBY: I am going with a girl I'll call Lorraine. She is 20 and I am 22. Lorraine is a wonderful girl, and I want to marry her, but here's the problem: She lives with her parents and two little nieces who are four and six. Their mother (Lorraine's sister) took off and can't be located. Lorraine says that when she marries, she will take the little girls with her because her parents are too old and sick to care for them. I admire Lorraine's interest in these kids, but I think I'm too young to take on the job of raising two half-grown children. What is your advice?

BEING PUSHED

DEAR PUSHED: I, too, admire Lorraine. But she needs a mate who is willing to buy the package deal she insists on. Making a marriage work is difficult enough under normal circumstances, so if you feel that you are "too young" to assume the responsibility of children, and that you are "being pushed," back off.

CONFIDENTIAL TO "DOUBLE-TROUBLE" IN WESTCHESTER: That which cannot be cured, must be endured.

Guest Speaker

Miss Lorna Stuart will address the Association for Childhood Education on the International Children's Village, held this summer at Shawnigan Lake. She will illustrate her topic with slides.

The meeting will be held next Tuesday at 7:45 p.m. in the Art Gallery of Greater Victoria and will be open to the public.

Jobs Available

MONTREAL (CP) — Lack of experience need not hinder the mature woman who really wants a job, says Mrs. Laurette Bethiaume. With "no real experience," she has been wardrobe mistress for a film company in Peru and taught bridge in three languages to wives of Lima's diplomatic community. Now she is social hostess at an apartment building here.

For Bridgewood-Riches Wedding

POLICE FORM AN HONOR GUARD

Members of the Victoria City Police Drill Squad formed an honor guard for Roberta Lee Riches, and William George Peter Bridgewood as they left St. Matthias Anglican Church this afternoon following their marriage.

The church was decorated with white and gold chrysanthemums when Rev. Angus Cameron heard vows exchanged between the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Eric Gordon Riches, 3399 Glasgow Avenue, and the son of Mr. and Mrs. W. Bridgewood, 3236 Seaton Road. Mr. Riches gave his daughter in marriage.

John Bray, accompanied by organist J. Edwards, sang "Ere They Walk" during the ceremony.

A detachable train swept back from the waistline of the bell-skirted brocade gown worn by the bride. The bodice of the floor-length gown was styled with a jewel neckline and sleeves ending in lily points. Her elbow-length veil misted from a crystal coronet, "something borrowed" from her matron of honor, Mrs. J. McDonald. The bride carried a crescent bouquet of white chrysanthemums and ivy.

Mrs. McDonald and bridesmaid, Miss Jane Bowley, were in floor-length sheath gowns of gold peau de charme. They complemented their ensembles with self-fabric rose headpieces, bouquets of gold and yellow chrysanthemums and culture pearl drop pendants, gifts of the bride.

A frock of lime-green satin topped with toning chiffon, was worn by flowergirl Julie Bray. Her headpiece was a green rose edged with tulle and she carried a colonial bouquet, similar to the other attendants. Jewelry was a silver locket, the bride's gift.

Douglas Fieldhouse was best man. Guests were ushered by John McDonald and Duncan Campbell.

A small porcelain shoe, which was used on the wedding cake of the bride's parents, topped the three-tier cake which centred the head table at the reception following in their home. John Bray proposed the toast to the bride.

For travelling on a honeymoon trip motoring through the Cariboo, the new Mrs. Bridgewood chose a ruby red wool suit, topped with matching three-quarter-length coat and accented with hat en tone, black accessories and white floral corsage.

The couple will make their home at 1101 Glenora Place.

FOLLOWS VOWS THIS AFTERNOON

Honeymoon in South

Following a honeymoon trip travelling by air to San Francisco and Los Angeles, Calif., Mr. and Mrs. Marko Konjevod will make their home in Sandspit, B.C.

For travelling, the bride, formerly Margaret Elizabeth Cameron, chose a wine-toned knit suit, complemented with black accessories and an orchid corsage.

First United Church was decorated with arrangements of white chrysanthemum this afternoon, when Rev. R. J. D. Morris heard marriage vows uniting the daughter of Mrs. James Cameron, 1024 Tillicum Road, and the late Mr. Cameron, and the son of Mr. Spasoje Konjevod of Yugoslavia, and the late Mrs. Konjevod.

Given in marriage by her cousin, Wesley M. Hall, the bride wore a floor-length A-line gown of re-embroidered lace, styled with a cathedral train. The bodice featured elbow-length sleeves. Her veil of silk illusion net misted from a circlet of orange blossoms and she carried gardenias and stephanotis in her bouquet.

A-line gowns of green peau de soie with wedding ring headpieces en tone and bouquets of white roses, were worn by matron of honor, Mrs. G. Roberts; bridesmatron, Mrs. G. Elliott, and bridesmaid, Miss Linda Stewart. Flowergirl Jeannie Keeping was in a frock of white dotted Swiss with matching wedding ring headpiece and bouquet of white and pink roses.

Best man was Harvey Keeping. Ushering the guests were Robert Williams and David Hall.

William Bell proposed the toast to his niece at the reception following in the Oak Bay Beach Hotel.

Rear-commodore and Mrs. John H. Bailey had in their party Mr. and Mrs. D. Day, Mrs. L. Whittingham and Mr. and Mrs. J. Danvers.

Couple Married 60 Years— Will Celebrate on Sunday

Sunday will be a "red letter" day for Mr. and Mrs. D. R. McDonald, 1160 Richardson Street, marking 60 years of marriage. They were wed in St. Anne's Church at Glace Bay, N.S., on Oct. 24, 1905.

To mark the anniversary, Mr. and Mrs. McDonald will be at home to their friends from 2 to 4 p.m. Here for the occasion from Glace Bay will be Mrs. McDonald's niece, Miss Eunice MacNeil, and her cousin, Miss Dollie MacPhee. Another niece of Mrs. McDonald, Mrs. Jerry Seaman, will be here from Edmonton.

Mr. and Mrs. McDonald have one son, Dr. A. J. McDonald, an army chaplain stationed at the Esquimalt Garrison.

Mr. McDonald was born in Antigonish, N.S., in 1881 and is a cousin of the late Archbishop J. H. McDonald. He first came to British Columbia in 1898, staying here three years then returning to Nova Scotia. His colorful career saw him working as a coal miner, professional boxer and deputy chief of police in Glace Bay. The McDonalds, on leaving Glace Bay, lived in Buffalo, N.Y., and Hamilton, Ont., before coming to Victoria in 1941.

Mrs. McDonald, the former Mary Anne MacNeil, was born in Glace Bay in 1888.

Salvation Army

Church choirs, big and small, have often been called the backbone of the nation's music. They raise the morale of the service, keep up the tempo of the singing—and sometimes perform in hospitals and institutions between times. Every Saturday, the Times will feature one of the Victoria choirs.

Famed for its bright, lyrical singing, the Songster Brigade of Victoria's Salvation Army Citadel has been an institution in this city for more than 60 years. One of its founders was Mrs. A. E. Townsend, a local newspaperwoman who joined the Salvation Army. She was followed by Tom Wood, William Hastings, George Gray and Bert Nelson, who has conducted the Songsters since 1958. Mr. Nelson also plays tuba in the Citadel Band, rated as one of the best brass ensembles on Vancouver Island.

70 Children Looking For Parents

More than 70 children, from infants to teen-agers, can be placed in foster homes in Victoria under JEFF (Joint Effort for Fostering), says Rev. J. Lewis McLean, DD, president of Greater Victoria Council of Churches.

"He is not there just to make things look pretty. He should always have a specific task to perform. His office has evolved from the lay participation in the liturgy which was a characteristic of the early church."

REV. PARSONS SAYS:

From Hunger Arise Problems of Today

An international diplomat, in much distress, walked out of a brilliant reception at the United Nations in Geneva. He went straight to the office of Dr. Paul Tournier. "I have come to see you because I am looking for life." This man had everything, everything except a sense that he was really and truly alive. Life seemed to be short-changing him. He was one with today's major problem, "Dead in trespasses and sin." Tennyson spoke the word:

'Tis life, whereof our nerves are scant,
Of life, not death, for which we pant:
More life and fuller that we want.

This dreadful death manifests itself in lostness and meaninglessness. People's inner life becomes vacant. Something is terribly missing. From this hunger arises our daily problems in terms of sex, drugs and liquor. Men would forget the yearning vacuum in their hearts

★ ★ ★

To meet this condition Christ came. He came as a specialist in life. First He was life; secondly, He imparted it as a gift. "I have come that they might have life," He said to the wistful crowd about Him.

"The water that I shall give him will be an inner spring welling up into life," He assured a much-divorced woman with a jaded existence. "This do and you shall live," were His words to a young business executive who came seeking life.

What does "my friend Jesus" do for men? Paul said He makes them "come alive." John Mackay tells how he cried out in his state of nihilism, "Lord, help me!" A terrific experience came to him in which he says he crossed into a new order of life. "I had been quickened. I was really alive." Everything was new. He had become a new man. Someone had come to his soul. It was a glorious redemptive experience.

★ ★ ★

Leslie Weatherhead says this being made alive means four things: an inward reinforcement of personality, an upsurge of power within, a transcendent happiness, a deep serenity of spirit.

Many have a religion like Martha's; they are bothered about many things. It is a series of questions, a matter of intellect. They have bogged down in arguments and discussions. Then there are the Marys. They have chosen the better part. They have come to know "my friend Jesus."

★ ★ ★

The miracle of miracles has taken place. God has raised them from the dead through Jesus Christ. They have come alive. Resurrection is present tense. Jesus Christ is not only alive and loose in the world as a tremendous power, but in them a source of a new quality of life.

Acclaimed for his rugged, down-to-earth preaching, Rev. Samuel J. Parsons, DD, has been minister of Centennial United Church, Victoria, since 1959. Before then, he was minister of Scarboro United Church, Calgary, for 17 years. Born at Launceston, Eng., Dr. Parsons studied theology at the United Church College, Winnipeg, and after ordination there he served the church in Manitoba and Alberta.

ABBE RAGPICKERS SOUND THEIR CALL

'Apostle of the Homeless' Begs

CHERBOURG (Reuters) — "Listen, ladies and gentlemen, listen: The Abbe Pierre's ragpickers are in your street, with young people from all countries."

A truck stands at the end of a windy alley in this French port. A small group of young Danes, Dutch, Italians, Swedes and Frenchmen stands beside it.

The Frenchman with a loudspeaker continues "We take anything. Old paper, rags, scrap metal, furniture, bric-a-brac . . . anything."

Up and down the street, doors and windows open one by one.

The Abbe Pierre's ragpickers spread out along the sidewalks, and the people of Cherbourg contribute, through the youth of five countries, toward the rehabilitation of France's social outcasts and new security for the hungry and homeless abroad.

The bearded, ascetic-looking Roman Catholic priest who started it all was born in 1912, the son of a rich Lyon silk merchant. He has combined action with idealism throughout his life.

During the Second World War, Abbe Pierre worked for the French resistance. He also has been a member of parliament and a leader of the World Citizenship Movement — and a "saint" to the beggars, tramps and derelicts of France.

As helper of the needy, the Abbe has suffered attacks and criticism.

But to the thousands of French men, women and children who have been housed, clothed and fed by his activities, he remains "the apostle of the homeless."

It was in the early 1950s that Abbe Pierre laid the foundations of his emmaus society—"To stand between the poor, who are dumb, and the rich, who are blind."

Those who make the Abbe's bridge between privileged and underprivileged, the basis of his communities, themselves belong to neither side.

Coming from every kind of background, they are nearly all in some sense misfits — reformed alcoholics, ex-convicts vagrants, and men who found no niche in normal life after the Algerian war.

Such men join the emmaus crusade, accepting its life of almost monastic simplicity, for many reasons.

They find in the 15 or so communities a roof, a bed, food, and five francs (about 90 cents) a week spending money.

But, more important, while helping people with problems like their own and those in want elsewhere in the world, they rediscover self-respect and confidence. Eventually, they can return to normal life.

Quebec Justice Wins New Trial

MONTREAL (CP)—Mr. Justice Adrien Meunier of Quebec Superior Court Friday won a new trial because of an error which the Quebec Court of Appeal said was made by the judge who tried him last year.

Judge Meunier, 59, was convicted one year ago on three counts of perjury. They were connected with evidence he gave at an inquiry into a furniture fraud case before then Judge Claude Wagner, who now is Quebec's minister of justice.

FIRST SERVICE IN 700 YEARS

IZNIK, Turkey (AP) — For the first time in 700 years, Christian services have been held in the Basilica of Aya Sofya in the ancient birthplace of the Nicene Creed.

The services were suggested by the Moslem Turks, who hope that Iznik—the Nicaea of old—will be declared a place of pilgrimage by Pope Paul.

More than 200 pilgrims attended the Roman Catholic service conducted by Father Superior P. Angelo M. Beghetto of San Antonio church of Istanbul during the Iznik grape harvest festival.

It was in 325 A.D. that the Nicene Creed—a simple statement that defined the nature of Christ—was given to the world at the first ecumenical council.

Much later, in 725, the seventh ecumenical council met in the Basilica of Hagia Sophia—which means Holy Wisdom in Greek and is written Aya Sofya in Turkish.

In 1330, the Ottoman Turks captured Nicaea, whose importance was only slightly less than that of Constantinople (Istanbul) itself. The Turks turned the basilica into a mosque. In later years, it became a museum.

SCENE OF FESTIVAL

This Anatolian town, about 60 miles southeast of Istanbul, was a scene of excitement during the three-day grape festival.

Artists painted portraits and landscapes with the green and purple grapes and exhibited them under centuries-old accacia trees in the town square.

Black-turbaned men danced in the square and kissed the naked blades of bright bayonets as they leaped and pranced to the pounding of a brass drum and the bleat of an oboe.

On the final day of the festival, the music was stilled as Father Angelo, who comes from Padua, Italy, looked out into the roofless basilica at the faithful, pilgrims from Britain, Spain, Italy, France and Turkey.

He spoke of gratitude and men and women lifted their voices in song. Communion, at last, was received.

After the service, the priest shook hands with the governor, the mayor and other town dignitaries.

When the visitors left, the Turks pressed boxes of grapes on them in a show of friendship Iznik had not seen in seven centuries.

BEATLE CUT AND BARDOT!

(The London Observer)

France-Soir, the Paris evening paper, is serializing the Bible as a strip cartoon, "to make the best book in the world better known."

The captions are said to have been approved by theologians intent on keeping them faithful to the original scriptures; the artist has allowed himself a little licence. Adam has a Beatle haircut and Eve looks like Bardot.

The Bible serializes well, it's got the right element of suspense: "Today—the creation of the world. Tomorrow—the forbidden fruit."

No Objection To Ordaining Women Clerics

NEW YORK (AP)—Rt. Rev. John E. Hines, presiding bishop of the Protestant Episcopal (Anglican) Church, sees no theological objection to the ordination of women into the ministry of that denomination.

Bishop Hines was asked whether women might eventually be ordained in the church.

"That's not for me to say," he replied. "I see no theological reason why women should not be ordained. I do not rule it out, but it must be decided by the church."

It was believed the first time the bishop had spoken out publicly on the question of women being ordained in that church. He is regarded as a liberal on theological matters.

Rt. Rev. James A. Pike of California raised a stir among Episcopal Church leaders last spring when he undertook to enter Deaconess Phyllis Edwards into the deaconate ordained for men.

The matter was finally resolved by the Episcopal house of bishops, who ruled that the status of deaconess could be upgraded by calling her "Rev. Mrs."

But the bishops ruled that she could not serve communion and perform marriages.

Last month, Mrs. Edwards was invested as a minister in the church with the limited powers.

Pope Paul May Relax Fast, Abstinence Rule

VATICAN CITY (UPI)—The ecumenical council is considering a change in rigid Roman Catholic customs of fast and abstinence, including the church law which says no meat may be eaten on Friday, it was disclosed Friday.

Catholics would have to abide by rules of fast and abstinence only on certain solemn days in the church calendar, such as Good Friday and Christmas Eve, if the changes are made.

The clergy would not be affected, however.

Pope Paul Thursday consulted leading bishops in the church hierarchy on possible changes which could be enacted by the council.

The Pope also requested the ranking bishops to advise him on proposed reforms in church rules on mixed marriages and the granting of indulgences. The Pontiff is expected to issue decrees on all three matters in the near future.

The consultations were seen at the Vatican as a concrete step toward putting the "collegiality" doctrine of the ecumenical council into practice. This doctrine, put forth by the assembly at its third session last year, calls for the bishops to play a greater role with the Pope in setting church policy.

Council sources also considered the consultation a trial procedure on the Pope's part at working with an "Episcopal synod." This body, a form of senate, was established by Pope Paul at the opening of council Sept. 14. It is elective, however, and the Pope is unlikely to convoke it until after the close of the council.

'Fabulous 89th Congress' Compared to New Deal Era

WASHINGTON (AP) —The United States' "fabulous 89th Congress," as President Johnson describes it, has written an historic record in its first session.

With top - heavy Democratic majorities, it rolled out a tide of major legislation that often drew comparisons with the New Deal days of the 1930s.

Its claim to fame appears to rest on:

1. A $6,500,000,000 social security bill that sets up a broad program of health care for Americans over 65. It also raised all regular social security benefits.

2. A $1,300,000,000 education bill containing the broadest aid program for U.S. grade and high schools ever to clear Congress. Children from poor families are to benefit most.

3. A voting rights bill suspending literacy tests and permitting federal registrars in much of the South.

4. A $1,700,000 excise tax cut bill wiping out many levies that extended back to the depression, the Second World War and the Korean War.

5. An immigration bill repealing the 40-year national-origins quota system and fixing new formulas that will make it easier for southern and eastern Europeans to come to the U.S.

6. A highway beautification bill to eliminate billboards and junkyards along much of the interstate and primary road system and authorizing federal spending to improve scenery along the highways.

7. A bill creating an 11th cabinet department — housing and urban development—to tie together government programs that deal with city problems.

8. A $340,000,000 regional health centre bill designed to bring to all areas of the U.S. advances in combatting cancer, stroke, heart disease and other major ailments.

9. A $2,300,000,000 higher education bill providing direct grants to undergraduate college students for the first time, plus a wide variety of other aids to help college sand universities.

10. A $7,500,000 housing bill establishing a new program of rent subsidies to benefit low - income families and authorizing large new sums for urban renewal, public housing and other programs.

11. A $1,100,000,000 bill carrying funds for highways and other projects to aid the economically - depressed 11 - state Appalachian region.

12. A $3,300,000,000 public works and economic development bill designed to provide jobs and increased incomes in distressed areas.

13. A farm bill providing direct government payments to cotton growers, higher income for wheat farmers through increased government support and a four-year extension of all major federal farm programs.

14. A constitutional amendment submitted to the states to provide procedures to fill a vacancy in the office of vice-president and for the vice-president to serve as acting president when the president is disabled.

DEFECTIVE MALTED MILK

Three Families Report Illness

A defective shipment of Borden's malted milk has been blamed for three cases of illness in Victoria.

Director of B.C. health units, Dr. K. I. G. Benson Friday said a Ladysmith family also reported illness after using the powder.

None of the cases required hospital treatment.

The reports were made after the Borden Comany Ltd. of Toronto announced earlier this week that an unspecified number of jars of the preparation were distributed.

Western regional director of the federal food and drug branch, Larry Devlin, said in Vancouver that 14 B.C. families have suffered food poisoning and more may be threatened. A roundup of the product revealed several jars still may be on home shelves.

One person, whose address was not revealed, has required hospital treatment for the effects of the powder which can cause severe cramps, vomiting and diarrhea. Families have been stricken in Vancouver, Williams Lake and Quesnel as well as the Island points.

The Borden Company says the powder is in jars with red, white and blue labels, bearing code numbers 15147 and 15148.

Dr. Benson said many jars may have been returned direct to the company without his department being advised. He thought that about 60 jars were still unaccounted for.

LABELLING MISTAKE

Meantime, another Toronto firm, Pharmo Products Ltd., warned Friday that a labelling mistake had released a number of bottles of a form of rubbing alcohol, represented as white medicinal mineral oil. It could sicken anyone taking it internally.

The product is sold nationally in grocery stores and other outlets, but not in drug stores. It carries a "Pharmo" label.

Mother in Tears As Linda Returns

SANTA ANA, Calif. (AP)—A cold, hard bed on the ground has been replaced in the life of six-year-old Linda Lee Ridings by a mattress in a warm home.

Linda, the blonde, blue-eyed little girl who disappeared four years ago with her babysitter, was reunited Friday with her mother, Mrs. Barbara Ridings, 23.

Linda was found living with Miss Ramona Dougherty, 41, her former babysitter. Miss Dougherty was booked on suspicion of kidnapping.

Linda told officers she and Miss Dougherty had slept on the ground and in tents at migratory farm camps in the U.S. Midwest during the last four years.

Shortly before the girl's reunion with her mother at juvenile hall, Mrs. Ridings and her mother, Mrs. Barbara Papas, 50, broke into tears as custody of Linda was temporarily awarded to the mother.

Superior Court Judge Robert Gardiner directed Mrs. Ridings and her estranged husband, Hubert, 31, to appear in court Nov. 12 for a custody hearing.

LOCAL BRIEFS

Three Sooke residents Friday were reported in fair condition in Royal Jubilee Hospital following a head-on crash Thursday afternoon on the West Coast Road.

Injured in the mishap which occurred one mile west of Sooke were Mrs. Christina MacVicar, Mrs. Kate Craignic and William Torrence.

Their car, driven by Mrs. MacVicar, was in collision with a car driven east by Gerhard Walters, also of Sooke, police said.

WHOOPERS COMPLETE TRIP FROM PRAIRIES

WASHINGTON (AP)—Two adult whooping cranes were sighted Friday at the Arkansas wildlife refuge on the Texas coast of the Gulf of Mexico.

The U.S. interior department announced that the refuge reported the first contingent of the world's only flock of wild whoopers completed a 2,000-mile migration from nesting grounds on the Canadian Prairies Thursday night or Friday.

A record 42 whoopers wintered on the refuge last year, 10 of them young birds. There are also seven whoopers in captivity in the United States, six in the New Orleans Zoo and one at the Monte Vista wildlife refuge in Colorado.

Injured Man More To Blame Than Owner

A Comox man who fell down a grease pit in a service station was more to blame than the owners, it was stated in Victoria Law Courts Friday.

But Mr. Justice R. A. Wootton awarded him $2,760 in general damages, stating that the service station should have replaced a warning chain at the edge of the grease pit.

William Douglas Tang dislocated his left shoulder when he fell down the four-foot-deep grease pit at a Victoria service station formerly owned by Winston Raymond Elford and Sidney R. L. Knott.

He said he called at the service station to get some stove oil around 11:45 p.m. on Christmas Day, 1962, and followed the attendant into the service bay.

Mr. Tang said the grease pit was guarded by a chain but this was not in place when he went to fill the oil container and he fell into the pit.

Mr. Justice Wootton ruled that, while Mr. Tang was not invited to go into the servicte bay, he had a limited right to be there as a customer who wanted to see what oil he was getting.

The wonders of your world are mostly run by electricity. Automatic clothes dryers. Dishwashers. Home freezers. Power tools. Hi-fi. Work-savers and fun-makers that didn't even exist a decade or two ago. How about you? Are you enjoying the good electric life? Or are you putting off the purchase of that new appliance because of tired, outdated wiring? Modern wiring—HOUSEPOWER wiring—is the key to all these wonders. It doesn't cost the world, either. And you can budget the improvements in many ways, including the HOUSEPOWER Finance Plan. Call your electrical contractor or B.C. Hydro. Then go ahead. 9 IN MEMORIAM

DAY — "Cissie." In ever - loving memory of my darling wife, who passed away 33 years ago today.

I miss you because I loved you,
More precious than wealth untold,

Loved and respected wherever you went,

She died as she lived, everyone's friend.

We will remember thee.

—Always in our hearts and sadly missed. His loving sisters, Mae, Ethel and Isabella.

BRIDGE LESSON

By JACOBY and SON

The Italian bidding of the next to last hand of the match got them to another close game contract. We are not sure as to the exact meaning of North's three heart bid. Apparently South was sufficiently impressed by it to jump to four spades.

Opening lead—♠ J

West opened the jack of spades. South won with the king and proceeded to give the hand a most careful study. If you have already looked at all four hands you will see that four spades makes easily. South must lose a spade, a club and a diamond. Piero Forquet of Italy was not looking at all the hands and he had quite a problem.

His final solution was elegant. At trick two he led a club toward dummy. West ducked and dummy's queen held the trick. Then he took the diamond finesse. He did not expect that it would succeed and his expectations were realized. West won with the king and led a second spade. Forquet won, cashed the ace of diamonds and ruffed a diamond. He returned to his hand by ruffing a heart and led a club. West took his ace and Forquet claimed all the rest of the tricks except East's high trump.

The basis of his play was that he assumed that East would hold three spades and possibly only one club. In that case he could afford to have a club ruffed since it would be ruffed by what would otherwise have been a trump trick. The last hand of the match was a standoff and the Italians had won again.

Seattle Woman Had $27, Court Told

Dr. E. L. McNiven Thursday in magistrate's court told how he subjected a Seattle woman to a search and found bills totalling $27 on her body.

He was testifying at the preliminary hearing of Shirley Lalonde, Sidney Travers, Russell Bowcott and Steve Remington.

They are jointly charged with breaking and entering, theft and possession under $50.

The charge was laid in connection with a break-in overnight Sept. 8 at Clark and Cordick, 2503 Douglas St.

Court was told the safe on the premises was removed from an office and found lying in a storeroom. The cash box containing $170 was missing.

Vancouver analyst E. J. Fennell, testified he found insulation material similar to that in the safe on Remington's shoes.

The hearing will resume Monday.

Hearing Over Suspension Of Five Ferry Workers Set

Five B.C. Ferries crewmembers will appeal their suspension before a Civil Service Commission hearing, probably next week.

The hearing was announced after government mediator Arthur Richardson was unsuccessful in attempts to settle their dispute with the ferry authority.

Two waitresses, two seamen and a mate were suspended after they walked off the ferry Queen of Powell River at that port Oct. 17. They reported they were objecting to language used by a senior officer. Working conditions also have been protested.

Mr. Richardson said neither side was able to agree to the other's position in preliminary talks Thursday. Date for the board hearing is uncertain but Mr. Richardson said it likely would begin next week.

Will The Real Harold Winch Find Impostor?

VANCOUVER (CP) — New Democratic Party candidate Harold Winch says someone frequenting downtown night spots here is impersonating him.

Mr. Winch, MP for Vancouver East in the last Parliament, said Thursday the impersonator "knows my political record very well.

"People gather round his table and buy him drinks," Mr. Winch said.

"He's spending time in some of the downtown lounges and saying he's me, talking of 'his' campaign.

"This is pretty low and rotten. I've reported it to the police."

Mr. Winch said he learned of the deception from two friends who saw the impersonator and challenged him.

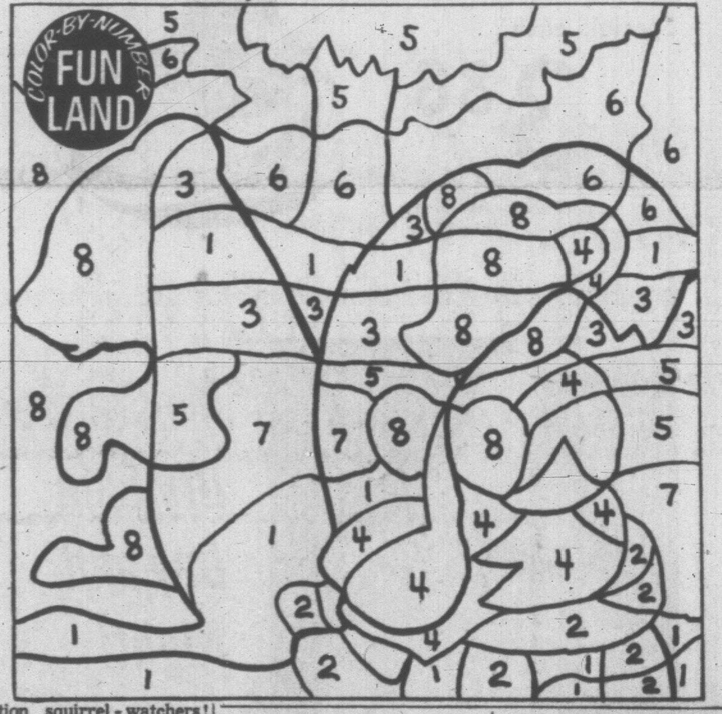
Color-By-Number Fun Poser



Attention squirrel-watchers! A fine furry specimen is outstanding in the black and white version of the scene above. But look fast friends, for once the diagram is caressed with color, this bushy-tailed fellow will disappear. What will the finished picture show? To find out, simply apply colored pencils or crayons according to the following number indicators: 1—Yellow. 2—Red. 3—Blue. 4—Orange. 5—Green. 6—Purple. 7—Black. 8—Brown. 9—Pink. If pink is not handy, use red lightly in its place.

Afterwards, you may wish to cut up the scene into eight or 10 good-size pieces for use as a jigsaw test.

NAME THE ANIMAL?

In ancient Egypt, certain animals were considered so valuable that there were laws against exporting them, killing one was punishable by death, and men shaved off their eyebrows in mourning when one died. What animal was that?

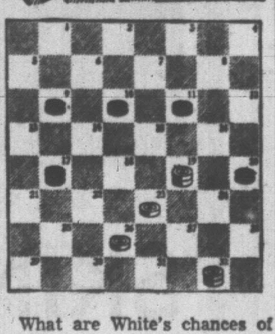
Answer: The cat.

GIVE SOMEONE THE BRUSH?

Place a coin in the palm of your outstretched hand and challenge someone to brush it off with a soft (hair) clothes brush. It's almost impossible to do.

Give this stunt a try at your next party.

IT'S YOUR MOVE



What are White's chances of winning this contest in three moves? You'd be sorry if you bet it could not be done. It's White's turn, moving up the board. How should he play?

Clue: White's initial move involves one of his two kings.

Long-time checker champ Millard Hopper gives his solution below, if you need it. No fair peeking.

Solution: White 19-24, Black 20-27, White 26-22, Black 17-26-19, White 32-23-16-7-14-5.

TICKETWISE?

Suppose you were trying to figure out how many rides you had left on a monthly train ticket. You had 26 rides to begin with. Tickets 8 through 26 are still unpunched. How many unpunched tickets are left —17, 18, 19?

No fair counting on fingers.

Answer: 19.

THERE'S A STRING ATTACHED

After you've been snagged by this yourself, try it on a friend: Cotton thread on an inch spool is one sixty-fourth of an inch deep. The spool is one and one-half inches wide. What is the quickest way of determining the length of the thread on the spool?

If you can't answer, guess.

Answer: Simply look at the label.

STAMP CORNER

By REG. NAIRNE

In last week's column collectors were warned that big thefts of coins and stamps were occurring across the country, and that they might easily happen here, too.

The day after the copy was sent in to the Times the press reported the loss of a coin collection worth thousands of dollars which had been stolen from a local antique shop. The coins were stolen the same day the article was written.

I am afraid that coincidence rather than telepathy on my part is responsible, for unfortunately I haven't got the slightest clue as to "who done it!"

Incidentally, it is well worth buying a good second-hand safe to house your collection. By doing this you get a 10 per cent discount off your insurance, for one thing, and safes always have a good resale value when you come to dispose of them.

* * *

Gibbon's recent Elizabethan catalogue, which has a specialized listing of all the stamps issued by the Commonwealth during the present reign is a must for anyone who goes in for these issues to any extent.

The listings for Great Britain, Australia, and New Zealand are particularly useful. But how odd to note the complete omission of any reference to the type III G overprints of Canada!

Trifling flaws and printing oddities—many of them quite unimportant — are listed and priced for countries in which most collectors take little interest.

Yet what is really a major variety in overprinting (for special new plates from a different font of type were used) is quite ignored—and this in the case of one of the world's most popular countries, philatelically speaking.

* * *

Another much less important omission is that no mention is made of the redrawn 14c of the current Dominica set.

The face of the native girl who is the subject of the design for this stamp was re-engraved, the corrected stamp appearing at the end of last February. It was noted in the Crown Agent's Bulletin at the time.

* * *

The philatelic agency at Washington, D.C., which sold around $5,000,000 worth of stamps a year to collectors, closed down on Oct. 9. From that date orders valued at less than $25 must be bought from local postoffices.

Replacing the agency is a philatelic sales unit attached to the Washington City P.O., where orders for $25 and up will be handled. This new arrangement will release 15 clerks for other work.

Volunteers Lauded For Controlling Fire

MILL BAY—An empty seaside cabin was burned near here Friday night.

RCMP Constable William Saunders said it was fortunate the whole Bamberton fishing resort wasn't destroyed.

The Shawnigan Lake officer credited local volunteer help with containing the fire.

Bamberton is outside the Mill Bay fire protection district.

Resort owner William Sim and helpers had only a garden hose and the "bucket brigade" to fight the flames.

Occupant of the cabin Burgess Buckmaster of Victoria, was away at the time.

Before leaving for Victoria earlier in the evening he lit the cabin oil stove.

Police believe a fault in the stove started the outbreak just before midnight.

No one in the resort saw or heard the fire start.

It was reported by Alec Bell, Cobble Hill, who saw the waterfront flames as he drove north on the Malahat.

Besides gutting the bedroom-kitchen unit the fire did considerable exterior damage to the cabins on either side.

Nov. 1 Deadline

DUNCAN—A Nov. 1 deadline has been given a Burnaby company to produce a firm price on building a prefab three-room school for Cowichan School Board. Chairman Joseph Frumento has told Greenall Bros. the job is urgent.

Trustees last month rejected two local bids. The lower bid of $70,000 was $20,000 higher than the board estimate.

END OF THE ROAD for Helen Alwood of Port Alberni (left) was Halifax. With Joyce Mahon, 33, of Prince George, she has just completed a 5,000-mile cross-Canada trip on horseback. The two left the west coast April 21. They plan to sell their horses and buy a car for the return trip. (CP Wirephoto.)

CREW RESCUED

CPR Ferry Rips Hole in Tug

NANAIMO—The captain and mate of the 50-ton tug H and R No. 2 had to swim for their lives Friday after colliding with the CPR ferry Princess of Vancouver.

Both men escaped with minor injuries.

After floundering in the icy water several minutes they were picked up by a lifeboat lowered from the ferry.

The collision occurred in dense fog three miles east of Nanaimo. Time was 2:30 p.m.

As the bow of the 6,000-ton ferry ripped into the side of the tiny tug, water poured into the smaller vessel's engine room.

The captain, Eldon Hayes of Port Coquitlam, jumped over the side.

Mate Ralph Conley of Richmond was asleep in his bunk at the time.

He awoke to find a gaping hole only a few feet from his head.

Without hesitating, he jumped through the hole to join Capt. Bayes in the water.

Minutes later the tug disappeared beneath the waves.

Ferry Capt. F. E. Birch told CPR officials his side of the story.

The tug, towing a log boom, showed up on the ship's radar. But the tug looked like part of the boom.

He slowed down and altered course 10 degrees.

He said the ferry whistle was blowing at the time of the crash.

The tugmen said later they could not hear the whistle because of the tug's engines.

Professional Vagrant Jailed For Four Months

A man described by Magistrate William Ostler as a professional vagrant was sent to jail Friday for four months.

Henry MacDonald, no fixed address, was convicted of begging from passers-by on Government Street Thursday afternoon.

He had three convictions in the past year for vagrancy. MacDonald asked for leniency, promising he would leave town immediately if given a chance.

Magistrate Ostler said he would only go to another city and engage in the same kind of unlawful activity.

CHEMAINUS — Although Chemainus volunteer fire department controlled the outbreak in 15 minutes, fire Friday gutted the kitchen and one bedroom of the home of Mr. and Mrs. Ronald Lindstrom.

The couple and nine-month-old daughter Laurel were out of their Henry Road house at the time.

No Pay for Pay-as-You-Say

DUNCAN — Election candidates here are going to have to pay to get their word across—and they don't all like it.

The pay-as-you-say idea has been introduced by local Jaycees who have lined up a public forum Nov. 2.

Candidates taking part will have to chip in $25 each.

One man who won't be there is Social Credit candidate Lyle Wilkinson.

Said his campaign manager Cyril Dawkin today: "I'm against this fee. If the Jaycees are going to put on a show they shouldn't expect the candidates to pay."

However, he denied it was the reason his man wouldn't be taking part.

Mr. Wilkinson has already arranged to be at a meeting on Gabriola Island the same night.

Mr. Dawkin also suggested Jaycees might have fared better if invitations had been written and not verbal.

Jaycee president David Else said the fee was to cover cost of radio coverage of the two-hour forum.

Backing him up was NDP candidate Colin Cameron who said he couldn't put on a forum to reach 23,000 people for twice the cost.

Wife Slayer Imprisoned For Life

NANAIMO—Wife slayer Bert George was sentenced to life imprisonment Friday.

The 23-year-old Quamichan Indian bowed his head as Mr. Justice Victor Dryer passed sentence.

He showed no emotion as the jury foreman announced the guilty verdict after a two-hour recess.

Although George was charged with capital murder, he was convicted on a non-capital charge.

The trial, concerning the shooting death July 17 of George's common law wife Roseanne James, 28, had been going on all week.

The slaying took place in the front seat of a police patrol car in the early hours. It followed 24 hours of drinking by George, the dead woman, and friends.

Evidence was given that George grabbed a rifle from a house on the reserve, near Duncan, ran out to the police car and shot the woman.

She was dead on arrival at hospital.

George testified that he had been drinking heavily and couldn't remember a thing about the actual shooting.

He said he got mad when he saw another man kneeling beside his wife who was lying in an armchair.

Piggy-Banks To Continue Clinking

DUNCAN — The school piggy-bank got backing from Cowichan school board this week.

The bank, run by the Credit Union, came under criticism from a parent who felt it was wrong to distribute credit union literature at school.

But trustees disagreed.

Said Wilf Peck: Credit unions do their work with the school board's blessing.

"They were given permission 10 years ago and were the only group to ask and show interest in saving the children's nickels and dimes."

Said Jack Efford: "I can see nothing wrong.

"The saving isn't compulsory and no advertising is done in actual school hours."

Board Debates Daily Taxi Bill

DUNCAN—The number of retarded children in Duncan doesn't justify a "bunny" bus to take them to Arcadian school.

The problem was debated Thursday by Cowichan school trustees when they were faced with a daily $12 bill for taking one child to school by taxi.

Secretary Geoff Dyson said it was one of the liabilities assumed by the board when it took over the previously independent Arcadian school.

At present, six Arcadian students live outside the prescribed 2.5-mile limit and the department says there must be eight before it will share in the cost of a bunny bus.

Nude David 'Obscene, Disgusting'

Shoppers are startled, mothers are shocked and it seems that the giant nude statue will have to go.

The 17-foot, six-inch plaster reproduction of Michelangelo's David was installed in suburban Pointe-Claire shopping centre near Montreal two weeks ago.

Local housewives condemned it as "obscene," "disgusting" and "morally bad" for their children.

The majority thought David would look fine in a museum. But they found the statue a shocker in a place where the week's grocery list is uppermost in the minds of most passers-by.

The statue is among three reproductions purchased in Italy by R. C. Gibson, general manager of Simpson's Ltd. He donated David to the shopping centre.

Sales tax, transportation, customs duty and installation brought the cost of the reproductions to more than $10,000.

"It now seems public opinion will force us to find a new home for the statue," George Thompson, Simpson's Montreal sales promotion manager, said sadly Friday.

Negroes Plan Marches To Protest Acquittal

Klansman Freed In Killing

PARIS (AP)—Dr. Martin Luther King announced today he is cutting short a European trip to return home Monday to organize marches in protest against the acquittal of a Ku Klux Klansman in the death of a white civil rights worker.

Collie Leroy Wilkins Jr., 21, was freed in Hayneville, Ala., Friday after being acquitted of the slaying of Mrs. Viola Liuzzo.

Dr. King called the jury verdict "one of the most dastardly crimes against justice that the South has performed to date."

In a statement, Dr. King said the acquittal of Wilkins "threatens all of the progress that we have made up to this point in the South, for if murder can go unpunished who will dare to use public accommodation or attempt to register to vote when death may well be the price of these rights.

SERIOUS CHALLENGE

"It is also a serious challenge to the non-violent movement. We have been patient. We have waited for the morning of justice to emerge. Now we have no alternative but to organize a massive direct action movement to make murder of persons in the pursuit of their constitutional rights a federal crime, tried in the federal judicial seat.

"We will organize marches on courthouses, including Lowndes County, and possibly institute economic sanctions against communities which perpetuate such mockery of justice. It is either this militant non-violent solution or risk the beginning of vigilante justice from Negroes in the South."

Alabama's Attorney-General Richmond Flowers said in Hayneville two other Ku Klux Klansmen will be tried on murder charges despite Wilkins' acquittal.

The five-day trial was Wilkins' second for the murder of the 39-year-old Detroit housewife. The first ended in a mistrial with a deadlocked jury.

A jury of 12 white men, which included four men challenged by Flowers for prejudice, reported the acquittal verdict after deliberating about one hour and 45 minutes. The defendant, a Fairfield, Ala., mechanic, smiled broadly.

The verdict was greeted with applause by a crowded courtroom in the century-old Lowndes County courthouse, built with slave labor.

The spectators included the other two Klansmen who Flowers said will be tried—Eugene Thomas, 42, and William Orville Eaton, 41, both of Bessemer, Ala.

Weather Big Question Mark Monday

SPACE PILOTS SET FOR HOOK-UP TRY

CAPE KENNEDY, Fla. (AP)—Passing every test with ease, the Gemini 6 pilots racked up still more flight rehearsals today for Monday's date with a target in space. Only the weather posed a question mark.

Weathermen now say they fear "sluggish cloud formations" over the launch area Monday, but so far they are not expected to be serious enough to bar the launching of the Gemini 6 and the target Agena.

Command pilot Walter Schirra and pilot Thomas Stafford already have logged more than 125 hours in the various simulators in the last six months—well over the 100 hours of practice flight most Gemini crews have taken into space.

But in their brief one or two-day flight, Schirra and Stafford have by far the most difficult flying job to date.

SCHIRRA
. . . command pilot

They will hunt down the target Agena rocket, match its orbit and dock with it—the first time this has been done. It is a precise and taxing chore.

U.S. Space Agency spokesmen said the crew already has more than 50 rendezvous runs in the Gemini simulator, including some in which they pretended they had lost some of their flight capability.

Already, 10,000 men, 18 ships and 40 aircraft are deployed to support the launch operation Monday.

Fuel was loaded Friday into the Atlas rocket that will launch the Agena target rocket into space at 11 a.m. EDT (8 a.m. PDT) Monday. The Gemini 6 will follow into space aboard a Titan 2 rocket at 12:41 p.m.

7,000 IN HALIFAX

Big Response For Pearson

By IAN MacDONALD
Ottawa Bureau Staff Writer

HALIFAX—Prime Minister Pearson Friday night carried a total war-on-poverty pledge to 7,000 cheering Nova Scotians at the Atlantic provinces' biggest political rally.

They applauded and roared as Pearson outlined his party's achievements and its plan for the future.

They burst into rounds of applause as he upheld his government's slashing of the unemployment rate, and its policies for higher education to meet job problems of the future.

And they clapped even louder as he asked for a majority government after Nov. 8 to put all the plans into full effect.

It was his greatest response of the campaign, and he responded to it from the moment he was led by a piper into the darkened Halifax arena with Mrs. Pearson.

He was preceded by Don Messer and his Islanders—the TV favorites who provided a toe-tapping introduction—but Pearson held the audience on his own.

He stuck to politics, but he took a few slaps at the opposition.

Pearson said the Liberal party had genuine unity, and that he wasn't surrounded by colleagues "prepared to take command when the skipper goes down with the ship."

He asked the audience if they wanted to abandon progress in return for "wasted years that ended in sordid collapse in bitterness and disunity in 1963."

"We want a majority to keep this success going," Pearson added.

He raised a laugh when he referred to a year-old statement by Tory spokesman Dalton Camp that in making a god of its leader the Tories had "made sheep of ourselves."

Opposition Leader Dieefnbaker opened his campaign in Halifax four weeks ago and drew a crowd of about 2,000.

Officials at the rink, police, and Halifax newsmen agreed that the attendance of just over 7,000 was the greatest at any political rally in the Atlantic provinces.

Liberals Mix Signals On Arson, Says Dief

By JOYCE FAIRBAIRN
Ottawa Bureau Staff Writer

PORT HOPE, Ont.—Opposition Leader John Diefenbaker suggested Friday night that the prime minister should check his sources before he says that charges of wrongdoing in high places are "only insinuations."

Diefenbaker faced his audience armed with the Toronto Globe and Mail's front page of Friday morning.

In the northwest corner there was a report of a Pearson statement saying there was "no connection" between the fraudulent bankruptcies and arsons which hold the spotlight in Quebec police investigations, Diefenbaker said.

"Then in the northeast corner of that same page there was a report of Quebec's Justice Minister Claude Wagner—that outstanding man—telling Washington that the arson and bankruptcy cases are connected," he said.

"Mr. Pearson should talk to Mr. Wagner the next time and get the information straight," said Diefenbaker. He said that the prime minister had stated at the start of the campaign that he didn't intend to discuss these issues.

"Well he did it yesterday and didn't do a very good job of it," he said.

WON'T TELL HIM

Diefenbaker added that the prime minister's comments prompted him to think of the advertisement—"Even your best friends won't tell you."

Canada's reputation abroad has been "besmirched" because of a government that hasn't acted, the Tory leader said. "They have gone over my record with triple microscopes but never can they say I didn't regard honesty as essential."

Canadian voters had one question to ask themselves on election day, he said.

"Just ask whether you condone a racketeer (Lucien Rivard) being helped by those in high authority—that's the issue that comes home to every mother in the country."

"Are you going to lay the welcome mat open to those who are

Rhodesian Veterans Protest U.K. Stand

SALISBURY (Reuters)—Some 1,200 Rhodesian ex-servicemen have sent the Queen and the British, Rhodesian and Canadian prime ministers a letter protesting Britain's attitude on Rhodesian independence, it was learned today.

C. R. Kirby, a Second World War veteran, said they also threatened to return their medals to the British government and make a bonfire of their British passports.

Meanwhile, Prime Minister Ian Smith and his cabinet had an informal meeting today in preparation for the arrival here Monday of British Prime Minister Wilson, in a bid to break the deadlock on the independence issue.

Friday night, Rhodesia sent a veiled warning to its Negro-ruled northern neighbor, Zambia, to refrain from making trouble if Rhodesia seized independence.

DIEFENBAKER REMAINS BEST-LIKED LEADER

Prairies Still Reject Liberals

By PETER REGINSTREIF

REGINA—The government is running up against a solid wall of rejection as it tries to pick up the odd Prairie seat to balance its representation in central Canada.

Aside from traditional strength, the Liberals command virtually no fresh support in Manitoba and Saskatchewan. The electorate here will have almost nothing to do with them.

And it persists in its antipathy toward the government in spite of its expectation that the Liberals will still be in office after election day.

A Regina waiter who is voting NDP shrugged: "If I made a bet, I'd bet the same one gets in and its too bad."

Just outside Saskatoon, a farmer's wife was defiant: "Maybe the Liberals will win again. But the farmers have to have something here. That's why we vote Conservative. We don't care who wins."

The Liberals receive no praise for anything—the wheat sales, the pension plan, the flag or the general prosperity. Instead, they are denounced as "caring only for themselves"—a nice way of calling them, as many respondents do, "a bunch of crooks"—and for "doing nothing."

This adamant rejection of Pearson and his government is astonishing in its intensity. The Liberals have gotten themselves into a terrible bind here and it is going to take more than an election campaign or two to get out of it.

For, on top of all this, throughout the two provinces, besides being seen as the party of the east, the Liberals, are

KEELER WED

READING, Eng. (Reuters)—Christine Keller, key figure in a sex scandal which led to the resignation of a British cabinet minister, was married Friday to an engineer, it was disclosed today.

Miss Keeler, 23, married 24-year-old James Levermore at a registrar's office here.

"I want to start a fresh life," she told reporters.

Impressive Record

'CAN'T DO PROPER JOB WITHOUT A MAJORITY'

By ROGER STONEBANKS

To acquaint voters with the men they will be voting for Nov. 8, in the national election, the Times is carrying a series of interviews and personal notes on the candidates in Victoria and the Esquimalt-Saanich ridings. One candidate will be covered each day, appearing in alphabetical order starting with Victoria riding.

The major campaign issue in the forthcoming election, "purely and simply," is the need for majority government, says the Liberal candidate in Victoria.

"We made certain promises in 1963 and two years later we have a very impressive record of achievement," says David Groos, seeking re-election to the House of Commons.

"We have a great deal of our platform to put into effect—the health plan, Canada assistance plan and plans for federal assistance to education.

★ ★ ★

"And I don't think we can do this job properly unless the government has a majority and is not in danger of falling each and every day.

"The country needs a majority government. I'd like to see a Liberal majority but any majority would be good.

"I think we are in the best position to get that majority now and that is one of the reasons why the election was called at this time."

GROOS
. . . seeks re-election

Mr. Groos, 47, said he is a candidate because the immediate job is only half done and "naturally I want to see it through."

The retired navy captain was born of English parents in Milwaukee and came to Victoria before he was two years old.

★ ★ ★

He is married and lives at 1003 Newport with his wife Phyllis and children Lora, Madeleine, Brian and Hilary.

I asked Mr. Groos why a Victoria voter should consider casting a ballot for him and the Liberals.

"For three reasons," he replied.

"First, in voting for a Liberal candidate you will be helping put a member from Victoria into the government thereby helping provide majority government. It is important the government should have in it a member from Victoria.

★ ★ ★

"Second, I hope people will vote for me because I have tried to do a job for Victoria and Victorians while I've been in Ottawa.

"I don't win every time I take up a case of a constituent in Ottawa but I have tried and I have achieved a satisfactory result in a goodly proportion of these.

"On the basis of my service to the community and local knowledge I hope that people will vote for me.

"The third reason is my experience as an MP. Only experience can show how best to tackle the various types of problems."

the party of the professionals, the businessman, the local establishment—the "haves."

Their strength is pronounced in these sectors as the line of 1963 is heard again and again: while Pearson is by no means a hero, he is the best of the lot; Diefenbaker is unacceptable as a prime minister; and the NDP is not really in the running.

Among the rest of the population, it is just the opposite. The Conservatives and the NDP are solidly entrenched with the New Democrats operating at a distinct disadvantage since the advent of Diefenbaker who, it is clear, is leaving a marvellous legacy of genuine popular support for his party.

Diefenbaker and his party, particularly in rural sectors, have now taken over the role of protest which so characterized the success of the old CCF in federal politics here. But it is not purely Diefenbakerism which is keeping voters anti-Liberal.

Now, really for the first time, they are using the word "Conservative" when answering the question: Who are you going to vote for on November 8?

Of course, New Democrats cannot stomach even the idea of crossing over to the Liberals, especially in Saskatchewan where the medicare controversy and the 1964 provincial campaign have left behind a terrible bitterness.

This support for the Conservatives in rural areas and for the NDP everywhere has a class-consciousness to it that underlines what the Liberals are confronting here.

Two examples among many:

A Saskatoon clerk: "I would never vote Liberal if they were the last party on earth. The CCF will do more for the working people. The Liberals are never for the working people. And I believe in the common people. Not everyone can be rich but everyone should have a place in society."

●

A Winnipeg South-Centre school teacher who is still undecided, tending Conservative again: "No. I couldn't vote Liberal with all the skullduggery. And I think they represent the moneyed classes a little bit more than I would like—E. P. Taylor, etcetera, etcetera."

The leadership question only reinforces such patterns. While Diefenbaker is now running behind his party, he is still by far the best-liked leader for the post of prime minister.

He is followed in public preference, and not too far back, by Douglas, whose popularity is well above that of the party he leads.

The revitalization of the NDP in both provinces is partially accounted for by this phenomenon.

Thompson, too, is well ahead of his party.

Bringing up the rear is the prime minister. Pearson's personal standing with the electorate in Manitoba and Saskatchewan has never been lower.

Finally—and this is the real pay-off for the long haul—the dominance of the Conservatives is threatening to become so established that youngsters are coming to accept the situation as commonplace.

A 20-year-old railway clerk in Saskatoon remarked: "I'm so disgusted with this country's political leaders that I feel like going into politics myself in ten years."

"For which side?" I asked.

"Conservative," he replied.

"Why?"

"Well, you know. Liberals in the East; Conservatives in the West," was his rejoinder.

What does this mean in terms of seats?

In Manitoba, the NDP holds its two traditional working-class ridings of Winnipeg North and North-Centre; The Liberals, their French-Canadian stronghold of St. Boniface and upper-middle and upper status Winnipeg South; the Conservatives, the rest of the provincial allotment of 14.

The NDP two are safe and do not figure to be added to.

If there are any Conservative losses, these are Provencher and Gordon Churchill's Winnipeg South-Centre, with the Liberals the potential gainers. Each is a particular case.

In Provencher, if Social Credit fails to nominate a candidate, Liberal Gordon Barkman could gain enough to overcome Werner Jorgenson's 1963 margin of 1,378.

In Winnipeg South-Centre, the slight Conservative loss to the NDP, which is running third, may be enough to lift the Liberals into first place as Conservative Churchill had only 1,243 votes over them last time.

●

On the other hand, the Liberals are in serious danger of losing Winnipeg South to the Conservatives who have television personality Bud Sherman in the field.

Margaret Konantz is once again beautifully organized but she has a tiny edge of just over 2,000 to fall back on and she is suffering a slight leakage of support back to the Conservatives.

As a 26-year-old 1963 Liberal now defecting to the Tories in River Heights put it: "I'm voting against the Liberal party. I think they need to be shaken up a little. I don't think the government is entirely hamstrung by not having a majority."

The Liberals should consider themselves fortunate if they hold on.

In Saskatchewan, the Conservatives won all 17 constituencies in 1963. In contrast to Manitoba there is no provincial administration to sustain them here.

If they are being threatened, it is largely by the NDP which is on the way back as Diefenbaker's popularity wanes. This is to be expected. Diefenbaker's earlier successes came largely at the expense of the old CCF.

●

Regina, Rosetown-Biggar and Yorkton are now all constituencies in which such a contest is taking place. But, in 1963, the New Democrats finished third by a whopping margin in Regina and while they are in the second slot in the other two, they have large pluralities to overcome as well.

And then there's Assiniboia, probably the lone Liberal hope in the province. NDP-Renegade Hazen Argue does not appear to be gaining any strength as his Liberal supporters still wonder about him.

Last time, traditional NDP supporters—and some members of the NDP constituency executive—voted for Conservative Lawrence Watson to be certain that Aruge was defeated.

They accomplished their purpose but dropped their party to third place in the process. This concerted action will probably not happen again.

But don't be surprised if the Conservatives maintain their hold on every one of Saskatchewan's seats. And notice: it's now Conservatives—not necessarily Diefenbaker!

CTV 'Mistaken' In Rejecting Ad'

TORONTO (CP)—Dr. Andrew Stewart, chairman of the Board of Broadcast Governors, said Friday he has told the CTV Television Network it was mistaken in rejecting a political advertisement placed by the New Democratic Party.

However, he said this was a "purely personal opinion" and conceded the network has the legal right to reject commercials not acceptable to it.

Dr. Stewart's views were made known in a statement given by him at Ottawa to the NDP—which made a public issue of the rejection Thursday—and released here by Eamon Park, the party's national president.

Mr. Park simultaneously renewed the NDP's charge that the refusal of CTV and some individual TV stations to carry the election advertisement resulted from "pressure from the advertising business."

INDICATES DISGUST

The 60-second commercial, one of a series in connection with the NDP's consumer-protection appeal, depicted a housewife and an announcer indicating disgust at failure of a household product to live up to its TV advertising. CTV said the NDP ad was misleading.

Dr. Stewart said at the request of CTV and two individual stations he monitored the commercial and found it acceptable. An NDP radio commercial monitored at the same time seemed to be unacceptable.

What happened to this commercial was not stated. Dr. Stewart said he told the network of his views Thursday, before the NDP raised an outcry but apparently after CTV had decided to ban the ad.

"I expressed the personal opinion that they would be making a mistake in withdrawing it," he said. "This was a purely personal opinion which should not influence the decision of the network."

Mr. Park said that, in view of Dr. Stewart's statement, the NDP would reopen with CTV the question of running the controversial commercial.

Douglas Escapes Hecklers

PORT COQUITLAM, B.C. (CP) — T. C. Douglas, New Democratic Party leader, emerged unscathed Friday night from his first all-party political rally of the current federal election campaign.

However, some of his opponents in his home riding of Burnaby-Coquitlam did not fare so well.

Liberal candidate Richard Hayes was heckled almost continually by many of the estimated 400 persons who half-filled a school auditorium in this rural community about 25 miles east of Vancouver.

James Kennedy, the Social Credit candidate, had the crowd in stitches throughout the early part of his speech as he joked and replied to sporadic heckling.

However, the hecklers perked up when he started to tell of Social Credit accomplishments in British Columbia and Alberta and shortcomings of the former CCF government in Saskatchewan under Mr. Douglas.

Michael Allen, the Progressive Conservative candidate, was not interrupted during his speech and was applauded politely when he finished.

Mr. Douglas drew thunderous applause as he spoke of NDP plans for medicare, free university education and welfare programs.

He was not heckled.

Creditistes 'Awakened' Parliament

ST. FELICIEN, Que. (CP) — The Creditiste party succeeded in "waking up" the last Parliament with a handful of men and looks forward to 35 to 50 seats in the Nov. 8 election, Creditiste Leader Real Caouette said Friday night.

"The old parties will run neck and neck," he told a rally of some 850 persons in this Lake St. John community of 10,000. "They will have to recognize our existence. They will both be asking us for permission to form the next government."

He reiterated his previous stand that the party wanting the support of le Ralliement des Creditistes will have to state its intention to increase family allowances and old age pensions, and to provide basic income tax exemption of $2,500 for single and $5,000 for married persons.

Mr. Caouette also repeated earlier charges that the Liberal party is financed by the underworld and that the Liberals plan to send Canadian troops to Viet Nam if they form the next government, a statement that has been denied by Prime Minister Pearson.

VANCOUVER (CP) — Mrs. Virginia Perrin, 21, was treated with anti-venom in hospital after being bitten by a two-week-old rattlesnake that escaped from a cage in a pet shop where she works.

PC Party Not Liked In Quebec—Lesage

QUEBEC (CP) — Premier Jean Lesage has officially thrown his support behind the federal Liberal party.

The head of Quebe's Liberal government said Friday at a special session of the Quebec legislature "Mr. Pearson's party in Ottawa" is "the best government and the best alternative that exists."

However, the premier said, despite his feeling on the subject, he is "not participating in the election campaign."

The provincial Liberal federation agreed last September that the organization would not provide support for the federal Liberal election campaign, although individual members were free to do so.

Earlier in the day, during second reading of a bill to amend the Quebec navigational transport law, Mr. Lesage called the Conservative party "one of the parties which is most detested in the Province of Quebec."

The Conservative premier will arrive here Oct. 28 and return to Winnipeg the following morning.

VANCOUVER (CP)—Norman David Scott, 39, a city policeman, Friday was committed to stand trial on a charge of criminal negligence in the death of 63-year-old Mrs. Elizabeth O'Brien. The woman died in hospital two days after being struck by a private car.

Former Klan Chaplain Fingers 'Nighthawk'

WOODLE

WASHINGTON (AP) — House of Representatives investigators hope two recanting Klansmen will spark a chain reaction, inspiring more Ku Klux Klansmen to doff their sheets and secrecy.

After plodding for three days through the murk of financial records and fifth-amendment pleadings, the hearings by the House committee on un-American activities struck some fire Friday.

In rapid succession on the witness stand:

1. Klansman Joseph G. DuBois of Goldsboro, N.C., resigned from the Klan on the spot, saying he put God and country over the KKK oath, and turned over his records.

2. A former Klan chaplain, Roy Woodle, dramatically pointed out a Klan "nighthawk" among the spectators and said the man had made a threat on his life.

Afterward, committee Chairman Edwin E. Willis (Dem.—La.) told reporters to expect "many other revelations."

Woodle, 41, a sometime bricklayer as well as preacher around Lexington, N.C., drew national attention a few weeks ago when he was pictured first speaking at Klan rallies and then, disillusioned, denouncing the Klan.

CALLER MAKES THREATS

Woodle said he was threatened by a telephone caller. The caller said "he had the authority to do away with me."

Woodle identified the caller as Boyd Hamby, a courtroom spectator.

The committee said Hamby was grand nighthawk of the North Carolina realm with authority over cross burnings and other things.

Called to the stand, Hamby refused to say whether he ever saw the preacher before, made the phone call or burned a cross in Woodle's yard.

Anti-Draft Activities Mount In U.S.

NEW YORK (AP)—Mounting resistance to the anti-draft movement is spreading across the United States, seemingly growing cheek by jowl with the American build-up in Viet Nam.

U.S. Attorney Edward V. Hanrahan of Chicago says he has recommended that the justice department spearhead an investigation of anti-draft activities.

Michigan's Governor George Romney said in Tokyo he believes Americans who tore up their draft cards are "reprehensible and should be punished according to the law." He said the anti-Viet Nam demonstrations were "unfortunate."

In Baltimore, a federal judge took note of the draft dissenters and sentenced a professed conscientious objector to three years in prison.

A federal court in Concord, N.H., is expected to act early next week on a request to send David J. Miller to New York to face a charge of destroying his draft card.

Miller, 22, of Syracuse, N.Y., the first person charged under the law, publicly burned what he said was his draft card at a rally in New York protesting U.S. involvement in Viet Nam

HELD IN JAIL

In Iowa City, Iowa, Stephen Smith, 20, of Marion, Iowa, was held in jail in default of $500 bond on the same charge. Smith, a sophomore at the University of Iowa, is charged with destroying his draft card before an estimated 100 persons Wednesday.

Roger Lette, 19, of Fremont, Calif., said he planned to burn his draft card at a San Jose State College rally called by the students for a Democratic Society. The society, based in Chicago, has sponsored some of the anti-draft activity.

Before a crowd at the rally he thumbed through papers from his pocket looking for his draft card. Men said to be FBI agents held a motion picture camera. Then, out of the crowd stepped Ann Morris, 23, a drama major at San Jose.

"Think what you are doing," she said. "If you must do this, if you have reasons and are sincere — go ahead. But not here, do it in private."

She put her arm around him and Lette said: "I do not choose to do it. I did not come here to be an object of ridicule, but you have made me one."

Lette and Miss Morris had not met before and went separate ways afterwards.

'Tories Sink To New Low'

ASSINIBOIA, Sask. (CP)—Opposition Leader Diefenbaker is making "unfounded accusations and absurd and shockingly irresponsible statements that are hurting Canada's reputation abroad," Trade Minister Sharp said Friday.

Mr. Sharp told 450 people at a Liberal party rally in this town 110 miles southwest of Regina that Mr. Diefenbaker and the Conservatives haven't been able to find an issue in the election campaign.

He said that as a result the Conservatives are sinking to new lows on the hustings.

World-Famed Theologian, Tillich, Dies

CHICAGO (AP)—Paul Johannes Tillich, one of the most renowned voices of contemporary theology, died in hospital Friday. He was 79.

Tillich's three-volume Systematic Theology, completed just two years ago, has been described as a major work of the 20th century. In all, Tillich wrote 15 books in English—a language he learned at age 47.

Tillich left Germany in 1933 shortly after he was dismissed as professor of philosophy at the University of Frankfort-Am-Main. An outspoken critic of Nazism, he later said:

"I had the great honor and luck to be the first non-Jewish professor dismissed from a German university."

Tillich, son of a Lutheran minister and a member of the Evangelical and Reformed Church, was an exponent of ecumenism.

Power Demand Grows

VANCOUVER (CP) — A report prepared by British Columbia Hydro predicts a greater demand for electricity than had been calculated by experts only last year.

The new report predicts a maximum electrical load by 19[illegible]-68 of 2,368,000, about 83,000 kilowatts more than Hydro had forecast.

Dr. Gordon Shrum, co-chairman of the power agency, said this will spur Hydro's work to arrange for alternate sources of power until Peace River power is available.

Hydro's total generating capacity now is about 1,894,000 kilowatts.

By 1974-75, said the report, demand should be 3,716,000 kilowatts.

HOW SAFE IS A MORTGAGE?

Whereas most investments risk a loss on the first dollar's depreciation of the value of the security, a mortgage can retain its full value IN SPITE OF A DEPRECIATION of the property secured. Therefore, the LOWER PER CENTAGE of total value represented by the mortgage, the lesser the projected risk.

But real-estate is considered so basically sound by many lending institutions that 75%, 83%, and as high as 87½% MORTGAGES are given. Their projected confidence in real-estate is further manifested by their low monthly repayment requirements allowing 15, 20, and 25 years to repay.

We in Victoria Mortgage Corporation agree. Property values have increased steadily for 30 years, and will continue to do so for another 30 years, especially in this PARADISE called BRITISH COLUMBIA, where people are coming from all over the world.

We, therefore, at times make higher percentage loans on the type of security WE PREFER. However, current mortgage investments average 35% of appraised security.

We feel fairly confident about it. Our investors seem to feel the same way.

5-Year Debentures pay 7½% — One year, 7%.

There is no equisition cost. Prospectus: 817 Fort S. — 384-7128

Arthur Mayse

Today I am going to set aside my other column notions and turn instead to a speech, by an American, which we Canadians might well ponder in these months when our neighbor's will to peace is being questioned more sharply than ever before.

The address was delivered at Johns Hopkins University a few days ago by U.S. Secretary of State Dean Rusk, who titled it, "The Unseen Search for Peace."

What this distinguished interpreter offered was a quiet reassurance that the America to which much of the world looks for help and hope, does still exist.

We'll bypass his preamble, which treats of the reasons for American military involvement in Asia. These have about them the inevitable heat of the participant. Valid they may be; but for me, the meat of Mr. Rusk's exposition lies elsewhere.

He cites the conferences, of which "on an average working day," U.S. delegates attend 15 to 20.

Here are random examples:

. . . Conference on sanitary regulations affecting international trade in livestock and meat, under auspices of the Organization for Economic Co-Operation and Development, in Paris.

. . . Preparatory meeting on the Asian Development Bank, called by the Economic Commission for Asia and the Far East, in Bangkok.

. . . Parleys on health, safety in civil aviation, world meteorological observation, use of radioisotopes in the development of natural resources.

These which I've cited merely hint at the range of these undramatic but useful efforts.

★ ★ ★

Listen now while Dean Rusk speaks of his country's foreign aid programs:

"One" of the basic policies of the United States," says he, "is assistance to the less developed countries of the free world in advancing economically, socially and politically.

"These comprise more than 80 nations, three-fourths of them new since the Second World War, and covering most of Central and South America and Africa and much of Asia, and containing nearly half of the world's population."

That the U.S. stands to reap where she sows, I concede without argument. She does; and as nations she assists begin to emerge from their early struggles, those gains will multiply.

Since ours will too, however, through a boosted world economy, I see no grounds for censure.

Canada, within her capabilities, follows a like course: there is our participation, with other Commonwealth nations, in the Colombo Plan.

★ ★ ★

Dean Rusk's America is party to 4,300 treaties and international agreements, dating back to the Treaty of Paris which established her independence in 1783.

Three-fourths of these treaties, Mr. Rusk pointed out, were signed in the last 25 years. He sees them as important in shaping "a new law of mankind."

Also—and I find the fact most heartening—this senior spokesman for the American government reaffirms his faith in the United Nations in clear and positive terms.

"We shall," he promises, "continue to support and do all we can to strengthen that organization."

He sketches a United States which believes strongly in educational exchange as a factor in the search for peace. Last year, 82,000 foreign students attended American colleges and universities. A further 9,000 came as teachers or on research projects, and a like number served as interns or residents in U.S. hospitals.

The picture keeps building . . . and I like what I see.

Not for a moment do I suggest we suspend judgment on our neighbor's ways and works, or surrender our right to criticize policies we believe to be against our mutual interest.

We should, however, keep in mind that Dean Rusk's America is not enemy, but tested friend.

PHOTOGRAPHER Bill Kleeman of New Zealand will present a slide show about his country Wednesday, Nov. 3, at Oak Bay Junior High. Mr. Kleeman's presentation at 8 p.m. will be sponsored by the Victoria Camera Club. He is a recognized authority on the hobby and has given more than 1,000 lectures.

BOUNDARY PROBE SET FOR NOV. 3

A three-man provincial commission on redistribution of B.C. electoral districts will open hearings here Wednesday, Nov. 3.

The three-man commission, headed by Dr. H. F. Angus, will hear submissions at the Law Courts, 850 Burdett, starting at 10:30 a.m.

The hearings were announced last Aug. 5 to consider changes which could reduce the number of B.C. electoral districts from 52 to 48 with a minimum population in a riding being set at 7,500—steps proposed earlier by Premier Bennett.

NOT BINDING

At the time the hearings were announced it was made clear that the provincial government would not bind itself to the findings of Mr. Angus and his two board members, chief electoral officer F. H. Hurley and his deputy K. L. Morton.

There was criticism at the same time from opposition political parties who felt a judge should head the inquiry.

The opening sessions were slated for Vancouver in September. The hearings in this area are to receive representations from the Esquimalt, Oak Bay, Saanich and Victoria ridings.

REPORTER GETS THE FACTS (FIRST HAND)

Onisht Friend, the Pubs Really Are Open

By TERRY IZZARD

Mishter Editor:

About that beer parlor story you shent me on.

Well I can now reveal that they're OPEN.

'Onisht.

At 10:30 on the dot the pearly gates folded back to the cheers of dry-tongued peasants.

Thish peasant was first in line.

Anyway, to get back to that story—the truth is there is no story.

What more can you say than: "THEY'RE OPEN."

Of course, you can say there were queues at all the liquor shtores firsht thing thish morning.

And you can say that people were waiting at the beer parlor doors before they opened.

Ash far ash I'm consherned you can say jusht what you like.

'Cause I jusht don't care.

The cool, clear liquid is washing away eight weeks' dust.

★ ★ ★

Sitting at your little desk I guesh ish hard to pitcher the scene.

But allow me to try to deshcribe to you what a glass of beer looks like.

Well to shtart with it's kind of ambler colored with a creamy froth lapping around the top.

Little beads of condensation trickle ever so shlowly down the glass with each sip.

There's something of a tongue-tingling sensation as the first drops pour over your tongue to filter slowly past the Adam's Apple and into the oesophagus.

Shomeone tells me 150,000 gallons of draught beer and 300,000 cases of bottled beer has been shipped out already.

Quite honestly I'm shatisfied with jusht a few pints.

★ ★ ★

Inshidentally, I was wondering if maybe you could cancel that interview I had for thish afternoon.

Ish not that I'm not up to it but I'd like to give thish story I'm on now full coverage.

I'm getting the facts as quickly as the water can serve them.

I've already got the "what, where, why, when."

But I'm shtill trying figure out "How?"

PS: I wanna raise.

THERE'S A BEAR in that log. But it's waiting the genius of native carvers Henry and Tony Hunt to bring it out. The big stick of cedar and another like it were lifted into Thunderbird Park here Friday to open a provincial centennial committee competition which will see chips flying across British Columbia between now and 1966. The poles will be erected then in ceremonies marking the 100th anniversary of the union of the Crown colonies of British Columbia and Vancouver Island. Each pole's design is left to the carver except that each one must include a likeness of a bear which was common to the mythology of all early B.C. tribes.

FOR TOURIST ROUTES

Totem Carvers Get Big Boost

A centennial year plan to boost Indian arts while brightening British Columbia tourist routes with brilliant new totems was unveiled today.

Deputy Provincial Secretary L. J. Wallace, chairman of the provincial centennial committee, said a competition is being held for Indian carvers.

They have been invited to undertake completion of 20 12-foot poles commemorating the mythology of their forefathers. Each pole must contain the likeness of a bear but the rest of the design is left to the carvers.

The bear, said Mr Wallace, is common to the legends of all B.C. tribes.

The carvers will be paid for the poles and there will be a $250 bonus for the finest creation.

CEREMONIES

The contest will be climaxed by traditional Indian ceremonies on a date to be set during 1966, the centenary of the union of the Crown Colonies of Vancouver Island and British Columbia.

The ceremonies will take place at separate points at the spots where the poles will be erected. These points are at major centres along the proposed tourist route between Victoria and Port Hardy (which will be linked next year by ferry to Prince Rupert) and at Tsawwasssen and Horseshoe Bay on the mainland.

Mr. Wallace said the project is mainly the work of a provincial centennial sub-committee on native Indian celebrations. The chairman is Bob Clifton of Comox. His sub-committee located the carvers and will arrange for judging.

The sub-committee also will arrange for plaques to be placed by each totem describing the legend of the pole.

"The plan was evolved with the intent of bringing out the artistry of the Indians and the continuation of this craft," Mr. Wallace stated.

Rod McInnes, director of the Indian Advisory Act, said carvers from Campbell River, Port Hardy, Prince Rupert and other mainland points are taking part in the competition as well as two carvers in Victoria.

FINE TOTEMS

The Victoria carvers, who are beginning work at Thunderbird Park almost immediately, are Henry and Tony Hunt. They plan to make five totems. They received a shipment of two huge cedar logs Friday from Sooke, a gift of MacMillan, Bloedel and Company Ltd.

The work at the park will be done in the long shed previously erected to permit full public viewing of the work.

Speakers' Corner

Don Poirier of the Socialist Party of Canada will speak on the election, Sunday at 3 p.m., at Beacon Hill's Speakers' Corner.

MURDER SUSPECT MENTALLY ILL

Murder suspect Robert MacDonald, 44, of 1036 Caledonia, is mentally ill and has been ordered detained at Essondale Hospital.

MacDonald was charged Sept. 27 with the murder of Frederick Dyer, 83, of 1213 Walnut.

MacDonald was committed to Essondale by Provincial cabinet order Friday. He is to be held there "until his complete or partial recovery is certified to the satisfaction of the lieutenant-governor or until further notice."

Second Offence Nets Jail Term

William Bernasky, 606 Francis, was sent to jail today for one month when he pleaded guilty to his second offence of impaired driving.

Bernasky was charged after his car was seen weaving at 55 m.p.h. Friday night. He stumbled and fell when he got out of the car.

Bernasky was convicted of impaired driving one year ago.

SAANICH NEEDS ALL PROJECTS, SAYS CURTIS

Taxpayers Urged to Approve Plan

Saanich Reeve Hugh Curtis today urged municipal taxpayers to give close consideration to a $2.7 million capital projects budget they will vote on in December.

"I naturally would hope for an affirmative vote," he said.

The budget was approved unanimously at a closed meeting of council Thursday, culmination of a year of special meetings to work out details.

60 PER CENT NEEDED

Sixty per cent approval of those who vote is needed for the bylaw to pass. The money would be repaid over 20 years and the work undertaken in a five-year plan.

Approval would mean a two-mill tax increase, or about $10 for a person paying gross taxes of $250 a year.

Reeve Curtis gave three reasons for the proposed expenditure, 40 per cent of it for land acquisition:

- The need exists for the projects outlined;
- Work must proceed now while land is available and before it is put to other uses, and lost;
- Future users of the facilities should share the cost with present taxpayers.

He said council and municipal staff will give as much publicity as possible to ratepayers because "it is necessary to have a fully informed electorate."

The budget has already been endorsed by the Gordon Head Community Association, which is especially interested in one of the two outdoor heated swimming pools to be built in the Kenmore-Tyndall area.

BUDGET HIGHLIGHTS

Highlights of the budget are acquisition of the McRae Estate, covering 78 acres of the Cedar Hill golf course and some surrounding area of 24 acres, and construction and reconstruction of McKenzie Avenue.

Widening McKenzie Avenue to four lanes will cost $951,000 and will lead to the vicinity of the planned Centennial stadium at University of Victoria.

Other expeditures include $215,000 for major drainage of the Bowker Creek basis north of Blair Avenue to reduce the flow and make culverting more economical.

The two outdoor heating swimming pools—one at Gordon Head and the other near the Tillicum Outdoor Theatre—will cost $300,000.

UA Passes Halfway Mark

The United Appeal campaign is over the hump!

Fund total pushed past the halfway mark at 5 p.m. Friday and stood at 50.7 per cent of the $439,210 goal at noon today.

Right now there is $223,054 in the kitty.

The residential campaign going all this week has so far pulled in $1,650.

Initial shortage of canvassers as eased and the house-to-house campaign "is beginning to come along quite a bit better," said campaign vice-chairman Mrs. J. A. McArthur, in charge of the residential drive.

But canvassers are still needed badly in several districts, she said.

The Langford district is "desperate," with Gorge, Lake Hill and James Bay also short of canvassers.

Response from other areas, especially Oak Bay, has been good.

Volunteers should call Mrs. McArthur at 384-2676.

Boy scouts, girl guides and several men's service clubs have been taking part in the residential campaign.

Community Chest members, who benefit from the appeal, have also provided people to pound pavements for the fund.

Ask The Times

Q. Is there any provision for those confined to hospitals or nursing homes to cast a ballot Nov. 8? Is there any provision for a blind voter to take with him into the voting cubicle at the polling station someone who will show him where he wants to place his cross?—H. L.

A. Yes, to both questions. Three hospitals—Royal Jubilee, St. Joseph's and Mount St. Mary's—have been designated as chronic care hospitals and ballot boxes will be taken from bed to bed.

In the case of a blind elector, he may be assisted by a friend or the poll clerk to cast his ballot after first taking the oral oath of an incapacitated elector, says Ray Bryant, returning officer for Victoria.

Anyone wishing a question answered is invited to send the problem along to the Times, addressed to "Ask the Times" Editor. Questions and answers will be published daily.

Two Accidents Send 3 People To Hospital

Two accidents in two hours in the Colwood area Friday night sent three persons to hospital with facial cuts.

Thomas Murray, 220 Zealous Cres., was treated after he drove his car into the guard rail on Belmont Rd. bridge. He was heading toward Belmont Park at the time.

In a separate accident, driver John Stark, 38, of 1219 Pandora, lost control of his rear-engined foreign-built auto and hit a rock wall on the Trans-Canada Highway near Goldstream Ave.

He and passenger Helen Thomas, 1184 View St., received facial injuries.

Someone Doesn't Like Road Signs

Colwood RCMP today were looking for a car and driver responsible for pushing over half a dozen highway speed and stop signs in the area Friday night.

There was no estimate of the damage available.

Police said they know what type of car to look for from evidence found at the vandalism scenes.

GREATER VICTORIA STUDENTS TO GET MESSAGE

Indy Racing Safer Than Riding on Highways!

By RON SUDLOW

Indianapolis driver Bob Harkey doesn't mind living dangerously.

But not when it comes to highway driving.

He knows what it's like to flip a racing machine.

He has a pretty good idea what could happen to him in a highway accident.

And next week he will be taking his message of highway safety to 10 Greater Victoria schools. His visit is sponsored by The Times and the Champion Spark Plug Co. in co-operation with Greater Victoria School Board.

Friday he flew from Victoria to Sacramento for a United States Auto Club race. The car he will drive was the first car driven by Victoria's Billy Foster when he joined the USAC championship trail last year.

While racing, Bob's had his nose broken four times, suffered several neck whiplash injuries and burns to his feet from scalding water and oil.

But racing cars are engineered to give a driver ten times the protection offered by passenger autos.

On the Memorial Day weekend in the U.S., he'd much rather be taking calculated risks whizzing around the Indianapolis Motor Speedway at 160 mph than taking his chances on the highway.

"It's much safer," says Bob.

His worst accident occurred two years ago at Ascot Speedway in Los Angeles when he flipped an Indy-type sprint car which went end-over-end once, then rolled four times.

He walked away from the mangled hulk of metal, "but I was stiff for a couple of weeks."

"It's hard to describe a crash like that. It happened so fast. I was going 110 at the time.

"Stock cars are different in a roll. You see the grandstand go by upside down. Then you see the lights. And you even get time to wonder when the thing's going to stop," said Bob.

But track racing and highway driving are different.

Drivers wear crash helmets, seat belts, shoulder harnesses and fire-proof suits.

And there are no needless frills on a race car, as in today's passenger cars.

The seat is moulded around the driver and the cockpit is protected by a roll bar or "squirrel cage."

"Driving is so easy in today's models you can get yourself in trouble. You were pretty busy working a '40 Ford up to 60 mph.

"Today the driver can let his car climb to 80 or 90 without even noticing it. And he doesn't pay so much attention to what he's doing.

"And stopping two and a half tons of iron at that speed isn't easy," said the veteran wheel jockey.

Bob began his racing career 17 years ago when he was in high school.

He took a hopped-up 1929 Ford roadster to the local track at Charlotte, N.C. and beat out a midget and a modified sportsman to win his first race and purse of $15.

"Then I had to wait two years before I won another."

His biggest payday was in the 1964 Indianapolis 500 when he collected $12,000 for an eighth-place finish.

Racing is not Bob's only interest. His main hobby is flying and sky-diving. In high school and college he fought as a middleweight, winning 57 out of 63 fights—27 by knockouts.

He is married and now makes his home in Indianapolis.

David 'Obscene, Disgusting'

Shoppers are startled, mothers are shocked and it seems that the giant nude statue will have to go.

The 17-foot, six-inch plaster reproduction of Michelangelo's David was installed in suburban Pointe-Claire shopping centre near Montreal two weeks ago.

Local housewives condemned it as "obscene," "disgusting" and "morally bad" for their children.

The majority thought David would look fine in a museum. But they found the statue a shocker in a place where the week's grocery list is uppermost in the minds of most passers-by.

The statue is among three reproductions purchased in Italy by R. C. Gibson, general manager of Simpson's Ltd. He donated David to the shopping centre.

Sales tax, transportation, customs duty and installation brought the cost of the reproductions to more than $10,000.

"It now seems public opinion will force us to find a new home for the statue," George Thompson, Simpson's Montreal sales promotion manager, said sadly Friday.

7,000 IN HALIFAX

Big Response For Pearson

By IAN MacDONALD
Ottawa Bureau Staff Writer

HALIFAX—Prime Minister Pearson Friday night carried a total war-on-poverty pledge to 7,000 cheering Nova Scotians at the Atlantic provinces' biggest political rally.

They applauded and roared as Pearson outlined his party's achievements and its plan for the future.

They burst into rounds of applause as he upheld his government's slashing of the unemployment rate, and its policies for higher education to meet job problems of the future.

And they clapped even louder as he asked for a majority government after Nov. 8 to put all the plans into full effect.

It was his greatest response of the campaign, and he responded to it from the moment he was led by a piper into the darkened Halifax arena with Mrs. Pearson.

He was preceded by Don Messer and his Islanders — the TV favorites who provided a toe-tapping introduction — but Pearson held the audience on his own.

He stuck to politics, but he took a few slaps at the opposition.

Pearson said the Liberal party had genuine unity, and that he wasn't surrounded by colleagues "prepared to take command when the skipper goes down with the ship."

He asked the audience if they wanted to abandon progress in return for "wasted years that ended in sordid collapse in bitterness and disunity in 1963."

"We want a majority to keep this success going," Pearson added.

He raised a laugh when he referred to a year-old statement by Tory spokesman Dalton Camp that in making a god of its leader the Tories had "made sheep of ourselves."

Opposition Leader Diefenbaker opened his campaign in Halifax four weeks ago and drew a crowd of about 2,000.

Officials at the rink, police, and Halifax newsmen agreed that the attendance of just over 7,000 was the greatest at any political rally in the Atlantic provinces.

Saanich Launches Suit

OSTLER FACES LEGAL ACTION

New Move In Court Dispute

Saanich is taking court action against district magistrate William Ostler seeking to have him hold court in the now-empty Saanich courtroom at Swan Lake.

A motion seeking a writ of mandamus for the magistrate to show cause why the writ should not be issued against him will be filed before a B.C. Supreme Court justice in Victoria on or after Tuesday, Nov. 2.

The application for the writ sets out three grounds for the action:

- That since Sept. 30 the magistrate has "in error" ceased to exercise the jurisdiction of magistrate at Swan Lake;
- That "in error" the magistrate has refused to direct another magistrate to hold court there;
- And that the magistrate acted under the "improper direction" of the provincial attorney-general.

Prior to Sept. 30, the central magistrate's court was held at Swan Lake. On that date, it was switched to the new courtroom at Centennial Square adjacent to the city police station.

Saanich Reeve Hugh Curtis said this afternoon the action was decided on "some little time" ago. The application for the writ was made this week.

The reeve visited deputy attorney-general Dr. Gilbert Kennedy this week to tell him of the impending action.

"There is no animosity," he emphasized.

"It is a point of law we seek clarification on. It is an area of doubt.

"There is no ill will, it is a point of law we think should be settled."

Veterans Protest U.K. Stand

SALISBURY (Reuters)—Some 1,200 Rhodesian ex-servicemen have sent the Queen and the British, Rhodesian and Canadian prime ministers a letter protesting Britain's attitude on Rhodesian independence, it was learned today.

C. R. Kirby, a Second World War veteran, said they also threatened to return their medals to the British government and make a bonfire of their British passports.

Meanwhile, Prime Minister Ian Smith and his cabinet had an informal meeting today in preparation for the arrival here Monday of British Prime Minister Wilson, in a bid to break the deadlock on the independence issue.

Weather Big Question Mark Monday

SPACE PILOTS SET FOR HOOK-UP TRY

CAPE KENNEDY, Fla. (AP)—Passing every test with ease, the Gemini 6 pilots racked up still more flight rehearsals today for Monday's date with a target in space. Only the weather posed a question mark.

Weathermen now say they fear "sluggish cloud formations" over the launch area Monday, but so far they are not expected to be serious enough to bar the launching of the Gemini 6 and the target Agena.

Command pilot Walter Schirra and pilot Thomas Stafford already have logged more than 125 hours in the various simulators in the last six months—well over the 100 hours of practice flight most Gemini crews have taken into space.

But in their brief one or two-day flight, Schirra and Stafford have by far the most difficult flying job to date.

SCHIRRA
. . . command pilot

They will hunt down the target Agena rocket, match its orbit and dock with it—the first time this has been done. It is a precise and taxing chore.

U.S. Space Agency spokesmen said the crew already has more than 50 rendezvous runs in the Gemini simulator, including some in which they pretended they had lost some of their flight capability.

Already, 10,000 men, 18 ships and 40 aircraft are deployed to support the launch operation Monday.

Fuel was loaded Friday into the Atlas rocket that will launch the Agena target rocket into space at 11 a.m. EDT (8 a.m. PDT) Monday. The Gemini 6 will follow into space aboard a Titan 2 rocket at 12:41 p.m.

KING
. . . must march

Klansman Freed In Killing

PARIS (AP)—Dr. Martin Luther King announced today he is cutting short a European trip to return home Monday to organize marches in protest against the acquittal of a Ku Klux Klansman in the death of a white civil rights worker.

Collie Leroy Wilkins Jr., 21, was freed in Hayneville, Ala., Friday after being acquitted of the slaying of Mrs. Viola Liuzzo.

Dr. King called the jury verdict "one of the most dastardly crimes against justice that the South has performed to date."

In a statement, Dr. King said the acquittal of Wilkins "threatens all of the progress that we have made up to this point in the South, for if murder can go unpunished who will dare to use public accommodation or attempt to register to vote when death may well be the price of these rights.

Liberals Mix Signals On Arson, Says Dief

By JOYCE FAIRBAIRN
Ottawa Bureau Staff Writer

PORT HOPE, Ont.—Opposition Leader John Diefenbaker suggested Friday night that the prime minister should check his sources before he says that charges of wrongdoing in high places are "only insinuations."

Diefenbaker faced his audience armed with the Toronto Globe and Mail's front page of Friday morning.

In the northwest corner there was a report of a Pearson statement saying there was "no connection" between the fraudulent bankruptcies and arsons which hold the spotlight in Quebec police investigations, Diefenbaker said.

"Then in the northeast corner of that same page there was a report of Quebec's Justice Minister Claude Wagner—that outstanding man—telling Washington that the arson and bankruptcy cases are connected," he said.

"Mr. Pearson should talk to Mr. Wagner the next time and get the information straight," said Diefenbaker. He said that the prime minister had stated at the start of the campaign that he didn't intend to discuss these issues.

"Well he did it yesterday and didn't do a very good job of it," he said.

WON'T TELL HIM

Diefenbaker added that the prime minister's comments prompted him to think of the advertisement—"Even your best friends won't tell you."

Canada's reputation abroad has been "besmirched" because of a government that hasn't acted, the Tory leader said. "They have gone over my record with triple microscopes but never can they say I didn't regard honesty as essential."

Canadian voters had one question to ask themselves on election day, he said.

"Just ask whether you condone a racketeer (Lucien Rivard) being helped by those in high authority—that's the issue that comes home to every mother in the country."

"Are you going to lay the welcome mat open to those who are

DIEFENBAKER LIKED

Prairies Still Reject Liberals

By PETER REGENSTREIF

REGINA—The government is running up against a solid wall of rejection as it tries to pick up the odd Prairie seat to balance its representation in central Canada.

Aside from traditional strength, the Liberals command virtually no fresh support in Manitoba and Saskatchewan. The electorate here will have almost nothing to do with them.

And it persists in its antipathy toward the government in spite of its expectation that the Liberals will still be in office after election day.

A Regina waiter who is voting NDP shrugged: "If I made a bet, I'd bet the same one gets in and its too bad."

Just outside Saskatoon, a farmer's wife was defiant: "Maybe the Liberals will win again. But the farmers have to have something here. That's why we vote Conservative. We don't care who wins."

The Liberals receive no praise for anything — the wheat sales, the pension plan, the flag or the general prosperity. Instead, they are denounced as "caring only for themselves"—a nice way of calling them, as many respondents do, "a bunch of crooks"—and for "doing nothing."

This adamant rejection of Pearson and his government is astonishing in its intensity. The Liberals have gotten themselves into a terrible bind here and it is going to take more than an election campaign or two to get out of it.

For, on top of all this, throughout the two provinces, besides being seen as the party of the east, the Liberals are

Impressive Record

'CAN'T DO PROPER JOB WITHOUT A MAJORITY'

By ROGER STONEBANKS

To acquaint voters with the men they will be voting for Nov. 8, in the national election, the Times is carrying a series of interviews and personal notes on the candidates in Victoria and the Esquimalt-Saanich ridings. One candidate will be covered each day, appearing in alphabetical order starting with Victoria riding.

The major campaign issue in the forthcoming election, "purely and simply," is the need for majority government, says the Liberal candidate in Victoria.

"We made certain promises in 1963 and two years later we have a very impressive record of achievement," says David Groos, seeking re-election to the House of Commons.

"We have a great deal of our platform to put into effect—the health plan, Canada assistance plan and plans for federal assistance to education.

★ ★ ★

"And I don't think we can do this job properly unless the government has a majority and is not in danger of falling each and every day.

"The country needs a majority government. I'd like to see a Liberal majority but any majority would be good.

"I think we are in the best position to get that majority now and that is one of the reasons why the election was called at this time."

GROOS
. . . seeks re-election

Mr. Groos, 47, said he is a candidate because the immediate job is only half done and "naturally I want to see it through."

The retired navy captain was born of English parents in Milwaukee and came to Victoria before he was two years old.

★ ★ ★

He is married and lives at 1003 Newport with his wife Phyllis and children Lora, Madeleine, Brian and Hilary.

I asked Mr. Groos why a Victoria voter should consider casting a ballot for him and the Liberals.

"For three reasons," he replied.

"First, in voting for a Liberal candidate you will be helping put a member from Victoria into the government thereby helping provide majority government. It is important the government should have in it a member from Victoria.

★ ★ ★

"Second, I hope people will vote for me because I have tried to do a job for Victoria and Victorians while I've been in Ottawa.

"I don't win every time I take up a case of a constituent in Ottawa but I have tried and I have achieved a satisfactory result in a goodly proportion of these.

"On the basis of my service to the community and local knowledge I hope that people will vote for me.

"The third reason is my experience as an MP. Only experience can show how best to tackle the various types of problems."

the party of the professionals, the businessman, the local establishment—the "haves."

Their strength is pronounced in these sectors as the line of 1963 is heard again and again: while Pearson is by no means a hero, he is the best of the lot; Diefenbaker is unacceptable as a prime minister; and the NDP is not really in the running.

Among the rest of the population, it is just the opposite. The Conservatives and the NDP are solidly entrenched with the New Democrats operating at a distinct disadvantage since the advent of Diefenbaker who, it is clear, is leaving a marvellous legacy of genuine popular support for his party.

Diefenbaker and his party, particularly in rural sectors, have now taken over the role of protest which so characterized the success of the old CCF in federal politics here. But it is not purely Diefenbakerism which is keeping voters anti-Liberal.

Now, really for the first time, they are using the word "Conservative" when answering the question: Who are you going to vote for on November 8?

Of course, New Democrats cannot stomach even the idea of crossing over to the Liberals, especially in Saskatchewan where the medicare controversy and the 1964 provincial campaign have left behind a terrible bitterness.

This support for the Conservatives in rural areas and for the NDP everywhere has a class-consciousness to it that underlines what the Liberals are confronting here.

Two examples among many:

A Saskatoon clerk: "I would never vote Liberal if they were the last party on earth. The CCF will do more for the working people. The Liberals are never for the working people. And I believe in the common people. Not everyone can be rich but everyone should have a place in society."

●

A Winnipeg South-Centre school teacher who is still undecided, tending Conservative again: "No. I couldn't vote Liberal with all the skullduggery. And I think they represent the moneyed classes a little bit more than I would like—E. P. Taylor, etcetera, etcetera."

The leadership question only reinforces such patterns While Diefenbaker is now running behind his party, he is still by far the best-liked leader for the post of prime minister.

He is followed in public preference, and not too far back, by Douglas, whose popularity is well above that of the party he leads.

The revitalization of the NDP in both provinces is partially accounted for by this phenomenon.

Thompson, too, is well ahead of his party.

Bringing up the rear is the prime minister. Pearson's personal standing with the electorate in Manitoba and Saskatchewan has never been lower.

Finally—and this is the real pay-off for the long haul—the dominance of the Conservatives is threatening to become so established that youngsters are coming to accept the situation as commonplace.

A 20-year-old railway clerk in Saskatoon remarked: "I'm so disgusted with this country's political leaders that I feel like going into politics myself in ten years."

"For which side?" I asked.

"Conservative," he replied.

"Why?"

"Well, you know. Liberals in the East; Conservatives in the West," was his rejoinder.

What does this mean in terms of seats?

In Manitoba, the NDP holds its two traditional working-class ridings of Winnipeg North and North-Centre; The Liberals, their French-Canadian stronghold of St. Boniface and upper-middle and upper status Winnipeg South; the Conservatives, the rest of the provincial allotment of 14.

The NDP two are safe and do not figure to be added to.

If there are any Conservative losses, these are Provencher and Gordon Churchill's Winnipeg South-Centre, with the Liberals the potential gainers. Each is a particular case.

In Provencher, if Social Credit fails to nominate a candidate, Liberal Gordon Barkman could gain enough to overcome Werner Jorgenson's 1963 margin of 1,378.

In Winnipeg South-Centre, the slight Conservative loss to the NDP, which is running third, may be enough to lift the Liberals into first place as Conservative Churchill had only 1,243 votes over them last time.

●

On the other hand, the Liberals are in serious danger of losing Winnipeg South to the Conservatives who have television personality Bud Sherman in the field.

Margaret Konantz is once again beautifully organized but she has a tiny edge of just over 2,000 to fall back on and she is suffering a slight leakage of support back to the Conservatives.

As a 26-year-old 1963 Liberal now defecting to the Tories in River Heights put it: "I'm voting against the Liberal party. I think they need to be shaken up a little. I don't think the government is entirely hamstrung by not having a majority."

The Liberals should consider themselves fortunate if they hold on.

In Saskatchewan, the Conservatives won all 17 constituencies in 1963. In contrast to Manitoba there is no provincial administration to sustain them here.

If they are being threatened, it is largely by the NDP which is on the way back as Diefenbaker's popularity wanes. This is to be expected. Diefenbaker's earlier successes came largely at the expense of the old CCF.

●

Regina, Rosetown-Biggar and Yorkton are now all constituencies in which such a contest is taking place. But, in 1963, the New Democrats finished third by a whopping margin in Regina and while they are in the second slot in the other two, they have large pluralities to overcome as well.

And then there's Assiniboia, probably the lone Liberal hope in the province. NDP-Renegade Hazen Argue does not appear to be gaining any strength as his Liberal supporters still wonder about him.

Last time, traditional NDP supporters—and some members of the NDP constituency executive—voted for Conservative Lawrence Watson to be certain that Aruge was defeated.

They accomplished their purpose but dropped their party to third place in the process. This concerted action will probably not happen again.

But don't be surprised if the Conservatives maintain their hold on every one of Saskatchewan's seats. And notice: it's now Conservatives—not necessarily Diefenbaker!

CTV 'Mistaken' In Rejecting Ad'

TORONTO (CP)—Dr. Andrew Stewart, chairman of the Board of Broadcast Governors, said Friday he has told the CTV Television Network it was mistaken in rejecting a political advertisement placed by the New Democratic Party.

However, he said this was a "purely personal opinion" and conceded the network has the legal right to reject commercials not acceptable to it.

Dr. Stewart's views were made known in a statement given by him at Ottawa to the NDP—which made a public issue of the rejection Thursday—and released here by Eamon Park, the party's national president.

Mr. Park simultaneously renewed the NDP's charge that the refusal of CTV and some individual TV stations to carry the election advertisement resulted from "pressure from the advertising business."

INDICATES DISGUST

The 60-second commercial, one of a series in connection with the NDP's consumer-protection appeal, depicted a housewife and an announcer indicating disgust at failure of a household product to live up to its TV advertising. CTV said the NDP ad was misleading.

Dr. Stewart said at the request of CTV and two individual stations he monitored the commercial and found it acceptable. An NDP radio commercial monitored at the same time seemed to be unacceptable.

What happened to this commercial was not stated. Dr. Stewart said he told the network of his views Thursday, before the NDP raised an outcry but apparently after CTV had decided to ban the ad.

"I expressed the personal opinion that they would be making a mistake in withdrawing it," he said. "This was a purely personal opinion which should not influence the decision of the network."

Mr. Park said that, in view of Dr. Stewart's statement, the NDP would reopen with CTV the question of running the controversial commercial.

Creditistes 'Awakened' Parliament

ST. FELICIEN, Que. (CP) — The Creditiste party succeeded in "waking up" the last Parliament with a handful of men and looks forward to 35 to 50 seats in the Nov. 8 election, Creditiste Leader Real Caouette said Friday night.

"The old parties will run neck and neck," he told a rally of some 850 persons in this Lake St. John community of 10,000. "They will have to recognize our existence. They will both be asking us for permission to form the next government."

He reiterated his previous stand that the party wanting the support of le Ralliement des Creditistes will have to state its intention to increase family allowances and old age pensions, and to provide basic income tax exemption of $2,500 for single and $5,000 for married persons.

Mr. Caouette also repeated earlier charges that the Liberal party is financed by the underworld and that the Liberals plan to send Canadian troops to Viet Nam if they form the next government, a statement that has been denied by Prime Minister Pearson.

Douglas Escapes Hecklers

PORT COQUITLAM, B.C. (CP) — T. C. Douglas, New Democratic Party leader, emerged unscathed Friday night from his first all-party political rally of the current federal election campaign.

However, some of his opponents in his home riding of Burnaby-Coquitlam did not fare so well.

Liberal candidate Richard Hayes was heckled almost continually by many of the estimated 400 persons who half-filled a school auditorium in this rural community about 25 miles east of Vancouver.

James Kennedy, the Social Credit candidate, had the crowd in stitches throughout the early part of his speech as he joked and replied to sporadic heckling.

However, the hecklers perked up when he started to tell of Social Credit accomplishments in British Columbia and Alberta and shortcomings of the former CCF government in Saskatchewan under Mr. Douglas.

Michael Allen, the Progressive Conservative candidate, was not interrupted during his speech and was applauded politely when he finished.

Mr. Douglas drew thunderous applause as he spoke of NDP plans for medicare, free university education and welfare programs.

He was not heckled.

Officer on Trial

VANCOUVER (CP)—Norman David Scott, 39, a city policeman, Friday was committed to stand trial on a charge of criminal negligence in the death of 63-year-old Mrs. Elizabeth O'Brien. The woman died in hospital two days after being struck by a private car.

PC Party Not Liked In Quebec—Lesage

QUEBEC (CP) — Premier Jean Lesage has officially thrown his support behind the federal Liberal party.

The head of Quebe's Liberal government said Friday at a special session of the Quebec legislature "Mr. Pearson's party in Ottawa" is "the best government and the best alternative that exists."

However, the premier said, despite his feeling on the subject, he is "not participating in the election campaign."

The provincial Liberal federation agreed last September that the organization would not provide support for the federal Liberal election campaign, although individual members were free to do so.

Earlier in the day, during second reading of a bill to amend the Quebec navigational transport law, Mr. Lesage called the Conservative party "one of the parties which is most detested in the Province of Quebec."

Former Klan Chaplain Fingers 'Nighthawk'

WOODLE

WASHINGTON (AP) — House of Representatives investigators hope two recanting Klansmen will spark a chain reaction, inspiring more Ku Klux Klansmen to doff their sheets and secrecy.

After plodding for three days through the murk of financial records and fifth - amendment pleadings, the hearings by the House committee on un-American activities struck some fire Friday.

In rapid succession on the witness stand:

1. Klansman Joseph G. DuBois of Goldsboro, N.C., resigned from the Klan on the spot, saying he put God and country over the KKK oath, and turned over his records.

2. A former Klan chaplain, Roy Woodle, dramatically pointed out a Klan "nighthawk" among the spectators and said the man had made a threat on his life.

Afterward, committee Chairman Edwin E. Willis (Dem.—La.) told reporters to expect "many other revelations."

Woodle, 41, a sometime bricklayer as well as preacher around Lexington, N.C., drew national attention a few weeks ago when he was pictured first speaking at Klan rallies and then, disillusioned, denouncing the Klan.

CALLER MAKES THREATS

Woodle said he was threatened by a telephone caller. The caller said "he had the authority to do away with me."

Woodle identified the caller as Boyd Hamby, a courtroom spectator.

The committee said Hamby was grand nighthawk of the North Carolina realm with authority over cross burnings and other things.

Called to the stand, Hamby refused to say whether he ever saw the preacher before, made the phone call or burned a cross in Woodle's yard.

World-Famed Theologian, Tillich, Dies

CHICAGO (AP)—Paul Johannes Tillich, one of the most renowned voices of contemporary theology, died in hospital Friday. He was 79.

Tillich's three-volume Systematic Theology, completed just two years ago, has been described as a major work of the 20th century. In all, Tillich wrote 15 books in English—a language he learned at age 47.

Tillich left Germany in 1933 shortly after he was dismissed as professor of philosophy at the University of Frankfort-Am-Main. An outspoken critic of Nazism, he later said:

"I had the great honor and luck to be the first non-Jewish professor dismissed from a German university."

Tillich, son of a Lutheran minister and a member of the Evangelical and Reformed Church, was an exponent of ecumenism.
